Mr. Dowd: I am not sure whether the Minister found the contribution by the hon. Member for South Hams in last night's debate quite as positive as he now claims. Still, how does he intend to implement the considerable powers given to him and, more particularly, given to his civil servants under articles 9 and 10 of the order, to ensure that full consultation with all affected by any changes occurs before decisions are taken? Furthermore, how will he ensure that the powers are not abused for purely administrative convenience?

Sir John Wheeler: The powers agreed last night will in part be exercised by senior civil servants under the general policy guidance of Ministers responsible for Northern Ireland Departments. It will be inherent in the process of discharging those powers that those with a necessary and relevant interest in any subject will be properly consulted.

Transport Links

7. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will institute a review of transport links between Northern Ireland and the rest of the United Kingdom. [26381]

Mr. Moss: In view of the continued success of commercial transport operators and the growth in traffic between Northern Ireland and Great Britain, I do not believe that there are any grounds for a review at this time. In any event, shipping and air services between Northern Ireland and Great Britain are a matter for the Department of Transport.

Mr. Foulkes: I am grateful. Will the Minister, however, confirm that the route from Cairnryan and Stranraer to Larne remains, in the thinking of the Government and of the European Union, one of the principal routes between Great Britain and the island of Ireland? In order to ensure that it does, will he say what guarantees he has obtained so that after rail privatisation the link from the west coast main line to Stranraer will continue to operate a service at least as frequent as, and preferably better than, the current one?

Mr. Moss: I am happy to confirm that the Government consider the sea link between the ports of Stranraer and Cairnryan and Northern Ireland to be vital to the economy of Northern Ireland. The steady increase in freight and passenger traffic, combined with the introduction by operators of improved vessels and infrastructure, point to the viability of these operations.

The privatisation of the rail link is a matter for the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Transport; but I understand that a minimum service requirement for the proposed line has been put out to consultation.

Mr. Beggs: Can the Minister confirm that the A8 Larne to Belfast road is part of a recognised Euro-route? Does he agree that total funding for the roads programme in Northern Ireland has been inadequate for years? Does he recognise that cancelling the proposed dualling extension for the A8 has caused considerable concern? When reviewing proposals for future road development in Northern Ireland, will he give consideration to the increased traffic that will travel the A8 owing to the new P and O fast ferry service due to come into operation in June? Will he therefore seek to reinstate the dualling extension in the Northern Ireland's roads programme?

Mr. Moss: I confirm that the A8 is indeed a trans-European network route, and that funds for road improvement are not sufficient to meet the ever-increasing demand. We have repositioned schemes in the programme this year to reflect new priorities—especially the traffic congestion on the west link in Belfast. I am happy to reiterate, however, that the Government's long-term intention remains to dual the A8, in stages spread over the six to 15-year major roads programme. That may be subject to change if traffic volumes on the A8 change significantly. In any case, investment can be considered for minor improvements to ease congestion, eliminate delays and deal with aspects of road safety.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

8. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to restructure the Royal Ulster Constabulary. [26382]

Sir John Wheeler: My right hon. and learned Friend yesterday published a White Paper detailing proposals to improve and clarify the accountability and effectiveness of the police service in Northern Ireland. Separately, the fundamental review of policing continues. Conclusions are expected in the summer.

Mr. Corbyn: Does the Minister concede that the report itself states that there are serious differences between the confidence felt in the police by the nationalist and loyalist communities in Northern Ireland? Full restructuring should take place as a matter of urgency, including an examination of recruitment methods and a change in the name of the Northern Ireland police force, which should no longer be known as the Royal Ulster Constabulary. That will inspire greater confidence in the police among the nationalist community.

Sir John Wheeler: The White Paper was about improving the tripartite structure. Some aspects of the hon. Gentleman's question relate, perhaps, to the fundamental review of policing that will take place in the summer, but there is a strong desire to see recruitment into the Royal Ulster Constabulary reflect the character of the population as a whole, and there is some sign of a welcome improvement. That is the objective of the police authority and chief constable.

Sir John Cope: Although I welcome my right hon. Friend's suggestions, having personal knowledge of the RUC, I ask him to be most cautious to do nothing that would damage the morale of the RUC, as that would be unwise and dangerous, particularly while the terrorists are fully active and armed, as they are at present. Does not the maintenance of the rule of law over many years owe much to the bravery, skill and restraint of the RUC?

Sir John Wheeler: My right hon. Friend is right to point to the fact that we do not have a ceasefire in Northern Ireland. The provisional IRA remains a serious and formidable threat, and the officers of the RUC are on the front line. We should not forget that. Nor should we forget that every test of public opinion in Northern Ireland shows that the RUC is increasingly seen as an effective police service, responding to the needs of the public, which is what it wishes to do.

Mr. Worthington: We welcome yesterday's White Paper on policing, but does it not fudge on one central issue? Will not the police authority have the independent strength that it needs only when representatives of the local authorities, professions, trade unions and industry are chosen by the bodies themselves, and when it is not a quango selected by the Secretary of State?

Sir John Wheeler: The Government are open minded about the way in which members of the police authority find their places on that body. The appointments method currently employed at least has the virtue that it enables my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State to select people from all parts of the community in Northern Ireland and to ensure that the police authority is as fairly balanced and representative as possible. For the future, however, there may be other ways of securing people to the membership of the authority which reflects some of the democratic systems in Northern Ireland, or how they might emerge. It is a matter on which the Government's mind is open.

Electricity Industry

11. Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what action he intends to take on electricity generation and distribution following the second report of the Northern Ireland Affairs Committee on electricity prices in Northern Ireland, HC 395 of Session 1994–95. [26385]

Mr. Ancram: Following their response to the Select Committee's report, the Government announced a £15 million support package to reduce the increase in Northern Ireland electricity prices in 1996-97 by 3 per cent. The Government remain committed to securing the economic and environmental benefits of energy efficiency.

Mr. Soley: Notwithstanding the fact that the Select Committee represents five different political parties in the House, the unanimous view of everybody on the Committee was that the people of Northern Ireland have had fewer advantages from privatisation than people in the rest of the United Kingdom. [HON. MEMBERS: "Ah!"] That is comparative. The Minister will accept that all the recommendations in the report were carried unanimously and that there is a strong view that not only the individual consumer but business and employment will be greatly affected by the steps that the Government take to improve the effect of privatisation in Northern Ireland, which was not as it was planned to be.

Mr. Ancram: I very much appreciate the hon. Gentleman's recognition of the advantages that have flowed from privatisation. I sometimes wish that some of his colleagues were as forthcoming in their recognition of the benefits of privatisation. Obviously, the Government wish to see those benefits and advantages increase. There is no evidence that decisions on major economic investment projects have been adversely influenced by higher electricity prices in Northern Ireland, but, in their response to the Select Committee, the Government set out the need, which they achieved this year, to keep any price increase below the rate of inflation.

Mr. Trimble: The Minister must be aware that the high cost of power is imposing a crippling burden on Northern Ireland industry, and is leading some firms to consider relocating elsewhere in the United Kingdom. The problem arises from the botched way in which privatisation was carried out: Northern Ireland was locked into high-cost contracts. Do not alternative energy supplies need to be made available speedily, and the regulator's powers enhanced, so that he can act sooner? Does that not require action, not words, from the Government?

Mr. Ancram: I am sure that the hon. Gentleman knows that steps are currently being taken—not least by Premier Energy Suppliers Ltd.—to develop downstream gas in Greater Belfast. Consultations are being offered between Premier Energy Suppliers and others to establish whether gas supplies can be taken to the north-west as well. Alternative energy sources are, in fact, being considered. The Government have made it clear that they also want to look at renewable resources. They have always taken the view that the greater the variety and choice in energy, the better it will ultimately be for consumers.

Mr. Illsley: Does the Minister accept that, even with a £15 million subsidy this year, the price increase in Northern Ireland is still 2.6 per cent.? That means that electricity prices in Northern Ireland are still 20 per cent. higher than the United Kingdom average, mainly as a result of contracts for generators which, in some instances, are in place until 2024. Until those contracts are renegotiated, there can be no progress on electricity prices. Should not the Minister take action now to restructure what is indeed a bungled privatisation?

Mr. Ancram: I reject any suggestion that it is a bungled privatisation. The generators' charges are fixed in real terms, and protect consumers against generator costs rising faster than inflation. The contracts prevent generators from increasing their charges throughout the period of those contracts. Higher generators' profits have been achieved through greater efficiency and cost savings, and not at the expense of consumers. Surely the hon. Gentleman welcomes increased efficiency in the industry, which is in the long-term interests of consumers.

Flags

12. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland on what occasions (a) the Union flag is flown over RUC stations and (b) the tricolour is flown at the Garda Siochana stations in the Republic. [26386]

Sir John Wheeler: The Union flag is flown over RUC stations on 19 prescribed occasions. I have written to the hon. Member listing those occasions. In addition, the Union flag is flown on any occasion directed by the Chief Constable, the last such occasion being 9 June 1994, at the time of the Chinook helicopter crash on the Mull of Kintyre.

I understand that the Irish national flag is flown over Gardai stations on certain national days and throughout the year over Gardai headquarters, Dublin. Otherwise, the decision to fly the flag is at the discretion of local commanders.

Mr. Arnold: Has my right hon. Friend received any request for the European Union flag to be flown over those stations?

Sir John Wheeler: I am happy to tell my hon. Friend that no such request has been received. Were such a request to be received, I would of course consider it with great care.

A-level Examinations

15. Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the performance of secondary school children in Northern Ireland in the A-level examinations. [26389]

Mr. Ancram: Northern Ireland pupils continue to maintain a high level of performance in A-level examinations, and I offer my congratulations to both pupils and teachers.

Sir Teddy Taylor: Does the Minister consider that the superb success of Northern Ireland children in GCSEs and A-levels may have been achieved for the same reason as the success in Southend-on-Sea? More than 24 per cent.

of all those children, irrespective of religion, go to grammar schools. Will the Minister bear it in mind that grammar schools give working-class children an opportunity to break through educationally, and will he tell his colleagues and the Labour party that grammar schools achieve a great deal of sound success? We should be proud of what Northern Ireland has achieved.

Mr. Ancram: As the Education Minister for Northern Ireland, I am more than happy to pay tribute to the quality of education produced by grammar schools, which contribute to the high quality of education provided there, but we must recognise that there are other reasons for that. There is a traditionally high regard for academic qualifications—particularly in higher education—in the Province, and I have found that parents place a high value on education. Parental support also plays a great part in producing the results that we are seeing.

Ulster, North Down and Ards Hospitals HSS Trust

16. Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what recent discussions he has had concerning the financial position of the Ulster, North Down and Ards Hospitals HSS trust; and if he will make a statement. [26390]

Mr. Moss: I met the trust chairman and senior officers on 21 February and took the opportunity to discuss the financial position. The trust has experienced problems in recent years regarding in-year pressures, but it is developing a recovery plan and has to date achieved all of its strategy financial obligations.

Mrs. Prentice: Is the Minister aware that the hospitals feel that they are in financial chaos? Is he further aware that those involved believe that they will no longer be able to carry out any casualty treatment and that all elective surgery is likely to be cancelled? Is it not time that the Minister worked with the hospitals to ensure that financial stability is returned? Those involved believe that this is not a temporary phenomenon and that the Government must take some responsibility.

Mr. Moss: I reiterate that I met the trust chairman and officers on 21 February. On 20 February, I announced a major investment programme at the hospital, totalling some £13.5 million. I do not consider that to be ignoring the hospitals' requirements.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Q1. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 2 May. [26405]

The Prime Minister (Mr. John Major): This morning, I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Mr. Arnold: During his busy evening, did the Prime Minister have an opportunity to watch television last night, as an interesting broadcast demonstrated conclusively that people get better value for their council tax from Conservative councils? Does he not think that people will get better value by voting Conservative today?

The Prime Minister: They can certainly see that, by voting Labour in the past, they have had to pay high council tax. Southwark, Islington, Wellingborough and probably any Labour authority one can mention has had a significantly higher council tax in the previous year, and a higher tax than a comparable Conservative authority. That is the nature of the Labour beast—vote for it, and then pay for it.

Mr. Blair: What most people recall is that they did vote for the Conservative party and they did pay for it, with 22 tax increases.

However, is the Prime Minister aware that the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food said yesterday that the cattle slaughter scheme would be fully operational today? In view of the widespread reports of confusion from all around the country today, can he give a factual account of what is happening?

The Prime Minister: Yes, I can tell the right hon. Gentleman that the information should now be available to people. My right hon. and learned Friend wrote to the National Farmers Union with details of the scheme, and information was published in the farming press last week. Guidance on the scheme was distributed on Monday evening to the abattoirs and markets that have been designated to operate it. As my right hon. and learned Friend made clear yesterday, the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food will issue detailed guidance to farmers, and that will be sent out tomorrow. In the meantime, the Intervention Board and MAFF are operating a helpline to provide information to farmers, and that will continue throughout the weekend.

Mr. Blair: Is not the difference between theory and practice the problem here? The scheme is supposed to be operational today, but does not appear to be operational in many parts of the country. In particular, people are saying, first, that there are insufficient collection centres; secondly, that there may be inadequate capacity for incinerating the carcases; and, thirdly, that many farmers appear to be in the dark both about the details of compensation and how it will operate. I know that this is difficult, but can the Prime Minister ask the Agriculture Minister to respond with even greater urgency to the situation, because at the moment the response appears pretty inept?

The Prime Minister: I have already made my own inquiries to ensure that such information as is necessary is distributed and made available to farmers speedily. The scheme is large and will involve the slaughter of 15,000 to 20,000 animals a week. The scheme has been finalised and we moved immediately to ensure that farmers had the information they needed. Most of them should have. If some have not, the matter is now being examined and investigated, and I hope that farmers will have the information speedily.

Sir Cranley Onslow: Has my right hon. Friend seen the letter about the EC ban on British beef exports which a number of my right hon. and hon. Friends sent yesterday to all the EC ambassadors in London? Will he ask the Foreign Secretary to call in those ambassadors to ensure that they report accurately to their Governments on the great damage that is being done in terms of British confidence in the European Union as a result of the way in which the EC is handling the matter?

The Prime Minister: I shall certainly draw that interesting suggestion to the attention of my right hon. and learned Friend, who is already in touch with his fellow Foreign Ministers across the European Union. I share the view expressed by my right hon. Friend. The evidence shows that British beef is safe, as both the Commission President and the Agriculture Commissioner have acknowledged. I am delighted to see this afternoon that the Wimpy chain has lifted the ban on British beef with immediate effect and I have no doubt whatever that that is the right decision.

Q2. Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 2 May. [26406]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave some moments ago.

Mrs. Prentice: Three times on Tuesday the Prime Minister failed to give a direct answer to questions about discussions he had had with the Deputy Prime Minister. I ask him now whether he has ever discussed with the Deputy Prime Minister the possibility—[Interruption.]

Madam Speaker: Order. The House must listen to the hon. Lady.

Mrs. Prentice: Has the Prime Minister ever discussed with the Deputy Prime Minister the possibility that he would stand aside and allow his deputy to take over if, by tomorrow, Conservative party fortunes have not improved?

The Prime Minister: The last Labour politician who was that smug about elections is now earning his living elsewhere in Europe.

Q3. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 2 May. [26407]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave some moments ago.

Mr. Carrington: Does my right hon. Friend agree that another vital election is about to take place—the one in Northern Ireland leading to negotiations on 10 June when the people of Northern Ireland will be able to decide their future for themselves through peaceful and democratic means? Does he agree that the time has come for the IRA to stop trying to coerce and blackmail the people of Northern Ireland and to abandon terrorism?

The Prime Minister: I agree entirely with my hon. Friend. There is no absolutely no credible reason for the IRA not to stop its violence immediately. The all-party negotiations will be serious and they will start on 10 June. Sinn Fein can play a part in them if there is an unequivocal IRA ceasefire. In that case, Sinn Fein will find itself in the same position as other political parties. As I have said many times, the choice is for the IRA to make and I hope that it will make it. It will certainly gain nothing by waiting, still less by more violence, which can only call even further into question its readiness to adopt peaceful methods. Whether there is a ceasefire or not, the talks will go ahead.

Mr. Soley: Is the Secretary of State for Scotland right to refuse to distribute European Union posters on Europe day?

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend is a very proud Scot and the flag that he wishes to see flying in Scotland is the Union flag—so do I.

Q4. Mr. Spring: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 2 May. [26408]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave some moments ago.

Mr. Spring: Is my right hon. Friend aware of the satisfaction in my constituency that unemployment has fallen to 4.5 per cent? Is he aware that there is particular satisfaction this week because Labour lost control of St. Edmundsbury borough council? Does my right hon. Friend share the view of the Labour councillor who defected to the Conservatives that, underneath a thin veneer, all those tawdry old socialist instincts of Labour remain alive and well?

The Prime Minister: Clearly, the lady concerned is a councillor with great insight. There is no doubt about what the fate is of those parts of the country that are unfortunate enough to have Labour councils: they pay higher council taxes. The 10 councils with the highest council tax are all Labour-controlled, and that is the message that every voter should remember. If voters want to pay an extra £225 a week on band D, all they have to do is to vote Labour, and it will be guaranteed.

Q5. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 2 May. [26409]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave some moments ago.

Mr. Gapes: Does the Prime Minister agree with the Chancellor of the Exchequer that economic and monetary union is no threat to the nation state?

The Prime Minister: The hon. Gentleman should look carefully at what my right hon. and learned Friend has said—he would then not misrepresent him.

Mr. Cash: Does my right hon. Friend agree that it is a misrepresentation to allege that Euro-realists urge that Britain leave the European Union? Does he agree that we have now reached a position at which we should be having a proper discussion in the intergovernmental conference on all the fundamental issues? As I said at the end of last year's leadership contest, we should be talking to one another—in Europe and in the United Kingdom—rather than at one another.

The Prime Minister: I am very much in favour of that type of dialogue. There is no doubt that it is the right position for the United Kingdom to play a leading role in the European Union, but it is equally right to say that that does not mean that we shall necessarily agree with our colleagues on many issues. We are as entitled to fight our corner and disagree as any other nation state in Europe.

I intend to stay at the centre of the European debate, assessing, on each issue, what is best for the British national interest—in precisely the same way in which other heads of Government will assess what is right for their countries—and always arguing for the sort of Europe that the Government believe is right for the whole of Europe.

Q6. Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 2 May. [26410]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave some moments ago.

Mr. Chisholm: Given the unsatisfactory replies given on bovine spongiform encephalopathy earlier to my right hon. Friend the Leader of the Opposition and to my hon. Friend the Member for Hammersmith (Mr. Soley), is it not time that we have a Government who are taken seriously in Europe? Will he condemn the infantile and counter-productive gesture politics of the Secretary of State for Scotland in refusing to allow the European flag to fly for one day next week?

The Prime Minister: I answered that question some moments ago. I do not know quite where the hon. Gentleman was then, but the answer I gave then still stands.

Mr. David Atkinson: Will my right hon. Friend accept the appreciation and thanks of my constituents because the Government went further than they were originally prepared to go on the Housing Bill, which received its Third Reading earlier this week, in giving special control provisions to local authorities to deal with the seedy bedsits and squalid landlords that were threatening our towns with decline and decay? Does he agree that those provisions will need political will and determination to be implemented effectively, and will he remind our voters of that as they go to the polls today?

Mr. Mackinlay: He is not one of us.

The Prime Minister: That is certainly true, nor, as my hon. Friend is a man of taste and discretion, would he wish to be one of them. As for the legislation that my hon. Friend mentioned, there has been a problem in recent years with many people moving, particularly to seaside towns. It is right to have taken the measures that we have. I hope that those measures will stop the abuse of the social security system and the difficulties faced recently by many seaside towns.

Q7. Mr. Beggs: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 2 May. [26411]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave some moments ago.

Mr. Beggs: Does the Prime Minister share the view of Fergus Finley, who thinks for Dick Spring, that if Sinn Fein does not attend the talks in Northern Ireland, the talks will be a waste of time? Can the Prime Minister confirm to the House that the participation of democratic parties in the forthcoming talks will have influence?

The Prime Minister: I can certainly give the hon. Gentleman that assurance. What we need to see in the forthcoming talks is the democratic parties meeting, talking and seeking to reach a position that will enable there to be agreement in Northern Ireland. I emphasise the point that it is for the democratic parties. If there is no credible, clear-cut and certain ceasefire, Sinn Fein in no sense can claim to be a democratic party and it will not be there, as other parties will.

Q10. Mr. Luff: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 2 May. [26414]

The Prime Minister: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave some moments ago.

Mr. Luff: Will my right hon. Friend seize this opportunity to remind the House once again that the superior management and policies of Conservative councils deliver better services and lower taxes for council tax payers—some £225 lower, I believe, for the average band D household?

The Prime Minister: I can certainly confirm that. One only has to see the performance of Labour councils to illustrate it. I see that the shadow Environment Secretary is not here. If he were, he could explain why bad debts cost Camden tax payers £2.95 for every dwelling every week. Perhaps Opposition Members can explain why the highest band D council tax is in Labour Liverpool and why the highest amounts of council tax are in Labour Lambeth. I could stretch the list from here until next Tuesday, so bad and so inefficient are Labour councils.

Business of the House

3.31 pm

Mrs. Ann Taylor (Dewsbury): May I ask the Leader of the House for details of future business?

The Lord President of the Council and Leader of the House of Commons (Mr. Tony Newton): The business for next week will be as follows:

MONDAY 6 MAY—The House will not be sitting.

TUESDAY 7 MAY—Second Reading of the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Bill [Lords].

Motion on the Contracting Out (Administration of Civil Service Pension Schemes) Order.

WEDNESDAY 8 MAY—Until 2 o'clock, there will be debates on the motion for the Adjournment of the House.

Opposition Day [11th allotted day]. Until about 7 o'clock, there will be a debate on the prospects for water supplies this summer, followed by a debate on the fire service. Both debates will arise on Opposition motions.

THURSDAY 9 MAY—Consideration in Committee and remaining stages of the Armed Forces Bill.

FRIDAY 10 MAY—Private Members' Bills. The provisional business for the following week will be as follows:

MONDAY 13 MAY—Opposition Day [12th allotted day]. There will be a debate on an Opposition motion in the name of the Liberal Democrats, of which the subject—understandably—has not yet been announced.

TUESDAY 14 MAY—Opposition Day [13th allotted day]. There will be a debate on an Opposition motion, the subject of which also—understandably—has not yet been announced.

Motions relating to the Education (Grants for Nursery Education) (England) Regulations and the Education (Grants for Education Support and Training: Nursery Education) (England) Regulations.

WEDNESDAY 15 MAY—Until 2 o'clock, there will be debates on the motion for the Adjournment of the House.

Debate on the common agricultural policy and other agricultural issues on a motion for the Adjournment of the House. Details of the relevant documents will be given in the Official Report.

THURSDAY 16 MAY—Until about 7 o'clock, proceedings on the Commonwealth Development Corporation Bill.

FRIDAY 17 MAY—Debate on education and training of 16 to 19-year-olds on a motion for the Adjournment of the House.

The House will also wish to know that the following European Standing Committees will meet at 10.30 am on Wednesday 8 May to consider European Community Documents as follows:

European Standing Committee A: There will be a debate on the welfare of calves.

European Standing Committee B: There will be a debate on consumer credit. Details of the relevant documents will be given in the Official Report,.

The House may also wish to know that it is proposed that on Wednesday 15 May there will be a debate on agricultural prices for 1996-97 in European Standing Committee A and a debate on fraud in European Standing Committee B.

[Wednesday 8 May:

European Standing Committee A—European Community Documents 13099/95, Welfare of Calves 4647/96. Relevant European Legislation Committee Report: HC 51-xii(1995-96)

European Standing Committee B—European Community Documents: 7774/95 and unnumbered on consumer credit. Relevant European Legislation Reports: HC 70-xxiii (1994-95, HC 70-xxv (1994-95) and HC 51-xi (1995-96)

Wednesday 15 May

European Standing Committee A—European Community Document 5215/96, Agricultural Price Proposals 1996-97. Relevant European Legislation Committee Report: HC 51-xiv (1995-96)

European Standing Committee B—European Community Document 4512/96, Detection of Fraud and Irregularities. Relevant European Legislation Committee Report: HC51-xv (1995-96)

Debate on the common agricultural policy and other agricultural issues on a motion for the Adjournment of the House. Relevant documents: Council Document 5215/96 ADD 1, Volume I of 29 February 1996; Council Document 5215/96 ADD 2, Volume II of 7 March 1996; Council Document 5215/96 ADD 3, Volume III of 18 March 1996; Explanatory Memorandum 5215/96 ADD 1 and 2, Volumes I and II of 12 March 1996; Explanatory Memorandum 5215/96 ADD 3, Volume III of 12 March 1996; the Commons Select Committee Report on Explanatory Memoranda 5215/96 ADD 1, 2 and 3, Volumes I, II and III of 27 March 1996.]

Mrs. Taylor: I thank the Leader of the House for once again giving us as much notice as possible of future business. Can he shed light on rumours that the Government intend to clear the decks of Government business by July to minimise the need for a spill-over session in October and so prepare the ground for an autumn election?

As the right hon. Gentleman has been sympathetic when I have previously requested a debate on parliamentary reform, will he assure us that even if such a debate cannot take place in the next couple of weeks, we will be able to debate that important matter before the summer recess? As he is in the process of planning the business leading up to the summer recess, will he say why we still have not had a date for the remaining stages of the Community Care (Direct Payments) Bill? Is it because the Government suffered significant defeats in Committee on the rights of disabled people? He knows that there is bound to be a suspicion that the unusual delay in returning the Bill to the House is because Government Ministers are plotting to overturn those amendments, which would mean a great deal to disabled people. It would be help everyone if we knew when the Bill was coming back.

Everyone recalls the tragedy at Dunblane. At that time, there were many calls for changes in the law on the possession of firearms. It was right not to take instant decisions at the height of the grief that everyone felt then, but we understand that the Government have now made a submission on gun control to the Cullen committee of inquiry. Would it not be right for the House to contribute to that debate, in what I hope would be a measured way, before the Government reach any final conclusions on what changes might be appropriate to gun control?

My other point is also specific and important. The Leader of the House announced that the debate on the common agricultural policy on Wednesday 15 May is to be on a motion for the Adjournment of the House. I ask him to reconsider that decision. Will he confirm that previous debates on that, the big set-piece agriculture debate of the year, have been on take note motions and therefore amendable? Why is he so adamant that this year's debate should be on the motion for the Adjournment? Of which amendments are the Government more afraid: those that might be tabled by the Opposition or those of their Back Benchers? Or are they afraid of any vote on any issue connected with Europe?

Mr. Newton: Perhaps I might take the last point first. The hon. Lady did not present a full picture of what I proposed in my statement. I proposed both scrutiny in European Standing Committee A, where complex and detailed proposals can be scrutinised extremely effectively—including by the questioning of Ministers—and at the same time I provided for the annual debate, which the House rightly expects, on agricultural matters on the Floor of the House at a time when there are many matters of great interest in agriculture which go well beyond the technicalities of the CAP. My proposals give the House the most effective form of scrutiny in detail and a full opportunity to debate matters of interest. In combination, of course, that is a greater opportunity than would be provided by either proposal on its own.

On the question of Dunblane and guns, the hon. Lady is quite right that the Government have presented, and published, their evidence to Lord Cullen's inquiry. I have no doubt that hon. Members on both sides of the House may wish to submit observations. I will certainly bear in mind the hon. Lady's request for a debate on the subject.

On the Community Care (Direct Payments) Bill, there is nothing sinister or devious about the position. My right hon. and hon. Friends obviously wish to consider carefully what happened in Committee and it would be quite wrong were they to do otherwise.

On the question of a debate on parliamentary reform, I have always said that I see some attractions in such a debate. I will continue to bear in mind the requests for a debate, but the hon. Lady will realise that there is a great deal of Government business to be carried through at present.

I agree that there are a lot of rumours about, including the suggestion that the House might rise at a very early date in July. I do not know who is putting those rumours around; I only know that it is not me and I do not wish to give any credence to them.

Finally, and as ever, I express my thanks to the hon. Lady for her thanks at the beginning of her remarks.

Mr. Edward Garnier (Harborough): Will my right hon. Friend find time soon for a short debate on planning regulations as they relate to the erection of mobile telephone masts? A number of my constituents have written to me to complain about the way in which those masts appear in beautiful parts of Leicestershire without proper scrutiny by local planning committees. This matter is one of increasing public interest and I would be grateful if my right hon. Friend could provide time for a short debate.

Mr. Newton: I am aware of concerns that have been expressed in many constituencies, including my own. I will, of course, bring my hon. and learned Friend's remarks to the attention of the Secretary of State for the Environment.

Mr. Archy Kirkwood (Roxburgh and Berwickshire): May I, too, acknowledge with thanks the announcement by the Leader of the House of the provisional business for the week starting 13 May? It is always useful to have such information. In that context, may I ask him to give special consideration through the usual channels to the date for the minority Opposition day? I have not had a chance to discuss that with colleagues or other minority parties, but the proposed date clashes with the meeting of the Scottish Grand Committee in Dundee, so that might cause some difficulties. I hope that that problem can be discussed through the usual channels.

Will the right hon. Gentleman also give us an assurance that the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food will make sure that he gives regular reports on the important subjects raised today by the Leader of the Opposition with the Prime Minister about the cattle disposal scheme? That must get started, and the sooner the better.

Mr. Newton: I assure the hon. Gentleman that my right hon. and learned Friend will continue to make reports to the House as appropriate. I cannot add to what my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister said about what is going on at this very moment to ensure the implementation of the 30-month cull scheme and to ensure that information about it is widely communicated.

On the hon. Gentleman's first point, he well knows that we always listen, even if we cannot always respond as he would like, to representations made through the usual channels. As it happens, there was one change in the business I announced, made in response to some other representation through the usual channels. We will obviously consider the hon. Gentleman's representations.

Mr. John Butcher (Coventry, South–West): May we have a debate on the system of justice in this country given the growing evidence that a proportion of High Court judges seem to have lost all touch with reality? During that debate we could refer in particular to Sir Richard Scott's cash-for-treason judgment, under which he awarded £70,000 to George Blake, who betrayed and therefore condemned to death 42 British agents. Does my right hon. Friend regret that that particular judge cannot be sentenced to two years counselling by the SAS? Failing that—

Madam Speaker: Order. Perhaps I should remind the hon. Gentleman that if he is seeking to criticise any member of the judiciary we have procedures to do that through substantive motions.

Mr. Butcher: Of course I accept your judgment, Madam Speaker. I would convert my comments into a request for such a debate to consider a Bill to allow the House to ban the prospect of treason being rewarded in that way.

Mr. Newton: In the light of your comment, Madam Speaker, I might be wise simply to take delivery of my hon. Friend's suggestion.

Mr. Dennis Skinner (Bolsover): Will the Leader of the House arrange for a statement to be made about the reduced earnings allowance? As an ex-Social Security Minister, he will know that in the late 1980s a law was passed which has enabled that reduced earnings allowance to be cut dramatically by about 75 per cent. during the past few weeks. That has affected literally thousands of people who were disabled in the mines and various other organisations throughout Britain. Is he aware that that cut has resulted in severe hardship for many of these people? Will he consider a statement on this matter so that we can look at it afresh?

Mr. Newton: The hon. Gentleman, who is an assiduous attender, was probably present last week when I made some observations on the subject and the background to it. The House settled the law in this area some considerable time ago. I shall bring the hon. Gentleman's remarks to the attention of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security.

Mr. Harry Greenway (Ealing, North): May I ask my right hon. Friend for a debate next week on cruelty to animals so that the latest RSPCA annual report can be considered? The report reveals that cruelty to horses has increased by 60 per cent. in the past 12 months and that unpleasant cruelty to dogs and to other animals is also increasing. Many hon. Members are concerned about this issue and I would be grateful if we could have an early debate on it.

Mr. Newton: I cannot promise my hon. Friend an early debate on the matter that he has raised. However, he may have noted that in my statement today I announced a debate on the welfare of calves—another point about which the hon. Gentleman is interested—in European Standing Committee A next Wednesday. I remind my hon. Friend that any hon. Member may attend and take part in the debates in those Standing Committees.

Mr. Harry Barnes (North–East Derbyshire): When in Government time will we have a debate on the pathetic state of the electoral registers in this country? Clearly, we have to act as there will be a general election at some time in the future. There are 3 million to 4 million people missing off the electoral registers, including young, poor and black people. This issue should be of great concern to any hon. Member who depends on the people themselves.

Mr. Newton: As the hon. Gentleman implied, this is a matter that he has raised on a number of occasions. I can think of nothing to say on this occasion that I have not said before.

Mr. Jacques Arnold (Gravesham): May I thank my right hon. Friend for calling the debate on education and training for young people aged between 16 and 19. It would have been more appropriate for this subject to be debated on an Opposition day because we are all aware of the intention of the Labour party to withdraw child benefit to the tune of £560 from every young person in that age range who is in education and training. That Labour party proposal will particularly hit young people from unskilled homes. Under the Labour Government, less than one fifth of those young people stayed on in education; under the Conservative Government, half of them stay on in education.

Mr. Newton: My hon. Friend is right to remind hon. Members—and the country—of the policy of the Labour party in this regard. It seemed inconceivable that the Opposition would seek to debate this important subject, so I thought that it was appropriate to do so on a Government day.

Mr. Tony Banks (Newham, North–West): May I associate myself with the request of the hon. Member for Ealing, North (Mr. Greenway) for a debate on animal welfare. Is the Leader of the House aware that yesterday 1,500 people from Compassion in World Farming were at central hall? There was considerable anger about the proposed treatment of cows as a result of BSE and the culling of large numbers of animals, including working cows, calves and even healthy beasts. This is appalling and it is being done in the name of restoring public confidence. There is not much public confidence in the Government at the moment, but surely no one would suggest that we should cull Ministers.

Mr. Newton: The hon. Gentleman's remarks are a bit over the top. The underlying objective of these policies is to preserve the livelihoods of almost 650,000 people who work in and around the industry. He should not dismiss that aim in the way that his remarks imply. Nevertheless, I respect the hon. Gentleman's concern for animal welfare and I draw his attention to the debate on the welfare of calves in European Standing Committee A next week. He can take part in those discussions if he wishes.

Mr. Peter Luff (Worcester): Given the accelerating trend among Labour and Liberal-controlled local education authorities to deny young students of dance and drama access to discretionary awards, can my right hon. Friend assure me that the terms of the debate on education and training will enable right hon. and hon. Members to refer to that important subject and enable the Government to make constructive proposals to tackle the problem? It would certainly reassure the parents whom I shall meet tomorrow night at a leading Worcestershire dance school, who face agonising choices about their young children's future.

Mr. Newton: I am sorry to hear of the circumstances in Worcester. I entirely agree with my hon. Friend about the importance of the subjects, and I think that would certainly be within the scope of the debate that I have announced because it is on a motion for the Adjournment. That illustrates the advantages of debates on the Adjournment, to provide for wide-ranging debate.

Mr. Jeremy Corbyn (Islington, North): Will the Leader of the House make time available in the very near future for an urgent debate on the treatment of asylum seekers in this country? That would allow the Minister of State, Home Office, the hon. Member for Maidstone (Miss Widdecombe), to explain at the Dispatch Box why she leaked to the newspapers last night the information that Ade Onibiyo, a young Nigerian, is due to be deported tomorrow and that she has refused to meet any Member of Parliament between now and tomorrow to discuss his safety or any removal arrangements. It would also allow her to explain the basic inhumanity of holding in custody for more than a year a young man, aged 20, who has committed no crime in this country, and who has been denied education, freedom and access to his family because of that abominable treatment by the British Government.

Mr. Newton: I would want to make sure that my hon. Friend is aware of the hon. Gentleman's remarks, although without for a minute accepting the flavour of his observations directed at her. It is well within the hon. Gentleman's knowledge that asylum matters generally are under consideration in another place at present, and that will in due course no doubt lead to further debate here.

Mr. Richard Spring (Bury St. Edmunds): I welcome the announcement by my right hon. Friend of the debate on the common agricultural policy being expanded to agricultural matters in general. Can my right hon. Friend confirm that that could include discussion, not only on BSE, but on the great prosperity currently enjoyed by the farmers of East Anglia?

Mr. Newton: The answer to that is yes. It again illustrates the advantages of providing for a debate on the Adjournment, which would enable all those issues to be embraced.

Mrs. Bridget Prentice (Lewisham, East): May I draw the attention of the Leader of the House to early-day motion 768?

[That this House is alarmed by the growth of trafficking in Khat, a drug illegal in America, Canada, Sweden, Norway and Ireland amongst others; recognises that the discrepancy in British law with that of other countries has led to the conviction and imprisonment of British subjects abroad for importation and possession of Khat; is concerned about the health problems associated with Khat, notably paranoid psychosis and hypomania and about the increasing social problems caused by this substance in some communities; and therefore calls upon Her Majesty's Government to make Khat a controlled substance under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971.]

I remind the Leader of the House that khat is legal in this country but illegal elsewhere in the world, and that a constituent of mine has now been imprisoned in Ireland as a result of carrying it. Several social and health problems are associated with it. Will he ask the appropriate Minister in the Home Office to make a statement at the Dispatch Box about the control of drugs or about the possibility of a debate on the misuse of drugs?

Mr. Newton: The hon. Lady is probably aware that the background is that the Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs, which I believe is widely respected, advised in 1988 that in the United Kingdom there was insufficient evidence of misuse to justify bringing that plant under the controls of the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971. We do, however, continue to monitor the position, and I will ensure that my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary has his attention drawn to the concerns that the hon. Lady expressed.

Mr. John Marshall (Hendon, South): When will we have the annual summer economic debate? Many of us would like to point out that unemployment in Britain is well below that in Germany, France, Spain and Italy, that industrial relations have been transformed since 1979 and that privatisation has been good for the consumer and the taxpayer, who now receives £50 million a week from those industries whereas, in 1979, he had to pay £50 million towards their losses.

Mr. Newton: In view of the quality of my hon. Friend's rhetoric, I am tempted to change the business and announce such a debate for next week. I cannot quite go that far, but I will try to satisfy the hon. Gentleman and, I hope, also to please the hon. Member for Dewsbury (Mrs. Taylor), by making a reasonably early announcement of when I expect the summer economic debate to be

Mr. John McFall (Dumbarton): May I point out the tragic suicide of a young constituent of mine, Angela Bollan, aged 19, in Cornton Vale women's prison in Stirling last Friday, in the constituency of the Secretary of State for Scotland? I point out to the Leader of the House that that is the fourth suicide of young women in that prison in the past 10 months, so this is a very serious situation. I sat with the family of young Angela in their home last Friday, and they asked me to make urgent inquiries into the position in Cornton Vale. Will the Leader of the House pass on my comments to the Secretary of State for Scotland? May we have a statement in the House on the situation in prisons and any future policies designed to avoid such tragic consequences?

Mr. Newton: The House will understand and respect the hon. Gentleman's reasons for raising the matter in the way that he has. In a similar spirit, I shall ensure that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland sees what the hon. Gentleman has said.

Mr. David Nicholson (Taunton): My right hon. Friend may have noticed that, following an agreement through the usual channels on Tuesday night, the homeless clauses of the Housing Bill were galloped through with hardly any Back-Bench contributions. Does my right hon. Friend agree that the issue of homelessness is complex and raises a number of questions that go beyond the sensible reforms in the Bill? They include the rough sleepers initiative, which is being extended from London to the provinces. May we have a debate on that complex, but important subject?

Mr. Newton: One of my predecessors, my right hon. Friend the Member for North Shropshire (Mr. Biffen), once observed that many of the questions asked during business questions were speeches that had been frustrated during the week. We have just heard a classic case and I congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) on releasing his frustration in that way.

Mr. Corbyn: On a point of order, Madam Speaker. You will have heard the answer that the Leader of the House gave to my request for a debate next week on the safety of asylum seekers. You will also have heard me tell the House that the Minister had refused to meet me or any other hon. Member to discuss the safety of Ade Onibiyo. Are there any means by which the Minister of State or any other Minister from the Home Office can be brought to the House to explain their continuing behaviour—they essentially show contempt for hon. Members who legitimately try to raise issues of concern about people who are wrongly held in custody and wrongly deported from this country, often to places of danger?

Madam Speaker: The hon. Gentleman may wish to raise that matter with his Front-Bench team and through the usual channels. On the general issue, there is a convention that hon. Members have the right to make representations to Ministers; I know that the hon. Gentleman is concerned about that and I expect that right to be recognised. Equally, Ministers are required to take decisions and it is for them to determine how to respond to hon. Members' representations. If a Minister took the view that he was prepared to take account only of representations that contained new material or new arguments, I could well understand that attitude. I make that point because I know that the hon. Gentleman is deeply concerned about such matters.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Motion made, and Question put forthwith, pursuant to Standing Order No. 101(6) (Standing Committees on Statutory Instruments, &c.),

That the draft Road Traffic Offenders (Northern Ireland) Order 1996, which was laid before this House on 1st April, be approved.—[Mr. Wood.]

EUROPEAN COMMUNITY DOCUMENTS

Motion made, and Question put forthwith, pursuant to Standing Order No. 102(9) (European Standing Committees),

Agricultural Strategies: EU and the Associated Countries

That this House takes note of European Community Document No. 12503/95, relating to a study of alternative strategies for the development of relations in the field of agriculture between the EU and the associated countries with a view to the future accession of those countries; and supports the Government's intention to press for a Common Agricultural Policy which is affordable, in which support distorts neither prices nor production and is targeted on environmental and other specific objectives, which contains fair common rules and which facilitates the accession of these countries.

Progress Towards Convergence

That this House takes note of European Community Documents Nos. 10380/95, a Commission report on Employment in Europe 1995; 11417/95, relating to the impact of currency fluctuations on the internal market; 11478/95, the Communication, The Future of Social Protection: a framework for a European debate; 11987/95, a report by the European Monetary Institute on Progress towards convergence; and 12633/95, relating to exchange rate relations between participating and non-participating countries in Stage 3 of Economic and Monetary Union; and agrees with the Government that Protocol (No. 11) annexed to the EC Treaty, which means that the United Kingdom is not committed to move to Stage 3 of Economic and Monetary Union, and can decide whether to join on the basis of the United Kingdom's national interest given the circumstances at the time, is to be welcomed.—[Mr. Wood.]

Orders of the Day

Arbitration Bill [Lords]

Order for Second Reading read.

3.57 pm

The Minister for Competition and Consumer Affairs (Mr. John M. Taylor): I beg to move, That the Bill be now read a Second time.

The Bill's purpose is to improve the law of arbitration as it applies in England, Wales and Northern Ireland. Arbitration law has evolved over three centuries, with the development of commerce and industry. We are looking to refine the system of arbitration rather than to make any radical new departures.

At first sight, the Bill may appear to be no more than lawyers' law, but the Bill's benefits, both to business and to other users of arbitration, as well as what might be called the arbitration industry, will be substantial. The Bill is founded on the proposition that arbitration is a valid—and perhaps the preferred—alternative to litigation as a system for resolving disputes that inevitably arise in business and commerce. It certainly does not need excessive controls or to be made like litigation—what are needed are provisions that are primarily enabling and facilitative.

The Bill seeks to improve the current law in two main ways—it proposes certain changes to the substance of the law and introduces major improvements in the way the law is presented. Hon. Members may find it helpful if I say a little more about each aspect.

I start from the premise that commercial disputes are bound to arise from time to time. They are an inevitable part of business life. When such disputes occur, they need to be resolved as speedily as possible and without great expense if they are not to frustrate further transactions and divert time and resources from more productive activity.

Prompt dispute resolution, therefore, should contribute to competitiveness. At the same time, business looks to a system that is fair and delivers a final result. It is the responsibility of government to provide a framework that enables the parties to a dispute to settle it in a way that meets those needs.

The parties may decide that their dispute can best be dealt with through the courts. Last June, Lord Woolf presented an interim report to the Lord Chancellor on ways of improving access to justice in the context of the civil courts. He made a number of recommendations to reduce delays in litigation and tackle the complexity and cost of using the courts. The Bill has been framed with the same concerns in mind as they relate to arbitration.

We started from the principle that, if parties choose arbitration to resolve their dispute, their decision must be respected. We propose to curtail the ability of the court to intervene in that private arbitral process except where the assistance of the court is clearly necessary to move the arbitration forward. At the same time, we must uphold the integrity of the arbitral process by allowing access to courts where there has been or is likely to be a case of manifest injustice.

The concept of an arm's length relationship with the courts is certainly not new and has been refined and developed over the year. It reinforces the finality of arbitration. The involvement of the courts slows down the process and has the inevitable result of adding to costs. Freeing the process from unwanted interference by the courts is, therefore, positively deregulatory.

To this end, we have strengthened the powers available to the arbitral tribunal. For example, unless the parties agree otherwise, the tribunal has the power to order security for costs. Under current law, that power is exercisable only by the courts. We have given primary responsibility to the parties and, in the absence of such agreement, to the tribunal to decide all procedural or evidential matters and powers exercisable by the tribunal in support of the arbitration. The court can act in support of the arbitration only where the tribunal has no power or is temporarily unable to act effectively.

Of course it is necessary to provide checks in the Bill to ensure that the tribunal acts fairly and impartially in the exercise of its powers. Principles of fairness and impartiality are included in the general principles on which the Bill is based. They appear right at the start of the text so that users are left in no doubt about their importance. The duty of the tribunal to act fairly and impartially is restated at clause 33. The Bill provides that arbitrators who fail to live up to their responsibilities can be removed from office.

Another key principle that is central to the Bill, and is mentioned in clause 1, is party autonomy. That means, with a few exceptions for reasons of public policy, that the parties in dispute can decide how the arbitration should be conducted. That gives the parties control over such issues as how many arbitrators there should be and any arrangements for discovery. In that way, the Bill gives the parties the maximum possible freedom to keep the costs of the arbitration in check.

There is also a specific provision in the Bill whereby, with the parties' agreement, the tribunal can cap the recoverable costs of the arbitration. Where the parties have not taken the opportunity to devise their own arrangements, the Bill sets out default provisions so that the arbitration can proceed without delay. I am sure that hon. Members will agree that the improvements that I have outlined so far will assist business to resolve disputes more speedily and cost effectively while not compromising fairness. As I have said, that should contribute to enhanced competitiveness as it will enable companies to settle disputes with the minimum of fuss and distraction from their main business activities.

At first sight, presentation might seem of minor importance, but I suggest that it is a key ingredient of an improved arbitration Bill. Law is not just for lawyers. If users are to be attracted to arbitration, they must be able to establish with the minimum of effort what the law entails. Those hon. Members who are familiar with the current statutes will know that that is far from easy at the moment. The fact that the law is spread over three statutes—the Arbitration Act 1950, the Arbitration Act 1975 and the Arbitration Act 1979—is not helpful, and the language used is far from accessible to the layman.

However, the problem goes deeper. The statutes do not represent a coherent picture. To a large extent, they represent legislative reaction to particular issues as they have arisen from time to time. In the new Bill, we have tried to give a comprehensive and a coherent statement of the principles and practice of arbitration in England, Wales and Northern Ireland. The Bill combines a restatement of the current statute law, modified as I outlined previously, with codification of the more important principles of arbitration law developed through the courts. The layout of the Bill follows a logical sequence and the language used is as clear and as simple as possible. The draftsman should be congratulated.

I am sure that the improved presentation will find favour with business both here and overseas. Without the Bill, there might have been a question mark over the future of the City of London as a world centre for the arbitration of international commercial disputes. When international companies are negotiating contracts and have to decide—often at the end of a long, tough session—where any disputes will be arbitrated, they need to know quickly and easily what rights and obligations they have under the arbitration law of any given country.

The business of arbitration is highly internationally mobile. A number of other jurisdictions have been trying to make their legislation more accessible, and we cannot afford to be left behind. The fact that companies choose to arbitrate in London, despite the current muddled law, is a testimony to the high regard in which the arbitral community is held. However, we cannot afford to be complacent. The Bill will do much to enhance the competitiveness of the arbitration industry.

Hon. Members have had to wait a long time for the Bill to be placed before them, but I am sure that they will agree that the wait has been worth while. My Department has been responsible for its development since 1992, but work was progressing in the private sector for some time before then. As far back as 1989, Lord Mustill, in his capacity as chairman of the Department's advisory committee on arbitration law, first recommended that our arbitration law needed a serious overhaul. The work begun by Lord Mustill was carried forward first by Lord Steyn and it then fell to the current chairman of the advisory committee, Lord Justice Saville, to complete the task.

We owe an enormous debt of gratitude to the three chairmen—particularly Lord Justice Saville—and to the members of the advisory committee who have served under them. I took over responsibility for the Bill in the final days of its preparation, but I am fully aware of the immense effort that the judge and his team have made in the past 18 months to bring the complex project to fruition.

The Bill has been warmly welcomed by the arbitration world. It was scrutinised carefully in another place by noble Lords, including several noble and learned Lords, and I am glad to say that it passed muster. We were much gratified by the support given to the Bill by the official Opposition and by the Liberal Democrat spokesman, the hon. Member for North Devon (Mr. Harvey). It gives me great pleasure to commend the Bill to the House.

4.9 pm

Mr. Ian McCartney (Makerfield): Today, I have drawn the shadow Cabinet short straw and, instead of being in my constituency on local election day, I am left here. It is a pleasure to debate with the Under-Secretary and, in the past few weeks, we have been constant companions, either on the Floor of the House or in Committee, morning, noon and night. I have enjoyed the discussions with the Under-Secretary, but I think that this one will be the most pleasurable that he has had with me for some time because of the Opposition's position on the Bill.

I said earlier that I should be in my constituency as it is local election day. My local agent has substituted me on the loudspeaker with a tape of my favourite,

[Mr. Ian McCartney]

Jimmy Krankie. Worryingly, I understand that nobody has yet been able to tell the difference. [Laughter.] That is the last of the jokes.

The Under-Secretary was right when, at the conclusion of his remarks, he said that the official Opposition and our parliamentary colleagues from the Liberal Democrats broadly welcomed the Bill in another place. Given the amount of international trade created by arbitration, and its contribution to this country's invisible earnings, we are pleased that proposals have come forward to simplify arbitration proceedings in England and Wales. We are relieved because the lack of commitment shown in the past by the Government had threatened the future of that important source of invisible earnings, of which London is an international centre. A movement to reform arbitration law has existed for 10 years yet, unbelievably, the Government still wasted time before making their proposals.

Arbitration for the resolution of commercial disputes is of vital importance. England has been the preferred forum for the settlement of disputes by arbitration in vast areas of international trade—the Under-Secretary alluded to that fact—and we were in danger of losing much of the trade to the courts of arbitration in Holland, France, Switzerland and other areas, because English law had become outdated, unnecessarily obscure and far too legalistic.

A number of eminent lawyers, headed by Lord Justice Saville, have led the battle to defend London as the arbitration centre of the world. It is just as well that we did not have to rely on the Government to undertake that task over the past decade. Conservative Back Benchers have, on occasions, ranted and raved about the powers of the European Court of Justice, yet when urgent action was needed to defend our legal system, they, until now, sat on their hands. As the Minister of State at the Home Office might say, they should be chained up for their behaviour.

The United Nations Commission on International Trade Law adopted a model law of arbitration in 1985, which was the first worldwide step towards simplification. Scotland, not for the first time, was quick off the mark and adopted the United Nations model. England and Wales declined to do so.

The departmental advisory committee of the Department of Trade and Industry, chaired by Lord Justice Mustill, as he then was, reported in 1989 on the direction that English law should take. The committee said that a new Act, consolidating the existing arbitration statutes of 1950, 1975 and 1979, but making a number of innovations, was required and that, above all else, the law should produce an easily readable and accessible Act that could be understood and operated by lay arbitrators, reducing court intervention to the minimum. That was accepted by the then Secretary of State, but in the full flood of privatisation, the Government made neither funding nor other resources available to enact the policy.

The work of the departmental advisory committee was shelved until the Bill was produced. How often have we seen such a blinkered attitude? In the absence of DTI support, in 1990 a private group of arbitrators, funded by a collection of City solicitors, briefed counsel to produce a Bill. After two versions, the Department of Trade and Industry agreed to take it over and put it in the hands of a parliamentary draftsperson. A number of drafts have been produced, but by general consensus the version before the House this afternoon fulfils the requirements of the Mustill report. It is logical, it is designed to be acted on by the layperson and most sections of the arbitration community are in favour of it.

Labour recognises that, according to the Bill, the object of arbitration is to obtain the fair resolution of disputes by impartial tribunals without unnecessary delay or expense. As the Opposition employment spokesperson, I have a great interest in the speedy resolution of disputes, especially with regard to industrial tribunals. As with the arbitration system, it is vital that industrial tribunals be streamlined and disputes be resolved as simply as possible. Labour is developing proposals to make the resolution of disputes more efficient; the courts must be used only as a last resort. This would save the taxpayer a great deal of money—by contrast with the Government's proposals. They are determined to place even heavier burdens on the industrial tribunal system.

In February this year, the House debated the Collective Redundancies and Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) (Amendment) Regulations 1995, but the Minister offered no regulations worthy of the name. He simply said that the lack of guidance could be dealt with by industrial tribunals. That was wholly at odds with the promise given to the House on 18 March 1996 by the President of the Board of Trade, who said that he would publish a Bill to streamline the industrial tribunals system. So the Minister piled on the burdens in February and his boss, the Secretary of State, promised reform in March. What, in fact, is the Government's position? Will they reform the industrial tribunal disputes system, or was the idea—like job insecurity—all in the President's mind?

The Bill states that parties should be free to agree how disputes are resolved, and the structure of the legislation follows that principle. Labour supports the fact that, when parties do not take full advantage of this freedom, the Bill lays down comprehensive fallback positions for the convenience of the parties and of arbitrators who do not wish to make their own decisions in these matters and are content to accept conveniently laid out structures.

We welcome the fact that, for the first time, arbitrators are not to be held liable for anything they do or omit to do in the discharge of their duties unless they are shown to have acted in bad faith. Similar immunity is to be given to arbitration institutions in their capacity of appointing or nominating arbitrators. Parties now have greater freedom to say how they would conduct their arbitration; what rules of evidence should apply; and what procedures should be followed—whether according to law, and if so which law, or whether on the basis of the best solution for the parties without regard to law. This last is sometimes called an equitable solution. That is the basis on which a number of consumer-type arbitrations are conducted, either by an ombudsman or in areas of activity such as the travel industry.

The court is now to be involved only when the parties ignore the arbitrator's orders, and the court must be brought in for more powerful remedies. No longer will the parties, if dissatisfied with the arbitrator's directions, go to the court to have them overridden. The court's role now is to uphold whatever the arbitrators say, as long as they have discharged their duty in good faith. Thus, after an award, which must be reasoned, the court has certain powers not dissimilar to its present ones. The court can hear a challenge from the parties on the grounds that the tribunal lacked jurisdiction, despite the arbitrator's decision, or on the grounds of serious irregularity, or on a point of law.

As I have said, Labour supports the measure, but I want to raise a number of points and I would be obliged if the Minister responded to them, if not at the end of the debate then in writing.

First, I have heard suggestions that the Act will come into force on 1 January 1997, but that there may be delay. The Lord Chancellor's Department thinks that it may take longer to prepare what it considers necessary amendments with respect to the jurisdiction of the High Court and county courts in arbitration. Can the Minister confirm the target date of 1 January 1997 for enactment? Can he confirm that all steps will be taken to ensure that there is no delay? It would indeed be regrettable if this important measure were delayed for bureaucratic reasons—especially since the Lord Chancellor's Department has been represented on the departmental advisory committee since its inception.

I understand that the Department's role was specifically to avoid delay and conduct proper liaison. That being so, it would clearly be unacceptable—a charge of incompetence could be levelled—if the Bill were delayed because of inadequacies on the part of the Lord Chancellor's Department.

Secondly, Lord Justice Saville has raised a concern about a cross-reference between clause 107(5) of the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Bill and the provisions of this Bill as applied to the scheme for adjudication. Lord Justice Saville is an eminent and experienced lawyer. In a letter to the business law unit at the Department of Trade and Industry, dated 17 April, he says:

"I am unhappy with present proposals (regarding the cross reference) which seem to muddle two quite separate concepts, namely arbitration and adjudication.

It seems to me that there are two ways in which the problems could be addressed.

Firstly, it would be possible to use the Arbitration Bill by incorporating into standard terms the agreement of the parties to operate Clause 39, giving the tribunal the power to order interim measures, which would (under sub-section (3) be subject to the final adjudication of the tribunal. If this course were adopted, then the rest of the Arbitration Bill would apply and there would be no need for any further detailed provisions.

Secondly, it seems to me that it should be possible to devise a scheme of adjudication quite separate and distinct from arbitration, where the adjudicator is empowered to make temporarily binding decisions."

"The present proposals, to my mind, are likely to cause confusion and to distract from the Arbitration Bill. It also seems they are meeting substantial opposition. The overall impression that I get from what is indeed a very cursory look at the problem is that it would be unwise to continue with the present proposals, and that it would be far better to sit down with interested parties and try to work out precisely what is wanted and how it can best be achieved."

I am sure that the Minister will agree that I could not have put it better myself. Has the Minister read that letter? If so, what was his response?

The opposition to which Lord Justice Saville refers is widely shared in the construction industry. Will the Minister take into account the views of Lord Justice Saville and consider the removal of the cross reference? If not, there is a serious risk that, in construction industry dispute resolution, the purpose and effect of the Arbitration Bill, which we all support, will be blunted.

Thirdly, I shall speak about the construction sector in relation to the measure. The Bill, especially if Lord Justice Saville's point is acted on, should lead to arbitration in construction disputes becoming what it was once, and what it should be—a quick, effective and economical way of deciding largely technical disputes arising from construction contracts. The Bill is a sister measure to the relevant sections of the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Bill, which will bring the Latham report into law. Sir Michael Latham's report was set up against a background of increasing concern about the number of disputes arising from contractual practices in the construction industry and the effect that they have on the industry's productivity and competitiveness.

Both the Arbitration Bill and the Latham report are welcome, but some arbitrators have raised doubts about clause 69 because most of the joint contracts tribunal family of building contracts and sub-contracts contain a provision by which the parties agree in advance to refer any question of law to appeal. If, at the end of clause 69(2)(a), the words were added, there might be less clogging up of the courts. Perhaps the Minister will consider that amendment when the Bill goes into Committee. If not, perhaps he will write to me saying why he will not consider it.

"provided that any such agreement shall not be effective unless reached after the dispute to which the arbitral proceedings relate has arisen"

What of the appalling contracts sometimes offered to construction workers? Cowboy employers tend not to enter into arbitration agreements, so there is nothing in the Bill for exploited employees. Is the Minister aware that trade unions in the construction industry have been forced to launch a major drive to end tax fiddles by contractors who force building workers into bogus self-employment to avoid national insurance and tax payments? Mr. George Henderson, construction secretary of the Transport and General Workers Union, is quoted in Construction News of 25 April 1996, as saying:

"This campaign is a drastic measure which we are forced to take after years of urging these employers to play by the rules.

My officers are working undercover on the situation so that we can expose crooked labour agents,"— labour agents in construction, not Labour parliamentary agents—

"and the guilty contractors and subcontractors."

I understand that the main construction employers are supporting the union's actions, because they recognise that such dishonesty benefits neither side of industry. Will the Minister offer his support to the campaign?

The self-employment trick is not confined to small projects. An estimated 10,000 construction workers are in bogus self-employment. Quite apart from being illegal, the practice poses a serious threat to health and safety. A report in Contract Journal, also dated 25 April 1996, quotes a trade union official as saying:

"There are cases of injured people being dumped outside hospitals and left there to be picked up by hospital staff because the employer was too frightened to call an ambulance because this would reveal the location of the work site."

Labour will give the Bill a fair wind, and assist in its speedy implementation. In return, will the Minister consider proposals to assist construction employees and taxpayers who are cheated by those underhand, Arthur Daley-style practices? As I have said, Labour supports the Bill because it is a commonsense measure to assist dispute resolution. It is in line with our commitment to streamline dispute resolution in general. If the Government share our support for a reform of general industrial dispute resolution, will the Minister tell us when the House will be presented with the legislation to reform tribunals which was promised by the President of the Board of Trade on 6 February? Given that his right hon. Friend promised consultation, will the Minister tell us whether the consultation process has begun? Will he give details of whom he will consult, and will he give us a guarantee that the consultation submissions will be published so that hon. Members can give proper consideration to the proposals following their publication?

Does the Minister accept the urgency of reform? He will be aware that, in order to cope with an unprecedented increase in its caseload, the Central Office of Industrial Tribunals was forced to open another tribunal office in north London. The Department of Trade and Industry advertised for lay members on a temporary basis, and that created further confusion. Temporary members were subject to different selection and reselection criteria from permanent members. Will the Minister explain why? Surely a lay member is either competent or not competent. Can we not simply have one set of rules for all appointees?

As part of their reform, will the Government also consider giving reasons for non-reappointment, and a right of reply? That would avoid any repeat of the embarrassment that was caused last year when a lay member was given no reason for non-reappointment, but a memo from the president of The Industrial Tribunals in England and Wales questioning his mental capacity for the task subsequently came to light.

Labour's commitment to a fair resolution of conflicts goes further than contracts between companies. We seek the meaningful resolution of disputes between companies and their employees, another concept that is sometimes alien to the Government. They have created unprecedented job insecurity among employees, paving the way for fat-cat excess among some unscrupulous employers. Those are wider issues, however; we intend to pursue them relentlessly with the Government, but today we shall assist the passage of the Bill into Committee—and, in the time that is left, we shall gleefully await the results of the local government elections.

Mr. Nick Harvey (North Devon): I, too, welcome the legislation, which defines new powers for arbitrators and parties to arbitration.

There is no doubt that new provisions are required to provide a more effective management procedure and to give the courts a supporting rather than an interfering role. The Bill modernises the existing processes of arbitration, and also provides a viable and attractive alternative to litigation as a means of resolving disputes. In many ways it is an admirable and much-needed Bill, relying as it does on three main principles—the provision of an impartial tribunal to resolve disputes, the giving of greater freedom to parties in regard to how they resolve those disputes, and the confining of judicial interference to the bare minimum.

Moreover, as both the Minister and the hon. Member for Makerfield (Mr. McCartney) pointed out, the implications of the Bill are commendable. The role of London as an eminent centre for international commercial arbitration is particularly important. The Bill can only exemplify the quality of our legislative framework and serve the interests of parties both at home and abroad when they enter into arbitration.

Having said that, I wish to make one observation about the Bill on which I hope that the Minister may be able to reassure me. The explanatory memorandum states that the Bill seeks to introduce certain changes in the law to confront the existing complex nature of the legislation and to make it fair. I agree that the Bill has more clarity than before and is logical in its language, and I echo the Minister's commendation of the draftsmanship.

There is one particular difficulty that I would like to look at before the measure becomes law. The Bill sets out mandatory, as well as non-mandatory, provisions for the parties involved to take on board and to consider before entering into arbitration. So long as mandatory provisions are recognised, users of arbitration can, as the Minister said, put forward their own provisions and proposals. My point is that members of the general public or representatives of small businesses entering into arbitration may not be fully aware of the option open to them of proposing some arrangements on their own part. They may not realise the extent to which they are entitled to propose their own ground rules. The outcome of this may be that they will rely very much more on the mandatory provisions, which might have the effect of giving arbitrators more power than ever before.

For those who do not understand the complex nature of the provisions, there is no protection against the immense power that the arbitrators will have. I would like to see some warning or information given to the parties that they have the option of employing their own provisions before they simply resort to taking on the mandatory provisions.

The Department of Trade and Industry has said that people ought to read the Arbitration Bill, or Act as it will become, before entering into arbitration, and that if they do not do so, it is their look-out. I wonder whether we would normally expect members of the public or small firms to have read through statutes and to have understood an Act of Parliament. If we are talking about large companies with legal departments, it is not a problem. But the Government should indicate how they intend to publicise the fact that individuals and small firms have this opportunity for discussion, and what guidance the Government will give to people on how to make use of it. For example, a great deal of information and help is given in guidance to those using small claims courts, and I wonder whether it would be possible for something comparable to be done for the provisions in the Bill.

We ought to give careful consideration to that matter and to the various other issues raised by the hon. Member for Makerfield (Mr. McCartney). In no way am I opposing the Bill, but I hope that we will look at the point that I have raised before we nod it through this afternoon.

4.30 pm

Mr. John M. Taylor: I should like to thank, in reverse order, the speakers who contributed to this debate. I thank the hon. Member for North Devon (Mr. Harvey) for his thoughtful contributions and his support. I shall certainly reflect on the possibility of providing guidance on the use of this legislative instrument, but he will not be entirely surprised if I say that many practitioners of arbitration law have been able to contribute to the legislation and are well versed and skilled in it.

The hon. Member for Makerfield asked me about a number of matters concerning industrial tribunals. Without wishing to trespass on your job, Mr. Deputy Speaker, it occurs to me that this legislation is not about industrial tribunals at all. Since the hon. Gentleman was gracious enough to say that there was another channel of communication between us—that of correspondence—I invite him to write to me on the matter that he raised, and I shall do my best to furnish him with pertinent replies.

The hon. Member for Makerfield also asked me when we intended to enact the Bill. We will enact the Bill as soon as possible and we are working to a commencement date of January 1997. We must give sufficient warning of the changes to users and to the arbitration community. However, we certainly pledge ourselves to that date.

Mr. Ian McCartney: Will that date be placed on the face of the Bill or is it just a personal commitment?

Mr. Taylor: I must rest with best endeavours because the Bill is perfectly clear about the date of operation. Clause 108 states:

"(1) The provisions of this Act come into force on such day as the Secretary of State may appoint by order made by statutory instrument, and different days may be appointed for different purposes.

(2) An order under subsection (1) may contain such transitional provisions as appear to the Secretary of State to be appropriate."

I had better cover myself by saying that there will be best endeavours towards the date I mentioned. However, one never knows; things happen when taking legislation as far as Royal Assent. We are working to a target commencement date of January 1997.

Mr. Michael Stephen (Shoreham): I had a case in which my constituents suffered financial loss as a result of misconduct by an arbitrator. I appreciate that that is very rare, but it did occur in my constituents' case. I had great difficulty extracting from the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators information about whether the arbitrator was insured. I eventually found out that he was not insured and that the institute had no rules requiring arbitrators to be insured. Will my hon. Friend consider legislating to require arbitrators to be insured so that they can satisfy any claim for damages against them in respect of misconduct?

I also discovered that the Chartered Institute of Arbitrators seems to be answerable to nobody. Will my hon. Friend consider to whom it is answerable? And if it is answerable to nobody, will he consider legislating to make it answerable to somebody?

Mr. Taylor: That is an interesting experience. I should like to reflect on the subject of answerability and insurance. My hon. Friend will know that before I went straight I used to practise one of the learned professions. Insurance was essential in order to practise, and mighty expensive it could be from time to time. I have a certain personal affinity for that subject. I will reflect on it and let my hon. Friend know my further thoughts in due course.

The hon. Member for Makerfield mentioned read-across or interference between certain of the provisions of this Bill and some construction legislation that will be brought before the House next week, if I heard my right hon. Friend the Leader of the House correctly during Business Question Time. No doubt the hon. Gentleman and others will look at that matter then, although I believe that the previous anxieties are now considerably allayed.

I should say that neither we nor anyone else is trying to force arbitration on a reluctant industry, be it the construction industry or any other sector. Arbitration is a consensual process and it must be chosen freely by the parties. As to the point on clause 69(2)—

Mr. Ian McCartney: On clause 69, I am not sure that the Minister has dealt adequately with Lord Justice Saville's argument about cross-reference between the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Bill and this Bill. I asked the Minister clear and specific questions. First, I asked whether he had knowledge of or had been made aware of Lord Justice Saville's letter to the relevant Departments. Secondly, I asked whether he had considered it and what response he had given to Lord Justice Saville. The Minister's reply was nicely put, as is the way of lawyers, but it did not adequately cover the questions I asked him. I need to know precisely whether Lord Justice Saville's point has been met, rejected or partially rejected. The point that he raises merits serious consideration as he is one of the leading experts in this area of legislation.

Mr. Taylor: The hon. Gentleman has already told me that he would be happy for me to pursue certain of these matters in correspondence. I shall take advantage of that. He also knows that there is a Committee stage to the Bill—when, no doubt, all those matters will be examined very carefully. My understanding on these matters, which I offer to the House in good faith, from the last instruction that I took before coming to the House today, is that anxieties about some form of read-across or interference between the two Bills have now been considerably allayed. The hon. Gentleman can take comfort from the fact that there will be a Committee stage to this Bill before very long, and he has the actuality of the other Bill next week.

I should like to say something about clause 69(2) and the suggestions made by the hon. Member for Makerfield.

Mr. McCartney: I am trying to do this in a manner that enables us to reach a conclusion earlier than we normally would. When the Minister says "considerably allayed", it again does not answer the point. As he rightly said, the Leader of the House announced today that the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Bill, about which there is some dispute, will have a Second Reading debate next week. It is therefore important to all those concerned that before that debate takes place the Government are absolutely clear about it and are able to provide clear and adequate information that there is no difficulty about cross-over in respect of the two pieces of legislation.

I think the Minister used the phrase "considerably allayed". Frankly, that leaves a gaping hole between the gate-post and the gate. He knows that in legal terms that leaves a lot that needs to be covered. I assume from the Minister's phraseology that he is not quite clear—I do not mean this in a derogatory way—about the status of the discussions taking place between his Department and the Lord Justice. I will accept from him a commitment in good faith that he will write to us, but I ask that we receive the correspondence before the Second Reading debate next week; I can then consult my colleagues who are to deal with that piece of legislation so that Opposition Members can be clear about the fact that the matter has been satisfactorily resolved.

Mr. Taylor: I have two things to say about that. First, the letter from Lord Justice Saville to which the hon. Gentleman referred was a private letter to an official. I am therefore not prepared to comment on it.

Secondly, the hon. Gentleman must understand that arbitration is a consensual process. The Bill has had distilled between its two covers what people more learned than I consider to be a comprehensive statement of the English law of arbitration—the law of arbitration applicable in England, Wales and Northern Ireland. One of its virtues is that all the information is in one "manual", and it is well and congenially written.

All hon. Members who have spoken in this debate—not least the hon. Member for North Devon—have said that they would like to see London as the arbitration centre of the world. I would rephrase that and say that I should like to see London as the arbitration capital of the world. Anyone wishing to settle their disputes by arbitration in London can—by obtaining a copy of the Bill once it has become law—have access in a single document to the basic ground rules. But the process remains consensual, and it is for the parties themselves to decide the ground rules for resolution of their disputes.

Inasmuch as I am not an expert on what the Department of the Environment's Bill will say about adjudication, the hon. Member for Makerfield should consult Environment Ministers if he wants to pursue whatever changes may be contained in that Bill. I am not the sponsor of that Bill, I am the sponsor of this Bill. The hon. Gentleman could pose the question of what is meant by "adjudication", and it might be a good question. We are not dealing here with adjudication, which is undefined—nor, in fact, is the word "arbitration" defined in the Bill—but I think that I can safely say that, over the best part of three centuries, custom and practice has developed in this country in such a manner that one knows from first principles what arbitration is, and here are the rules.

Mr. McCartney: We have been very fair in how we have asked that question. We support the Bill, so I do not understand why the Minister is suddenly becoming a little belligerent. The questions have been put reasonably, and in a manner that is meant to facilitate the passage of the legislation and its effectiveness.

The letter that I quoted is between officials in the Department of Trade and Industry who are dealing with this legislation and the Minister. It is highly unreasonable for the Government now to say that it is private correspondence and make no comment on it. It is something that goes to the heart of a specific part of this legislation. I should have thought, with all due respect, that the Minister would already have consulted the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration, who is responsible for the other Bill, to ensure that there is not a cross-over. So I ask the Minister again: will he ensure that, before the Second Reading debate next week, there will be clarification of those points?

Mr. Taylor: Yes. However, I am responsible for the content of this Bill, and I cannot anticipate what is in the other Bill. But I will oblige the hon. Gentleman—[Interruption.] There was an intervention from a sedentary position which I did not hear. So the fact that I am not responding to it is in no sense intended as a discourtesy. I remember the conventions of the silent ones who sit next to Ministers—that their opportunities to rise in their places and intervene in debates is severely circumscribed. It is a discipline that I observed myself for nearly four years.

I think that it might be convenient for us all if I concluded my remarks. We have had some interesting exchanges. The hon. Member for Makerfield has had his afternoon in the Chamber, and for all I know may yet get back for the local elections.

Mr. McCartney: I know the results—it is a foregone conclusion.

Mr. Richard Ottaway (Croydon, South): Do not be too smug.

Mr. Taylor: That is the right word.

While this is a long and technically complex Bill, it is of great importance to business and companies across the country, as well as to those from overseas who choose to come here to resolve their business disputes. Although it is technically complex, I hope that hon. Members will have been impressed with the clarity with which the concepts and procedures that make up arbitration have been expressed in the Bill. If hon. Members have had an opportunity to look at the current legislation, I am sure that they will agree that we are making a major step forward.

I should like to see this Bill reach the statute book as soon as possible, and I hope that I can count on hon. Members to support me. The Bill's next stage, in Committee, will give us an opportunity to consider its provisions in more detail than has been possible today, and I look forward to continuing our debate.

Question put and agreed to.

Bill read a Second time, and committed to a Standing Committee pursuant to Standing Order No. 61 (Committal of Bills).

Mr. Joseph Marshall

Motion made, and Question proposed, That this House do now adjourn.—[Mr. Ottaway.]

4.47 pm

Mr. Bill Walker (North Tayside): I should like to thank Madam Speaker for selecting for an Adjournment debate the tragic case involving the death of my constituent, Joseph Marshall, and my plea for a fatal accident inquiry. Last Friday, I drew attention to the advantages of the United Kingdom's unwritten constitution. Today I am making use of one of those advantages: the Adjournment debate.

It is always difficult for parents to come to terms with the death of a young adult son as the result of a road accident. It is made more difficult when the parents believe that the accident was not properly or fully investigated at the time. Pat and Betty Marshall are not vindictive people, although circumstances and events have made them distrustful and very apprehensive. All they have ever sought is that all the evidence in this tragic case should be brought out into the public domain. That is what my attempt this evening in this Adjournment debate is all about. Anyone who knows the road between Alyth and Blairgowrie, where the accident happened, will be aware that it is a narrow road with dips and bends, on which a number of nasty accidents have occurred.

Joseph Marshall was driving a Ford Sierra and he was in collision with a large horse box. I remind my hon. Friend the Minister that the road is narrow with dips and bends and consequently there are many blind spots. The horse box in question is 21 ft long and 8 ft wide and can only be described as a very large vehicle. So we have a large vehicle on a narrow road with dips and bends.

The Marshalls have been very disturbed by the conflicting evidence which they have managed to uncover. They have also been deeply concerned and shocked about what they believe were failures in the way in which the police conducted their investigation into the accident at the time.

In an attempt to get at the truth, the Marshalls have put a number of questions to the Lord Advocate and the Secretary of State. For the record, I shall detail the questions, some of which have never been fully answered. Had they been answered, there would be no need for this debate tonight. The questions were as follows:

"Why, despite laid down procedures in relation to slight injuries, was there no breath-test taken from the driver of the horsebox at the scene of the accident?

Why have several witnesses indicated the horsebox driver was drunk?

Why was a statement not taken from a business partner of the driver of the horsebox even though the person was on the scene of the accident before the emergency services and could have key information?

How did so many relatives and associates of the horsebox driver come to be on the scene and why has it been accepted without question by police that testimony from these witnesses, forming the bulk of their 'case', is uninfluenced and therefore independent?

Why are there so many conflicting, contradictory and self contradictory statements from witnesses?

Why have police intimidated witnesses whose statements challenge the accepted version?

Why were other, truly independent witnesses whose testimony may have been crucial, ignored?

Why did a known associate of the horsebox driver and subsequently a vital witness to the accepted version of events, go home and then return in a different car to pick up the passengers left behind at the scene?

Why did this same witness say he saw, prior to the accident and travelling in the opposite direction, only one of the other key witnesses despite this witness (white car) insisting that he was racing nose to tail with another of the witnesses in a silver car the whole time?

Why does testimony from this same witness conflict with that of his passengers?

Why is there doubt as to whether this witness was where he said he was at the time of the accident?

Why did police insist that the time of the accident was between 8.20-8.30 PM despite corroborated evidence which puts the time of the accident at approx. 8.45 PM?

Why did police insist that they have no knowledge of the driver of the white car despite interviewing him at the roadside at the time of the accident?

Why have police been selective with regard to which skidmarks were recorded as pertinent, completely ignoring marks which point to an entirely different scenario?

The car was fitted with an ABS braking system and should have left distinctive tyremarks on the road if it had gone into a skid. These marks were not present, why?

Independent experts have completely refuted the police assessment of the skid mark evidence, why?

The father of Joseph Marshall asked for and offered to fund, a reconstruction—this was refused, why?

Why do police insist that the 7.5 ton horsebox, travelling downhill at a minimum '35-40 mph', was brought to an immediate standstill by the force of the impact even though elementary physics clearly shows this to have been an impossibility?

Why do police insist that the 21 foot long, 8.5 foot wide, 7.5 ton lorry, fitted with a tachograph and capable of carrying 5 fully grown horses, is 'a van'?

Why was this same horsebox released from police care and dismantled immediately despite the most strenuous objections of the Marshall family that they have evidence which challenges the accepted version of events?

The tachograph disc from the horsebox is missing, why?

Why was a potentially crucial witness who saw the horsebox 'driving erratically' just prior to the accident told by police that this was unimportant to the case and therefore irrelevant?

Why was the police video of the accident scene delayed until several months after the accident and then filmed in weather conditions which effectively masked skid mark evidence?

Why on this same video was Joseph Marshall named as 'The Accused' even though firemen in attendance at the time of the accident were told that it would be the driver of the horsebox who would be charged with manslaughter?

How did the driver of the horsebox manage to locate his daughter and arrange for the ambulance he was travelling in to stop outside a public house en route to the hospital in order to pick her up even though his injuries were slight and he already had at least one son in the ambulance with him?

Why did a senior representative of General Accident with many years experience in his field state categorically that: 'The car [Sierra] was hit on its own side of the road giving the driver no chance'?

Why does the damage to the car challenge the 'accepted' version?

Why did one vital witness keep people away from Joseph Marshall as he lay fatally injured by claiming to be 'a nurse' when in reality she was employed as a process worker in a nearby factory?

Why did Mr. McLeod, Senior Procurator Fiscal, when faced with the evidence collected by Pat and Betty Marshall and presented by them in the company of their solicitor, say; 'I would not insult you both by trying to explain how the police came to this conclusion'?

[Mr. Bill Walker]

Why is the evidence held by the Crown Office now subject to a Confidentiality Order (similar to Official Secrets Act), preventing anyone acting on behalf of Pat and Betty Marshall from examining it and effectively barring further investigation or any form of private prosecution?

Why, despite all of the above information being in the hands of the authorities, have Pat and Betty Marshall been refused, time and again, the only thing they have ever asked for—a Fatal Accident Inquiry?

Why did Officer Barclay, when asked by Pat Marshall when the breath-test was taken, reply: 'I don't know. The officer who did the test forgot to sign and date it'?

Why did Officer Barclay read out a statement allegedly taken from firemen in respect of the horsebox being cut to free the driver despite this being clearly not the case and then, after seeing the horsebox for himself, say to Pat and Betty Marshall that he must have misread it?

Why did Officer Barclay say to Pat, Betty and their 13-year-old daughter Michele, who were reading the messages of support contained in the floral tributes which had been laid at the crash scene by friends in the 3 days since the accident: 'Pat, these [tyre] marks don't measure up to the statements these people have given. I will have to go and see the'"— so-and-so's—

"'again'"?

Why did it take Officer Barclay three weeks to inform Pat and Betty Marshall that there were three more official witnesses to the crash, bringing the total to six, all of whom have given conflicting or self-contradictory statements?

Why did Officer Barclay say to Pat and Betty Marshall that 'the best thing you could do is just scrap the car [Sierra] and forget it'?

Why did PC Barclay, in Pat and Betty Marshall's own home, say about the horse box driver: 'He's probably had four or five pints. What's that? It would have worn off by the time of the crash?'

How could Inspector Beaton (Blairgowrie Police) when asked by Pat Marshall if he would have the blood stains across the roof of the car analysed say: 'It's none of our business'?

What made this same inspector say to Pat and Betty Marshall: 'What's the fuss? Your son went up the road and killed himself.'

Why did the police issue Pat and Betty Marshall with their own insurance company claim number with the man at the desk quoting the Sergeant upstairs as saying: 'Just give him that one there, and that's all you're getting.'?"

The Lord Advocate wrote to me on 23 January 1996 detailing his reasons for believing "that the evidence points to this accident having been caused by the deceased's vehicle rounding a bend at speed, on the wrong side of the road, and apparently out of control."

The letter continues:

"The photographs and the sketch plan, both of which he has seen, do not seem to offer any support to Mr. Marshall's contention that it was the other vehicle which was on the wrong side of the road. On the contrary, this evidence seems to entirely support the evidence of the eye-witnesses."

Yet the damage to the car, confirmed by accident experts contradicts that claim.

If the Lord Advocate is so confident that the facts are as he sees them, and I am satisfied that he believes that, I cannot understand why he cannot grant what I am asking for this evening. I remind my hon. Friend the Minister that on 23 August 1995, I asked for the case to be re-examined and in my letter to the Lord Advocate, I especially drew attention to the skid marks shown in the photographs and on the video.

I believe that I have demonstrated that there is enough evidence to question the conclusions reached by the procurator, the police and the Lord Advocate. I further submit that the only way to put the matter to rest is to have a fatal accident inquiry at which all the evidence, including that of all the witnesses, can be properly evaluated and the evidence of the accident experts properly heard. That can be achieved only through a fatal accident inquiry. It is the only way to get rid of all the doubts.

Almost everyone in Blairgowrie talks about the case and the fact that it has not been properly addressed. No one believes that it has. If after those matters are properly and fully evaluated, it is clear that the Marshalls' questions are wrong and that the facts that they believe that they have unearthed are wrong, it would all come out. As things are, nothing is being addressed. There is a great deal of secrecy. There is certainly evidence of intimidation, on which I shall not touch tonight because it will probably be dealt with in the courts. I find the whole thing distasteful and disturbing.

I am delighted that we have the unwritten United Kingdom constitution that gives me the opportunity through the use of an Adjournment debate to raise these matters where they can be properly addressed.

5.3 pm

The Minister of State, Scottish Office (Lord James Douglas-Hamilton): I congratulate my hon. Friend the Member for North Tayside (Mr. Walker) on securing this debate on behalf of his constituent. All the points that he has raised are matters for the Lord Advocate, and I shall ensure that my hon. Friend's request for a fatal accident inquiry is drawn to his attention. It is fair for me to put before my hon. Friend the sequence of events and the up-to-date position, as I understand it, in relation to this unfortunate matter. Before I respond to the points that my hon. Friend raised, I express my sympathy to the family of the late Mr. Marshall for their tragic loss.

Investigations conducted by officers of Tayside police and by the procurator fiscal at Perth into the death of Joseph Marshall have established that, on the evening of Saturday 28 August 1994, the deceased left the family home alone in possession of his father's Ford Sierra 4x4 motor car. He travelled to the Wellmeadow area of Blairgowrie, where he met up with friends who were in two other cars. The youths chatted for a while and then drove round Blairgowrie town centre in the three vehicles.

At about 8.35 pm, all three vehicles were driven eastwards on the A926, the Blairgowrie to Alyth road. The deceased was at the rear of the convoy. At about 8.40 pm, the deceased's vehicle collided with a Bedford horse box. The driver of the other vehicle involved in the accident was travelling west on the same road. He was accompanied by two other persons who were front-seat passengers. A Metro motor car was being driven behind the Bedford horse box. There were two passengers in the Metro in addition to the driver.

Those individuals, that is the three persons in the horse box and the three persons travelling in the Metro, were the only persons who witnessed the collision. In the statements that they gave to the police, they described seeing the deceased's vehicle rounding a bend at speed, on the wrong side of the road and apparently out of control.

The deceased's vehicle collided, side-on, with the front of the horse box, trapping the deceased and the driver of the horse box in their respective vehicles. One of the passengers from the Metro supported the deceased's head until the arrival of medical assistance. The driver of the horse box sustained a broken left kneecap and was trapped by the legs in his vehicle.

A doctor who had been driving to Alyth came upon the scene of the accident and provided what assistance he could to the deceased. The deceased was unconscious and never regained consciousness. The doctor pronounced life extinct at 9.30 pm. The post mortem examination established that the deceased had sustained multiple injuries.

The evidence of the witnesses to the accident, and the evidence of those who observed the position of the vehicles immediately thereafter, showed that the deceased drove round a bend at speed, lost control of his vehicle, crossed to the wrong side of the carriageway and slid sideways into the oncoming horse box.

The deceased's father, Mr. Patrick Marshall, has never accepted this version of events, as my hon. Friend described. He has accused Tayside police of failing adequately to investigate the circumstances of the accident. He has suggested that the marks left on the road by the two vehicles do not support the version given by the witnesses, and that the six eye-witnesses have given conflicting or self-contradictory statements. He believes that it was the driver of the horse box who caused the accident.

The fact remains, however, that the evidence of all six witnesses exculpates the driver of the horse box and places the blame for the collision on the deceased. Mr. Marshall has suggested that the witnesses have not been truthful and that there has been an attempt to conceal the true nature of the accident. He has suggested that the driver of the horse box was driving at excessive speed and erratically; that the witnesses in the car travelling behind the horse-box were his friends and are protecting him; that the damage to the deceased's vehicle was not consistent with the explanation of the accident given by the witnesses; and that the skid marks left at the locus were not consistent with the evidence of the witnesses.

One of Mr. Marshall's specific allegations has been that the driver of the horse box was not trapped in his vehicle. He has also alleged that the driver was under of the influence of drink. The evidence, not only from the civilian witnesses but also from fire and ambulance personnel who attended at the scene, flatly contradicts his allegations.

The police officer who attended at the locus spoke to the driver of the horsebox and confirmed that he was trapped by the legs. Ambulance personnel who arrived at the locus at about 20.45 hours also spoke of seeing the driver trapped within his vehicle. Indeed, one of the ambulance technicians remained with the driver of the horsebox until the fire brigade managed to move the Ford Sierra from the front of the horsebox. That witness was then able to free the driver with the assistance of the fire brigade.

The allegation that the driver of the horsebox was under the influence of drink was disproved by the fact that he was subjected to a breath test that proved negative.

Mr. Marshall has made many of his allegations in the form of a complaint to the chief constable. He has alleged that officers dealing with the accident were in neglect of their duty and that they failed to carry out a full and thorough investigation into the accident. Mr. Marshall has suggested that the witnesses travelling in the Metro were known to the driver and occupants of the horsebox and that they collectively involved themselves in a conspiracy to conceal the true facts of the accident. There is, however, no evidence of collusion between the witnesses.

Mr. Marshall has alleged that one of the firemen who attended at the locus was alleged to have told his work mates that the driver of the horsebox was to be charged with manslaughter and drunk driving. That fireman was also alleged to have said that the driver of the horsebox was not trapped in his vehicle. Inquiry revealed that the fireman identified by Mr. Marshall had not attended the scene of the accident. He denied ever having discussed the accident with any of his work mates.

Mr. Marshall has also alleged that an officer of Tayside police had told him that the driver of the horsebox had drunk five or six pints on the day of the accident. The officer was also alleged to have told Mr. Marshall that there was no written record of the breath test having been carried out. Inquiry into those allegations failed to uncover any evidence to substantiate them. The officer identified by Mr. Marshall vehemently denied having made the remarks. There is written record of the breath test procedure that was carried out as a matter of routine given the nature of the accident. The senior police officer who investigated Mr. Marshall's allegations found that all were unsubstantiated.

The statements taken by the police were submitted to the procurator fiscal at Perth. He then conducted his own independent investigation into the circumstances of the death. He precognosced a number of key witnesses to check the accuracy of the statements given to the police. The procurator fiscal confirmed that the witnesses' position was that the horse box was at all times on its own side of the road; that the driver was driving carefully; and that he reacted quickly on seeing the deceased's vehicle approach.

The evidence given by the witnesses was unequivocal. It may assist my hon. Friend if I quote from the statement given by the driver of the car travelling behind the horsebox, who said:

"As I approached the bend I saw a white Ford Sierra motor car swerve across the road and into a carriageway, colliding with the oncoming horse float in front of me. I braked and managed to avoid colliding with the rear of the horse float. The white Ford Sierra appeared to have been travelling at speed. I would say excessively for the bends which it come through".

That witness concluded his statement by stating

"the driver of the white Sierra motor car was most definitely to blame for the accident".

It should be emphasised that there are no witnesses who contradict that version of events.

Mr. Marshall has suggested that the skid marks observed at the locus following the accident are evidence that the horsebox was being driven on the wrong side of the road. Officers of Tayside police who attended at the scene of the accident prepared a sketch of the locus. On that sketch, they recorded the position of the vehicles on the road and the skid marks that appeared to have been made by both the deceased's vehicle and the horsebox. From the evidence available to him, the procurator fiscal was satisfied that neither the skid marks nor the final position of the vehicles on the road supported Mr. Marshall's assertion that the horsebox was being driven on the wrong side of the road.

The procurator fiscal reported the circumstances to the Crown office in January 1995. Crown counsel instructed that there should be no further proceedings. As my hon. Friend will know from his correspondence with the Lord Advocate, the procurator fiscal thereafter had a lengthy meeting in February with Mr. and Mrs. Marshall and their solicitor. At that meeting, Mr. Marshall raised a number of matters which the procurator fiscal agreed to consider.

The procurator fiscal concluded, having completed his re-examination of the evidence, including all the additional information provided by Mr. Marshall, that no significant additional evidence had been uncovered. The fiscal then had a second meeting with Mr. and Mrs. Marshall and their solicitor in August. During those meetings, the procurator fiscal attempted to provide Mr. and Mrs. Marshall with all the information that was available to him. Mr. Marshall has seen the sketch plan of the locus and a video film made by the police. The procurator fiscal has co-operated with Mr. and Mrs. Marshall's solicitor and has provided the solicitor with a copy of the photographs taken by the police, a copy of the sketch plan and a copy of the post mortem report.

The procurator fiscal has also provided the solicitor with a full list of witnesses to enable him to precognosce those witnesses himself. Throughout, the fiscal has made it clear to Mr. and Mrs. Marshall that he is prepared to consider any new information which they or their solicitor draw to his attention. The fact remains, however, that no significant new evidence has been uncovered and, in particular, nothing that contradicts the evidence of the eye witnesses.

My hon. Friend has referred to a lengthy list of questions which Mr. Marshall has also sent to a number of Members of Parliament. I believe that there are up to 41 questions on Mr. Marshall's list, and that most take the form of an allegation that there is evidence that contradicts the police version of events. I do not wish to refer in detail to those questions, but I can say that those matters were carefully considered by the procurator fiscal. He re-examined the evidence in the case, including all the additional information provided by Mr. Marshall, but, as I have already said, concluded that no significant additional evidence had been uncovered.

The possibility of instructing an accident reconstruction expert has been discussed. As the Lord Advocate has explained to my hon. Friend, the advice to the procurator fiscal is that it would be impossible to carry out a proper accident reconstruction at this stage. An expert would base a reconstruction on his examination of the locus, including the distribution of debris, damage to vehicles and marks on the road surface. Proper accident reconstruction is very dependent on the locus having been preserved as nearly intact as possible. In this case, the skid marks are no longer visible and the debris has obviously long since disappeared, as have the vehicles. In the circumstances, the procurator fiscal does not intend to take any further action in respect of the matter.

To carry out a form of reconstruction using only the sketch plan and the photographs would be of little value. Nevertheless, those are available to Mr. and Mrs. Marshall and they are free to instruct an expert to examine that material. In that connection, I understand that Mr. Marshall claims to have obtained the opinion of two independent crash analysts who allegedly say that the sketch plan prepared by the police was inaccurate. Mr. Marshall was asked in March of this year to provide the procurator fiscal with a copy of their report, but I understand that he has not done so. Obviously, I would say to my hon. Friend that if there is any such evidence it will be considered by the procurator fiscal, who will then decide whether any further action needs to be taken.

As I have already said, Crown counsel has instructed that no proceedings should be taken in connection with the incident. Accordingly, in the view of the Lord Advocate, a fatal accident inquiry will not be held. The Lord Advocate has reviewed the papers in the case and he is satisfied that all the circumstances of the unfortunate accident have been fully investigated. He has said, however, that the procurator fiscal will be carry any further inquiries if significant new material comes to light. For the present, the Lord Advocate is satisfied that the Crown counsel's decision not to instruct a fatal accident inquiry was appropriate.

A discretionary fatal accident inquiry will be held only when the Lord Advocate is satisfied that it is expedient in the public interest that an inquiry should be held into the circumstances. The Lord Advocate has had such a discretion since 1906 and it was continued by the Fatal Accident and Sudden Death Inquiries (Scotland) Act 1976, which consolidated the legislation and modernised the procedures. The Lord Advocate, in the exercise of his discretion, acts in a quasi-judicial capacity when deciding whether an inquiry should be held.

In the case of a road traffic fatality, an inquiry would normally be held only if it were thought that there was a need to inquire into matters which might result in the sheriff finding that there were reasonable precautions whereby the death, or any accident resulting in death, might have been avoided. Fatal accident inquiries in road traffic cases are normally held to consider matters such as the layout of the road, the appropriateness of any speed limits at the locus or the adequacy of street lighting. In other words, a fatal accident inquiry will be held where there is a need to address issues of road safety.

In this case, what is at issue is whether the driver of the horse box or the deceased was at fault. Where it is considered that a driver of a vehicle was at fault to the extent that his driving was thought to have been careless or dangerous, the appropriate step would be for criminal proceedings to be instituted. Where criminal proceedings are not appropriate—as in this case, where the evidence indicates that it was the deceased who was at fault—and issues of road safety are not raised, a fatal accident inquiry would not be appropriate, especially when the investigation by the police and by the procurator fiscal has already clearly established the circumstances leading up to the accident.

Mr. Bill Walker: The critical point is the road layout. When one discusses this, one must realise that a large vehicle on a narrow road, with bends and dips, would trigger such an accident. I drive my daughter's horse box on that road and I am astonished by some of the comments.

Lord James Douglas–Hamilton: I repeat what I said earlier: if Mr. Marshall genuinely has opinions from two independent crash analysts who have submitted a report, I recommend that it be forwarded to the procurator fiscal.

who can then take a strong view as to what further action, if any, is required. In relation to the layout of the road, that is the best way forward if that evidence exists—and my hon. Friend has led me to believe that it does.

Crown counsel is satisfied that the circumstances in this case are not unexplained and that they do not give rise to any serious public concern. Therefore, a fatal accident inquiry would not be appropriate. That decision can be reviewed if new evidence comes to light. In that connection, I can confirm that in March of this year Mr. Marshall's solicitor provided the procurator fiscal with copies of statements from two additional witnesses. He has promised to provide the procurator fiscal with the statement of a third witness.

Once that information has been obtained, the procurator fiscal will consider whether he needs to carry out a further investigation. The results of any such investigation will be reported to Crown counsel. I assure my hon. Friend that the Lord Advocate has confirmed that the decision not to hold a fatal accident inquiry will be reviewed in the light of the new evidence, assuming that it is found to be reliable and relevant.

I regret that Mr. Marshall has been so traumatised by the loss of his son that he is unable to accept that the circumstances of the accident have been fully and properly investigated. It is clear that Mr. Marshall has failed to come to terms with the death of his son and that he is now obsessed with allegations that there has been a cover-up. In this connection, I understand that he was convicted at Perth sheriff court on 25 April on a charge of conducting himself in a disorderly manner by telephoning a British Telecom operator and stating to her that he intended to purchase a gun and ammunition and use it to injure various people who were involved either in the accident or in the investigation of it. Sentence in that case, which is sub judice, has been deferred to 25 May and, therefore, I cannot discuss the details of the case.

I can only hope that this debate, and the fact that Mr. Marshall's concerns have been given such a public airing, will go some way towards showing him that there is no conspiracy and that those involved in investigating this tragic accident have nothing to hide. I thank my hon. Friend the Member for North Tayside for initiating the debate. I suggest that the best way forward is for the new evidence to be submitted to the Procurator Fiscal. As I promised at the outset of my remarks, I shall ensure that my hon. Friend's comments are passed on to the Lord Advocate.

Question put and agreed to.

ENVIRONMENT

Vehicle Batteries

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many car and other vehicle batteries are recycled or safely reclaimed each year. [25751]

Mr. Clappison: Information on the precise number and weight of automotive—lead-acid—batteries recycled or reclaimed is not held centrally.

However, it is known that the vast majority of used lead-acid batteries are recycled at three plants in the UK. The industry is committed to achieving a minimum 90 per cent. recycling target for lead batteries.

Fluorescent Lighting Tubes

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the method recommended by his Department for the safe disposal of fluorescent lighting tubes. [25747]

Mr. Clappison: Fluorescent tubes must be managed and disposed of in accordance with sections 33 and 34 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. The Department does not recommend a particular form of disposal, but the waste management licensing regime ensures that such activities are carried out in a manner that does not harm human health or cause environmental damage.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the average cost of safe disposal of a fluorescent lighting tube. [25744]

Mr. Clappison: The cost of disposal of fluorescent light tubes depends on the type of facility for disposal, the quantity that is disposed of at any one time and the distance they must be transported to reach the disposal facility. Central Government do not compile such information.

Water Bills

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the average water bill in each household by region for 1996–97; what were the equivalent figures in each of the last five years; and what have been the percentage changes in each case. [24928]

Mr. Clappison: The following table provides details of the average unmeasured household water and sewerage bill for the 10 privatised water and sewerage companies for 1996–97 and the equivalent figures for each year from 1991-292 to 1995–96. The figures in brackets show the annual percentage change.

Environment Protection Strategy and Europe Division

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the budget of the environment protection strategy and Europe division of his Department for the 1995–96 financial year. [25621]

Mr. Clappison: The division was established on 1 November 1995. It took on most of the work of what was the environment protection central division, EPC, and part of the work of what was the environment protection Europe division, EPEUR. It is not possible to separate the costs of those parts of EPC and EPEUR which are relevant to the work of the new division. For this reason, an expenditure figure for 1995–96 is not readily available. However, the 1996–97 budget for the net administrative expenditure of the division is £1,075,330.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many staff are employed within the environment protection strategy and Europe division of his Department. [25625]

Mr. Clappison: The staff in post on 1 April 1996 within the environment protection strategy and Europe division was 27.

County Museum Collections

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to ensure the continued effectiveness of county museum collections affected by the local government review in the situations of (a) abolished authorities and (b) relinquished authorities. [25554]

Sir Paul Beresford: How best to provide services for museum and records services is a matter for the authorities concerned. However, following discussions with the Museums and Galleries Commission, the Department of National Heritage has issued guidance on the provision of suitable museum services to all authorities involved in reorganisation.

Waste Incinerators (Fires)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to conduct research into the environmental impact of fires at waste incinerators. [25923]

Mr. Clappison: I have no plans to conduct research into this matter.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to issue guidelines concerning fires at waste incinerators. [25924]

Mr. Clappison: I have no plans to issue guidelines on this matter.

Housing Associations

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what (a) annual reports, (b) annual accounts, (c) minutes of meetings, (d) agendas of meetings and (e) registers of members' interests are published by registered housing associations; and if in each case it is under a statutory requirement. [25966]

Mr. Clappison: Registered housing associations are required by statute to provide a copy of their audited annual accounts to the Housing Corporation which holds them available for inspection. All other requirements are non-statutory. The main ones are:

The tenants guarantee which requires associations to keep their tenants informed about their housing management performance.

Housing Corporation programme performance standards under which associations are required to conduct their affairs in an open and accountable way, disseminating widely information about their housing provision and activities.

The National Federation of Housing Association's code of governance which requires board members to declare conflicts of interest and associations to maintain records of interests of board members and senior staff and to make them available for public inspection.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Life Sentence Prisoners

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners serving life sentences were released (a) when their tariff was reached, (b) up to and including 12 months after tariff, (c) up to and including 24 months after tariff and (d) longer than 24 months after tariff during each year since 1990. [25200]

Miss Widdecombe: Information in the form requested is not recorded centrally. Figures for all the years from 1990 to 1994 are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, a special exercise conducted in 1993 showed that in regard to all life sentence prisoners first released on licence in 1992, 9 per cent. were released before, on, or within one month after, expiry of tariff and 36 per cent. were released before, on, or within 12 months of tariff.

Examination of readily available information about the 60 mandatory life sentence prisoners released for the first time on licence in 1995 shows the following:

Time of release in relation to tariff expiry	Number and percentage
Before, on, or within one month of tariff expiry	8 (13 per cent.)
1–12 months after tariff expiry	23 (38 per cent.)
13–24 months after tariff expiry	3 (5 per cent.)
Over 2 years after tariff expiry	26 (43 per cent.)
Total	60

Information about discretionary life sentence prisoners released in 1995 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Prison Boards of Visitors

Mr. Beith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what organisations were consulted about changes in the retirement age and the limitation to term of office of prison boards of visitors; for what reasons these proposals were not included in the recent review of the board of visitors system; and what representations he has received on this matter. [25220]

Miss Widdecombe: In deciding to amend the policy on appointments to boards of visitors, I noted that a number of members of boards felt that requiring all members to retire at the next triennial review following their 70th birthday did not reflect the fact that many people are well able to carry on voluntary work beyond their 70th birthday and are keen to do so.

On the other hand, it would be inappropriate for any member to be able to serve indefinitely and thus prevent an influx of new members from time to time. It is generally the case in public appointments that reappointment is not automatic and should not be repeated an indefinite number of times. In particular, members of boards of visitors in Northern Ireland have a limit of 12 years on their length of service. However, in view of the larger scale and greater numbers involved in boards of visitors in England and Wales, it seemed reasonable to set a higher limit of 15 years. This limit thus replaces the retirement age which has been abolished.

The review advisory group which considered and reported in May last year focused more on recruitment of new members and the day-to-day work of members of boards rather than on the question of length of service. Although my right hon. and learned Friend endorsed the recommendations of the report, this cannot prevent Ministers from considering other changes when and if it is deemed appropriate and necessary to do so.

The new policy was first announced to the National Advisory Council for Boards of Visitors and, following representations from that committee, I agreed to phase the new measures in. I have received a number of letters from boards and individual members whose comments I have noted.

Fire Services (London Docklands)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what account he has taken, or will take, when considering the adequacy of fire appliance coverage in the area of and adjacent to that of the London Docklands development corporation of the planned industrial and business development up to the year 2000. [25542]

Mr. Sackville: Statutory responsibility for the provision of an efficient fire service is a matter for the fire authority concerned. Any fire authority wishing to reduce the operational capacity of its brigade, including the number of fire appliances, must seek the approval of my right hon. and learned Friend under section 19 of the Fire Services Act 1947. His practice is to grant approval only where he is satisfied that the nationally recommended standards of fire cover will be maintained. The position would be considered by reference to the category of fire risk of the area as it stood at the time of the application. In the event of future property development, it would be up to the fire authority to take account of the new circumstances. Her Majesty's inspectorate of fire service monitors performance in meeting the standards of fire cover as part of the annual inspection process.

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date the Criminal Cases Review Commission will be set up; and if he will make a statement. [25567]

Mr. Kirkhope: The Criminal Cases Review Commission is expected to start work later this year. The chairman designate is Sir Frederick Crawford and the posts of other members of the commission will be advertised shortly.

General Election Campaigns

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what new proposals he has to set limits on the spending on national campaigns by parties in general elections. [26277]

Mr. Sackville: We have no such proposals.

Home Country Briefs

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when he plans to place completed home country briefs on (a) Somalia, (b) India and (c) Pakistan in the Library; and if he will make a statement; [26235]

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of a home country brief on Somalia referred to by a Home Office presenting officer at a hearing in Manchester last year and which was shown to a representative attending the hearing; and if he will make a statement. [26243]

Mr. Kirkhope: As indicated previously, our aim is to finalise these reports as soon as is practicable. We will then make them available to those concerned with the asylum appeals system and place them in the Library.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many appointments to the public bodies listed in "Public Bodies" for his Department were made during 1994–95 from names supplied by the public appointments unit; and if he will list them. [25957]

Mr. Howard: The readily available information is as follows: in 1994–95, 13 appointments were made to the public bodies listed in "Public Bodies" from names supplied by the public appointments unit. These were:

	Number
Parole Board	4
Metropolitan Police Committee	5
Advisory Board for Restricted Patients	1
Animal Procedures Committee	1
Police Complaints Authority	2

Prevention of Terrorism Legislation

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of people held for (a) 48 hours or under and (b) over 48 hours under the provisions of the prevention of terrorism legislation for each year since 1974. [19069]

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply, 5 March 1996, c. 200]: An amended and extended table of the figures given for Northern Ireland is given.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many appointments to the public bodies listed in "Public Bodies" for his Department were made during 1994–95 from names supplied by the public appointments unit; and if he will list them. [25951]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Two appointments were made to the Legal Aid Board during 1994–95 from names supplied by the public appointments unit. They were:

John Crosby: Appointed 5 April 1994

Colin George: Appointed 3 May 1994.

Divorce Leaflet

Mr. Patten: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many copies were printed and what was the cost of production of the leaflet entitled "I Want to Get a Divorce-What Do I Do" published by the Lord Chancellor's Department (D184), in the most recent year for which figures are available. [25980]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. John Patten, dated 22 April 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the guidance leaflet entitled "I want to get a divorce-what do I do?".

73,425 leaflets were printed and distributed to the courts in 1995 at a cost of approximately £10,495.

Mr. Patten: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will publish a companion leaflet to "I Want To Get a Divorce-What Do I Do?" entitled "I Want To Try To Stay Married-What Do I Do?" [26018]

Mr. Evans: My Department and the Court Service will be considering what information should be available in the light of the provisions of the Family Law Bill, particularly the proposed information meeting. This will include information about marriage counselling and marriage support services. Consideration of what information and services can best assist people who want to remain married also forms part of the work of the interdepartmental working party on marriage.

TREASURY

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will deduct from the United Kingdom's net contribution to the EU the cost of compensating the British farmers for measures to eradicate bovine spongiform encephalopathy in the event of the European Union not agreeing to pay such compensation. [24256]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Council of Ministers has agreed that a significant proportion of such costs will be financed from the European Community budget.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people (i) in total and (ii) by sex in England by travel-to-work area are currently in (a) temporary employment, (b) part-time employment and (c) temporary and part-time employment. [24878]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Information for travel-to-work areas is not available from the labour force survey. The available information for standard regions for autumn—September to November—1995 is shown in the table.

Manufactured Goods

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 3 April, Official Report, column 259, if the price of exports has increased faster than the price of imports. [25541]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The prices of imported and exported manufactured goods since 1992, measured on a unit value index basis, have increased by the same amount.

Business Investment

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on how business investment is calculated. [25549]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 19 April 1996]: Business investment is calculated by the Office of National Statistics as the sum of all non-residential fixed investment by the private sector and public corporations—except national health trust hospitals—excluding investment in land and existing buildings. The data for business investment are available on the ONS central shared database, which can be accessed via the Library of the House.

European Union

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the gross payment, receipts and net payment made by the United Kingdom to the European Union in each year since 1973. [25789]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The Government's estimates of the United Kingdom's gross contributions, receipts and net contributions to European Community institutions for the financial years 1973–74 to 1994–95, together with the latest estimate of our contribution in 1995–96, are set out in the table.

Inland Revenue (Computers)

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the savings to be made from the privatisation of the Inland Revenue's computer system; what figure was provided for contingencies under the original agreement; and how much has been spent of this fund to date. [25883]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 19 April 1996]: In May 1994 savings were estimated at £225 million over 10 years. In January 1996 the last phase of work was transferred to the Inland Revenue's partner, EDS Ltd. Following that transfer, estimates of savings are being updated but there is no expectation of any significant change. There is no specific amount allocated for contingencies under the contract with EDS.

EDS Ltd.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on what date EDS reached the maximum limit on its earned profit from its contract with Inland Revenue; if excess profits are now being paid back to the Inland Revenue; and if he will make a statement. [25884]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 19 April 1996]: The Inland Revenue contract with EDS includes an annual profit-sharing mechanism. At the end of its financial year,

EDS provides the department with a statement showing the revenue received from the contract and the costs as included in the company's audited accounts. Where the profit exceeds a percentage target level, calculated in accordance with the contract formula, this is shared between the department and EDS equally.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Iron and Steel Employees Readaptation Benefits Scheme

Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the Government's expenditure on the iron and steel employees readaptation benefits scheme in each year between 1979 and 1994. [25825]

Mr. Page: The figures requested on the iron and steel employees readaptation benefit scheme are as follows:

£ million

Financial year	Total ISERBS expenditure	Commission contribution
1979–80	22.0	6.0
1980–81	40.0	6.0
1981–82	112.0	28.0
1982–83	106.0	43.0
1983–84	47.6	31.2
1984–85	31.6	16.2
1985–86	22.7	13.1
1986–87	19.6	8.3
1987–88	17.7	5.6
1988–89	5.7	5.7
1989–90	5.2	1.5
1990–91	12.6	0.5
1991–92	31.8	3.3
1992–93	51.1	5.4
1993–94	28.7	5.2

In addition, the UK Government received European Coal and Steel Community aid from the European Commission as a contribution towards the expenditure. There is a time lag between ISERBS payments being made and receipt of the contribution for the European Commission.

Fluorescent Lighting Tubes

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many fluorescent tube lights were manufactured in the United Kingdom in the last year for which figures are available. [25746]

Mr. Page: Accurate data are available on the number of fluorescent tubes manufactured in the UK, although total exports of linear and compact tubes are recorded at 23,767,365 for 1994.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many major companies in the United Kingdom produce fluorescent lighting tubes. [25749]

Mr. Page: Three major companies manufacture fluorescent lighting tubes in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many fluorescent lighting tubes were imported into this country in the last year for which figures are available. [25745]

Mr. Page: The information is published by the Office for National Statistics in "Business Monitors" MM20 and MQ20, copies of which are available in the Library of the House. Fluorescent tubes are found in section 778.22 of the standard international trade classification.

Vehicle Batteries

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to ensure the safe reclamation and recycling of vehicle batteries. [25750]

Mr. Page: A very high proportion of spent vehicle batteries has traditionally been recycled in the UK. Within the context of the Government's producer responsibility initiative, the industry has given a commitment to maintain a minimum 90 per cent. recycling rate.

The recycling of lead-acid batteries is controlled under part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990. This ensures that recycling activities are not carried out in a manner that harms human health, or cause pollution of the environment. In addition, the movement of lead-acid batteries is subject to separate controls under the Control of Pollution (Special Waste) Regulations 1980.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to comply with European Union directives on the safe disposal and recycling of vehicle batteries. [25741]

Mr. Page: The GB Batteries and Accumulators (Containing Dangerous Substances) Regulations 1994, SI 1994 No. 232, implemented certain provisions of directives 91/157/EEC and 93/86/EEC, which relate to various battery types, including those normally used for starting, lighting and ignition in vehicles.

A provision requiring the separate collection of batteries caught by the directives was not transposed into law, since recycling rates in excess of 90 per cent. have traditionally been achieved for lead-acid batteries, and the industry is committed to maintaining this performance.

Chernobyl

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was his Department's (a) contribution towards and (b) participation in the conference on "One Decade After Chernobyl: Summing up the Consequences of the Accident" summing up the radiological consequences, held in Vienna on 8 to 12 April; and if he will place the papers to, and conclusions from, the conference in the Library. [26265]

Mr. Page: The conference on "One Decade After Chernobyl: Summing up the Consequences of the Accident" was sponsored by the European Commission, the International Atomic Energy Agency and the World Health Organisation. It was mainly directed at technical specialists with the aim of consolidating scientific international consensus on the health and environmental effects of the Chernobyl accident. It also reviewed the social, economic and political aftermath and considered the improvements in nuclear safety which have followed. Of the issues covered by the conference, nuclear safety is the only one which falls directly to my Department. The Government's expert representation on that issue was provided by the Health and Safety Executives nuclear installations inspectorate. The IAEA, on behalf of the sponsors, will publish the proceedings of the conference. I will arrange for a copy of the final conclusions to be placed in the Library of the House as soon as these are available.

Nuclear Energy

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what discussions British Nuclear Fuels has had recently with Japanese electrical utilities or Japanese nuclear fuel companies for the provision of mixed oxide fuel; [26269]

(2) what proportion of the existing capacity at the British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. at the Sellafield mixed oxide plant has been contracted for the next 10 years; which countries have placed contracts for the production of MOX fuel at the plant; and what is the total value of contracts placed to date for MOX fuel production. [26270]

Mr. Page: Commercial and operational matters are the responsibility of the board of British Nuclear Fuels.

Mr. Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on (a) the current status of materials accountancy and (b) the application of nuclear safeguards at the British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. Sellafield mixed oxide plant. [26259]

Mr. Page: The Sellafield MOX plants are subject to Euratom safeguards and the terms of the UK—Euratom—IAEA safeguards agreement. The MOX demonstration facility has been in operation since 1993 and is subject to Euratom safeguards, with regular materials accountancy reports being supplied in accordance with regulation 3227/76. The Sellafield MOX plant is currently under construction, necessary documentation has been provided to Euratom and discussions are in progress on the detailed safeguard arrangements.

Trade (China)

Ms Quin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the figures for imports and exports and for invisible and visible trade between the United Kingdom and the People's Republic of China for each of the past 10 years. [25205]

Mr. Oppenheim: Information on the UK's visible trade with the People's Republic of China between 1985 and 1994 is published by the Office for National Statistics in tables 12.5 and 12.6 of the "Annual Abstract of Statistics", 1996 edition. The same information for 1995 is published by the Office for National Statistics in table 2 of the most recent "Business Monitor", MM20. Copies of both the above publications are available in the Library of the House. Information on invisible trade between the UK and the People's Republic of China for 1994 will be published by the Office for National Statistics in the April 1996 issue of "Economic Trends". Information for previous years is not available.

Social Chapter

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 22 March, Official Report, columns 372–73, what proportion of the difference in unit labour costs between United Kingdom employees and other EU countries' employees is attributable to the effects of the adoption of directives under the social chapter. [25553]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 19 April 1996]: The impact of directives, individually and collectively, on costs will differ between countries depending on national regulations and practice before the adoption of the directives at a European level. To date, directives adopted under the Maastricht agreement on social policy have not been implemented in member states.

European Works Council and Parental Leave Directives

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 22 March, Official Report, columns 372–73, what is his Department's estimate of the effect on the number in employment if (a) the European works council directive and (b) the parental leave directive, were introduced; and if he will place in the Library the information upon which his estimates are based. [25552]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 19 April 1996]: Both the parental leave directive and the European works council directive would impose costs on business and reduce flexibility. This would result in the loss of jobs, both in the short and in the longer term. The number of jobs lost would depend on a range of factors—and, in particular, on how individual businesses respond to the additional cost. It is therefore not possible to make a reliable estimate of the effect the directives would have on employment.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Strangers Gallery Tickets

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what consultations he has had over facilitating the administration of Gallery tickets. [24748]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: The Administration Committee, at its meeting on 27 June 1995, reviewed the current arrangements for the allocation of tickets to the Special Galleries and Members' parties on the Line of Route. However, my Committee did not support a proposal that a formal visits office should be established to administer the arrangements for these visits.

Post Arrangements

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee what changes are planned to the system of transfer of post from the letterboard in the Members' Lobby to the internal post; and if he will make a statement. [24750]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: The Serjeant at Arms and Black Rod have commissioned a study into all aspects of the mail system for both Houses. This will include examination of the transfer of post which has not been collected from the Members' letterboard into the mail system.

I understand that the Serjeant at Arms will be writing to the hon. Member.

Hours and Procedures

32. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Lord President of the Council whether he will set up an all-party review of the hours and procedures of the House. [24753]

Mr. Newton: The hours at which the House sits were reviewed by the Select Committee on Sittings of the House—the Jopling Committee—in 1992, and changes in procedure designed to reduce sitting hours were agreed to by the House last year. The procedures of the House are also kept under review by the Select Committee on Procedure, which is itself an all-party Committee.

Oral Statements

32. Mr. Skinner: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many Government oral statements have been given in the Commons since January. [24755]

Mr. Newton: From 11 January until 3 April there were 26 oral statements given in the House of Commons.

Private Members' Balloted Motions

35. Mr. Spearing: To ask the Lord President of the Council what was the number of private Members' balloted motions debated in each of the Sessions (a) 1991–92, (b) 1992–93 and (c) 1993–94. [24757]

Mr. Newton: The numbers of private Members' balloted motions debated in each of the specified Sessions are as follows:

(a) 8

(b) 14

(c) 19.

Heads of Government

Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Lord President of the Council if he will bring forward proposals to permit Heads of foreign Governments to address the House from within the Chamber. [24754]

Mr. Newton: No. I believe that the present arrangements for Heads of State or Heads of Government to address both Houses in the Royal Gallery or in Westminster Hall are satisfactory.

Legislation

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Lord President of the Council how many Henry VIII clauses have been contained in legislation each year since 1979; and if he will list the relevant clause, Act or statutory instrument in each case. [24528]

Mr. Newton: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Lord President of the Council when he last reviewed the arrangements for dealing with urgent legislation in the House. [24756]

Mr. Newton: I have not undertaken such a review, but if the hon. Member has suggestions to make in the light of recent or current experience, I should be glad to consider them or to invite consideration by the Procedure Committee.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Anthony Duncan

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's application to Dublin district court for the extradition of Anthony Duncan. [25617]

The Attorney-General: Anthony Duncan was arrested in the Republic of Ireland on 11 April on domestic charges. He is wanted in this country to face charges in connection with bombs in Brighton and Bognor in August 1994. Extradition between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland takes place under the Backing of Warrants (Republic of Ireland) Act 1965 and the corresponding legislation of the Republic of Ireland. In accordance with the provision of that legislation and following my hon. and learned Friend the Solicitor-General's decision to prosecute, the Metropolitan police delivered an arrest warrant for Duncan and supporting papers to their Irish counterparts on 12 April. The original arrest warrant, however, was not produced in the Irish court. There is a conflict of evidence as to how this came about, but a fresh warrant has now been delivered to the authorities in the Republic of Ireland.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Entry Clearance (Indian sub-continent)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the number of entry clearance officers at British high commission offices in (a) Pakistan, (b) Sri Lanka, (c) India and (d) Bangladesh on 30 March. [25572]

Mr. Hanley: The numbers of entry clearance officers serving at the British high commission offices in Bangladesh, India, Pakistan and Sri Lanka are as follows:

(a) Pakistan:
- i. Islamabad: 28
- ii. Karachi: 5

(b) Sri Lanka: 4 officers

(c) India:
- i. Bombay: 10
- ii. Calcutta: 1
- iii. Madras: 2
- iv. New Delhi: 12

(d) Bangladesh: 12

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the current average target time set for the United Kingdom post in Islamabad to (a) prepare and (b) dispatch to the United Kingdom explanatory statements concerning refusal to grant entry clearance; what the target times were in each quarter over the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [26237]

Mr. Hanley: Since 1989, the target times for the preparation and submission of appeal statements by the high commission in Islamabad have been one month for non-settlement appeals and three months for settlement appeals.

British Steel

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total value of commercial orders placed by his Department with British Steel plc in each year from 1988 to 1995. [25815]

Mr. Hanley: We have no record of any order having been placed with British Steel.

France (Middle East Visit)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions took place with the French Government before the visit by the French Foreign Minister to Israel, Syria and Lebanon; and if he will make a statement. [25568]

Mr. Hanley: France has kept us fully informed of the progress of the visit and negotiations.

UN Peacekeeping Forces

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the countries in which the United Kingdom has United Nations peacekeeping forces; and what are the numbers of peacekeepers in each country. [25573]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Four hundred and twenty-two British troops are deployed as follows on United Nations peacekeeping operations:

Cyprus (UNFICYP): 388

Kuwait/Iraq (UNIKOM): 16

Angola (UNAVEM): 3

Croatia (UNPF, UNMOP, UNTAES): 5

Georgia (UNOMIG): 10

Lake Kojanovskoe, Russia

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his letter of 3 April to the hon. Member for Linglithgow, what conclusions have been drawn about funding action to counter contamination of Lake Kojanovskoe. [25532]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: It is too early to consider what concrete assistance might be made available to counteract contamination of Lake Kojanovskoe. The conclusions of the EU-financed study are being considered and will be followed up with the Commission in due course.

Liberia

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on the situation of British nationals remaining in Liberia. [25831]

Mr. Hanley: Our consular correspondent has reported that, of the 12 British nationals in Liberia, nine have elected to remain in Liberia and one is undecided. They are all well. The whereabouts and condition of the two other British nationals are unknown.

Council of Europe

Mr. Terry Davis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the proposal for a second summit of Heads of State and Government of the Council of Europe. [26279]

Mr. David Davis: We support the principle of a second summit. Such a summit might best be held in 1999 when the Council of Europe will, in any event, wish to mark its 50th anniversary.

Mrs. Shazia Bi

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what decision has been taken on the application by Mrs. Shazia Bi, Ref: IMM/C7321, to the United Kingdom post in Islamabad to join her husband in the United Kingdom; and on what date that decision was taken. [26244]

Mr. Hanley: I have asked the high commission at Islamabad for details and will arrange for the hon. Member to receive a substantive reply from the migration and visa correspondence unit as soon as possible.

PRIME MINISTER

Sexual Exploitation of Children Congress

Mr. Cox: To ask the Prime Minister which Minister will attend the world congress against commercial sexual exploitation of children in Stockholm in August; and if he will make a statement. [26098]

The Prime Minister: The congress will be attended by the Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, my hon. Friend the Member for Leeds, North-East (Mr. Kirkhope).

Nuclear Safety and Security Summit

Sir Anthony Durant: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the outcome of the nuclear safety and security summit in Moscow. [26550]

The Prime Minister: I attended the Moscow summit on nuclear safety and security on 19 and 20 April. I have arranged for copies of the declaration and background documents to be placed in the Library of the House. The summit was chaired jointly by President Yeltsin and by President Chirac as the current chairman of the Group of Seven. Other G7 leaders attended, as did President Kuchma of Ukraine for the later part of the summit.

There was unanimous agreement at the summit on the priority that needs to be given to ensuring the safety of nuclear power plants and the security of nuclear materials. We agreed that the convention on nuclear safety must be ratified and brought into force as soon as possible; the United Kingdom has already ratified the convention.

At the same time, the summit endorsed the importance of market-oriented reforms in the energy sector, and the contribution this can make to nuclear safety. Investment strategies should be based on least-cost planning, and energy efficiency and conservation have an important role to play.

We also agreed on the need to work for the early adoption of a convention on the safety of radioactive waste management, which is currently under negotiation. The disposal of radioactive waste at sea is prohibited under the 1993 amendment to the London convention, which the UK and most other countries have accepted; at the summit, Russia gave a firm commitment to accept the amendment. We agreed to work together to identify strategies for the safe management and eventual disposal of fissile material no longer required for defence purposes.

President Kuchma attended the summit for the discussion on Chernobyl. We welcomed his decision to close Chernobyl by the year 2000 in accordance with the memorandum of understanding signed between the G7 and the Ukraine last year, and we confirmed our commitment to implement the memorandum.

The summit also discussed the need to prevent any illicit trafficking in nuclear materials. We agreed on a programme to combat any such trafficking, and to increase co-operation to ensure the safe storage and protection of nuclear materials. Existing co-ordination between national agencies will be enhanced.

The countries at the summit also committed themselves to conclude and sign a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty by September 1996.

The summit also provided a timely opportunity to discuss the main international issues, particularly Lebanon and Bosnia. On Lebanon, we agreed on the need for an immediate ceasefire and a political solution to end the present crisis and enable the wider peace process to resume. We endorsed current diplomatic efforts to bring this about. On Bosnia, we agreed that the deployment of the implementation force and implementation of the military part of the Dayton agreement had gone well, but that more rapid progress was needed on key issues such as elections, reconstruction and the return of refugees.

Before the summit, I visited Prague and Kiev for discussions with the Governments of the Czech Republic and Ukraine. In Moscow I had meetings with President Yeltsin, Prime Minister Chernomydin and others. I also took the opportunity to have bilateral meetings with Prime Minister Chretien and President Clinton and to discuss our problems with the European Union over beef exports informally with the other EU leaders present.

In sum, therefore, the Moscow summit made a major contribution to nuclear safety, through agreements reached and endorsed. It was also an invaluable occasion to take forward other significant issues informally with my fellow Heads of State and Governments, and to reinforce links with them. It was a success on all counts.

Monarchy

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Prime Minister if he will introduce a measure to abolish the monarchy. [26282]

The Prime Minister: No.

Libya

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what response Her Majesty's Government are suggesting to the United Nations as a reply to the initiative to the United Nations from Libya to send an inspection team to the alleged chemical weapons site at Rabta in the Libyan desert; and if he will make a statement. [26287]

The Prime Minister: We believe that if Libya seriously wishes to dispel concerns about chemical weapons activities at this or any other site, she should accede to and comply fully with the provisions of the chemical weapons convention.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Sub-Saharan Africa

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) how many advisers seconded by the British Government to sub-Saharan Africa are advising on the reorganisation of (a) health services and (b) education services; [25580]

(2) how many advisers seconded by the British Government to sub-Saharan Africa are advising on the reorganisation of (a) police, (b) army and (c) civil service; [25579]

(3) if he will list (a) the number of British advisers presently serving in sub-Saharan Africa, (b) their job description and (c) the length of their contracts. [25583]

Mr. Hanley: The ODA currently employs the following professional advisers in its overseas offices in sub-Saharan Africa:

Professional discipline	Number
Health	4
Education	1
Government institutions, including the civil service and the police	1
Others	27

It also employs technical co-operation officers to work on specific programmes and projects. The number of such personnel currently engaged is:

Professional discipline	Number
Health	18
Education	24
Government institutions, including the civil service and the police	52
Others	91

In addition to the above, there are 47 military and civilian personnel advising on a range of defence issues deployed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and MOD on behalf of the British Government to sub-Saharan Africa.

Individual terms and job descriptions vary widely between discipline, location, programme and project and can be provided only at disproportionate cost. The FCO and ODA also contract with consultancy services to provide advisers whose individual contract terms can also be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Liberia

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement regarding the situation in Liberia. [25834]

Mr. Hanley: We condemn the recent fighting in Monrovia and call on all factions to re-establish the ceasefire and abide by the terms of the Abuja agreement. We support international efforts to restore order.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment he has made of the humanitarian requirements of the population of Liberia; [25832]

(2) what reports he has received about the withdrawal of aid agencies from Liberia. [25833]

Mr. Hanley: Latest UN reports indicate that nearly all aid agencies have withdrawn from Liberia and most are temporarily based in Abidjan and Freetown pending an improvement in the security situation. The UN hopes to carry out assessments very soon but, in the meantime, the World Food Programme is achieving a modest food distribution in Monrovia.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the current political and security situation in Liberia. [25830]

Mr. Hanley: The fighting in Monrovia is a severe setback to the peace process. We welcome the efforts of the UN and the countries of the region to restore order.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with (a) his EU counterparts, (b) the United States of America and (c) the UN regarding the situation in Liberia. [25829]

Mr. Hanley: We have participated in discussions in the UN Security Council and are in close touch with our EU partners and the US regarding the situation in Liberia.

The Gambia

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the timetable for the transition to democracy programme in The Gambia. [25828]

Mr. Hanley: We regret that the Gambian Government has been unable to meet have their own timetable for transition to democracy, despite help from the donor community. We have urged the regime to press ahead and to lift the ban on political activity and release or bring to trial all detainees.

HEALTH

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he has received on the health effects of the incineration of BSE-affected cattle; and how many suitable incinerators are available. [23840]

Mr. Horam: BSE—affected cattle are currently incinerated at nine incinerators authorised under part 1 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 for animal carcase incineration. The Act requires that conditions are included in authorisations to achieve the objective of ensuring that the best available techniques not entailing excessive cost are used to prevent, minimise and render harmless emissions.

Public Bodies

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department were listed incorrectly in the answer given by my hon. Friend the Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville) to the hon. Member for Cannock and Burntwood (Dr. Wright) on 4 May 1995, Official Report, column 276. [26425]

Mr. Horam: I regret that the reply given by my predecessor contained two errors. The Standing Dental Advisory Committee was incorrectly listed as publishing its advice to Government as a statutory requirement; additionally, the Health Advisory Service was incorrectly listed as publishing an annual report as a statutory requirement. In neither case is there such a requirement.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many appointments to the public bodies listed in "Public Bodies" for his Department were made during 1994–95 from names supplied by the public appointments unit; and if he will list them. [25956]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the then Under-Secretary of State gave to the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 17 January 1995 at column 440.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department have a statutory base, and which (a) publish their advice to Government, (b) publish an annual report and (c) lay an annual report before Parliament (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20098]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 12 March 1996]: The following Department of Health advisory non-departmental public bodies have a statutory basis:

Administration of Radioactive Substances Advisory Committee;

Advisory Board on the Registration of Homeopathic Products;

British Pharmacopoeia Commission;

Clinical Standards Advisory Group;

Committee on the Safety of Medicines;

Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation;

Medicines Commission;

Standing Dental Advisory Committee;

Standing Medical Advisory Committee;

Standing Nursing and Midwifery Advisory Committee;

Standing Pharmaceutical Advisory Committee;

Unrelated Live Transplant Regulatory Authority.

The following Department of Health advisory non-departmental public bodies are required to:

Publish their advice to the Government:

(i) under a statutory requirement:

None;

(ii) voluntarily:

Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy;

Medical Workforce Standing Advisory Committee.

Publish and annual report:

(i) under a Statutory requirement:

Advisory Board on the Registration of Homeopathic Products;

British Pharmacopoeia Commission;

Committee on the Safety of Medicines;

Medicines Commission.

(ii) voluntarily:

Advisory Committee on Distinction Awards;

Advisory Committee on the Microbiological Safety of Food;

Committee on the Carcinogenicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment;

Committee on Medical Aspects of Food and Nutrition Policy;

Committee on the Mutagenicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment;

Committee on the Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment;

Health Advisory Service.

Lay an annual report before Parliament:

(i) under a statutory requirement:

Advisory Board on the Registration of Homeopathic Products;

British Pharmacopoeia Commission;

Committee on the Safety of Medicines;

Medicines Commission.

(ii) Voluntarily:

None.

Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of a possible link between the incidence of attention deficit hyperactivity disorder in children and forceps deliveries of babies. [25203]

Mr. Bowis: Forceps deliveries have not been shown to be associated with the development of attention deficit hyperactivity disorder in children.

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the incidence of attention deficit hyperactivity disorder in children (a) in England as a whole and (b) in each standard planning region. [25204]

Mr. Bowis: Information on the incidence of attention deficit hyperactivity disorder is not available centrally. Recent research suggests that severe hyperkinetic disorder, which is one form of attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, is found in about one in 200 children.

Psychiatric Care (Minors)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many psychiatric beds have been provided for children and adolescents by (a) the NHS and (b) the independent sector for each year since 1979. [26186]

Mr. Bowis: Information on the number of psychiatric beds provided for adolescents is not available.

Data on the number of child psychiatric beds are contained in "Bed availability for England", copies of which are available in the Library. The latest year for which data are available is 1994–95.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children have been admitted to psychiatric care for each year since 1979. [26187]

Mr. Bowis: The information is shown in the table.

Admission to psychiatric care in national health service hospitals: England 1979–1986, 1989–90 to 1994–95

	Age group
Year	0–14	15–19
1979	1,910	5,810
1980	2,040	5,960
1981	1,990	6,030
1982	1,890	5,450
1983	1,890	5,460
1984	1,870	5,530
1985	1,900	5,440
1986	1,780	5,270
1989–90	2,600	5,600
1990–91	2,600	5,000
1991–92	2,300	4,900
1992–93	2,900	5,600
1993–94	3,100	5,700
1994–95[1]	3,100	5,400

[1] Provisional figures

Notes:

1. Figures for 1979 to 1986 are based on calendar years and are derived from the Mental Health Enquiry.
2. Figures for 1989–90 to 1994–95 are estimates based on the number of hospital episodes in the financial year. The two sources are not consistent in their definition of admissions so there is some discontinuity in the data. Reliable data are not available for 1987–88 and 1988–89.

1979 to 1986 Mental Health Enquiry.

Nursing and Residential Homes

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the maximum number of beds permitted by his Department in (a) a nursing home and (b) a residential care home. [26188]

Mr. Bowis: We make no such prescription for either category of home.

Prescription Drugs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the percentages of fatal side-effects of prescription drugs which are not reported under the yellow card scheme. [26276]

Mr. Malone: Under the yellow card scheme, reports of suspected adverse reactions to licensed medicines are received from doctors, dentists and coroners. A report of a suspected adverse drug reaction does not necessarily mean that the reaction was caused by the drug. The scheme is voluntary and not all adverse reactions are reported. The percentage of all fatal adverse reactions which are not reported through the scheme is not known.

Cancelled Operations

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will provide a quarterly analysis of the number of operations cancelled in each region since figures have been published. [19497]

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library figures by (a) district health authority and (b) regional health authority, of the number of operations cancelled on the day of, or the day after, admission to hospital and the number of those patients not readmitted within a month for (i) the second and (b) and third quarter of 1995–96. [19471]

Mr. Horam [pursuant to his reply, 7 March 1996, c. 324]: I regret that my previous reply contained an error. The percentage of operations cancelled in 1994–95 should read less than 1 per cent., not 0.01 per cent.

DEFENCE

Menwith Hill

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if (a) the squadron leader in charge and (b) other British employees at Menwith Hill have signed the US Official Secrets Act. [20631]

Mr. Soames: It is not our policy to comment on specific security arrangements.

Mrs. Mahon: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many United States personnel are under the command of the squadron leader in charge at Menwith Hill. [20627]

Mr. Soames: None.

Joint Rapid Deployment Force (Ferries)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the roll-on roll-off ferries that are to be bought for the joint rapid deployment force, announced on 26 March, will be manned by British seafarers; and if he will make a statement. [25479]

Mr. Soames: No decision has yet been reached on the most appropriate manning arrangements for the roll-on roll-off ferries to support the joint rapid deployment force. An announcement will be made in the summer, once all relevant factors have been properly weighed.

RAF (Commitments)

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the capacity of the RAF to meet its commitments. [25797]

Mr. Soames: I am fully confident that the RAF continues to have the capacity to meet its operational commitments.

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures he has introduced to reduce overstretch in the RAF. [25798]

Mr. Soames: The Royal Air Force has introduced a number of temporary measures to minimise the burden on personnel during the current drawdown. These include provisions to postpone tactical and operational evaluations and scale down formal inspections and staff visits. Such measures are a sensible way of ensuring that operational capabilities are maintained over this transitional period.

British Steel

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total value of commercial orders placed by his Department with British Steel plc in each year from 1988 to 1995. [25819]

Mr. Arbuthnot: In the years concerned, the value of the orders placed directly with British Steel plc by the Department was:

1989	836,000
1990	168,000
1991	80,000
1992	2,330,000
1993	297,000
1994	42,000
1995	37,000

All figures are approximate.

Most steel for the Ministry of Defence will be procured via MOD prime contractors for shipbuilding, tanks etcetera.

NATO

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the impact of the decision by the Chief of the Air Staff to postpone tactical evaluations and operational evaluations on the United Kingdom's ability to fulfil its NATO obligations. [25587]

Mr. Soames: The planned postponement of Tacevals and Opevals in the period to March 1997 will have no detrimental impact on the UK's ability to fulfil its obligations to NATO.

Oral Communication Classes

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assistance he is giving Air Chief Marshall Sir Michael Graydon in implementing oral communication classes at the Royal Air Force's officer training school, Cranwell; what plans he has to recommend these classes to the other armed services training establishments; and if he will make a statement. [25565]

Mr. Soames: Oral communication is already taught at the officer training colleges of all three services. The syllabuses are kept under constant review and are subject to change as appropriate by the respective commanding officers. Contrary to recent reports in the press, there are no plans to change the existing oral communication syllabus at the RAF college, Cranwell.

Beaufort's Dyke

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what explosions recorded by the British Geological Survey in the immediate vicinity of Beaufort's dyke in 1995 were related to his Ministry's activities. [25720]

Mr. Soames: From the data supplied by the British Geological Survey, one explosion in the immediate vicinity of Beaufort's dyke corresponds to the record of a controlled detonation of a second world war mine on 7 February 1995 on a beach in the West Freugh range area.

Battle of Trafalgar Bicentenary

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what preparations his Department is making for the commemoration of the bicentenary of the battle of Trafalgar and the death of Nelson. [25915]

Mr. Soames: It is too early for any arrangements or plans to have been considered by my Department for this important event in October 2005.

Trident Submarines

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what were the costs quoted in the original bid and what are the current estimated costs of (a) Project DI54 and (b) the nuclear refitting process for Trident strategic submarine ballistic nuclear; what are the reasons for the difference; and from what source additional expenditure will be met. [25616]

Mr. Arbuthnot: In respect of Project D154, I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on 16 April 1996, Official Report, column 458. The financial projections which underpinned the 1993 decision to place nuclear work at Devonport took into account capital costs and total operating costs associated with conducting both nuclear and non-nuclear refitting work over a 15-year period. These amounted to some £5,284 million for the option selected. The cost of the Trident refitting programme will be influenced by the outcome of negotiations on the sale of Devonport royal dockyard and the actual duration of refits. The information is not available in the form requested.

Laser Weapons Protocol

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of (a) the practical interpretation and (b) the implications of the laser weapons protocol, with particular reference to intentional and unintentional blinding. [25206]

Mr. Soames: We welcome the adoption by the UN weaponry convention review conference in October 1995 of the protocol on blinding laser weapons. We believe that the protocol meets humanitarian concerns without adversely affecting normal military uses of lasers. Our interpretation is that it would prohibit the employment of laser weapons specifically designed, whether as their sole combat purpose or as one of their combat purposes, to cause permanent blindness to unenhanced vision.

As to the employment of other lasers, states parties are required to take feasible precautions to avoid the incidence of permanent blindness to unenhanced vision. The user's intention—or lack of it—to cause blindness is not, as such, material. We are currently studying the implications of this protocol and will take a decision on whether to ratify it following the final session of the review conference.

RAF St. Athan (Training Flights)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the times and the days that training flights have been undertaken from RAF St. Athan indicating the land bearings below the airspace used for training. [25418]

Mr. Soames: Three types of flying training are undertaken from RAF St. Athan:

(a) Elementary flying training for the members of the University of Wales university air squadron using Bulldog aircraft.

(b) Air experience flying for air cadets using Bulldog aircraft.

(c) Air experience and training for air cadets using gliders.

The station is also used as a forward operating base for Hawk aircraft from RAF Valley using the Pembrey range for advanced fast jet training.

Hawk aircraft flying takes place during the station's normal hours of operation which are 0830 to 1700 hours Monday to Thursday and 0830 to 1600 hours on Fridays. Bulldog aircraft and gliders also operate outside of these hours during the summer months and at weekends throughout the year.

Training flights use much of the available airspace. Details of land bearings and the specific time and date for flights could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Land Mines

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress is being made in the international discussions aimed at outlawing the use of land mines. [9385]

Mr. David Davis [pursuant to the answer, 17 January 1996, c. 579]: In order to make greater progress in achieving international agreement on effective measures to reduce the dangers to civilians from land mines, we have taken a series of national decisions following a review of our policy, as follows:

The UK will work actively towards a total, world-wide ban on anti-personnel mines. Should such a ban be agreed, we would give up our anti-personnel land mine capability, and would destroy our stocks accordingly.

All our current anti-personnel mines are non-self-destructing. We intend to destroy almost half our current stockpile as soon as practicable. Until a world-wide ban on all anti-personnel mines is agreed, we shall also pursue current procurement plans to replace our existing mines with self-destructing ones.

We shall also pursue, as an interim step, early international agreement on the elimination of all non-self-destructing anti-personnel mines, which pose the greatest danger to civilians.

The UK's armed forces do not currently use anti-personnel mines operationally, anywhere in the world. Nor will they use our current stocks of non-self-destructing anti-personnel mines in future operations unless, in exceptional circumstances, Ministers are satisfied that their use is essential to ensure that British troops are properly protected and there are no alternative ways of achieving that end.

In such exceptional circumstances, we would use non-self-destructing anti-personnel mines only in marked, fenced or monitored areas; would clear them as soon as feasible; and any use would be strictly in accordance with the laws of armed conflict, including the strengthened protocol II to the UN weaponry convention which we hope will be agreed shortly.

We shall also, as a matter of priority, pursue the development of alternatives to anti-personnel mines. Should viable alternatives emerge—none has yet—we would cease to use all anti-personnel mines, of any type, and would destroy all our stocks.

In addition, we shall with immediate effect extend the scope of our export moratorium, to prohibit the export of all types of anti-personnel mines to all destinations.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefit Claimants

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in Lancashire received (a) income support and (b) housing benefit in each year from 1979 to 1996. [24879]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ursula Brennan to Mr. Peter Pike, dated 19 April 1996:

As Peter Mathison is away from the office on annual leave at the moment, the Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people in Lancashire received (a) Income Support (IS) and (b) Housing Benefit (HB) in each year from 1979 to 1996.

The information is not available in the format requested. IS statistics are collated by Benefits Agency (BA) Districts and not for specific geographical areas. The areas covered by some Districts may fall outside of the County boundaries. Additionally, data prior to 1991 is only available on a national basis. Information has been provided for the BA Districts of Blackburn and Accrington; Blackpool; Bolton; Burnley, Pendle and Rossendale; Lancashire and South Cumbria; Preston; West Pennine; and South West Lancashire. Further breakdown of District information is not possible. Available IS statistics are in the attached Table 1.

HB statistics are collated by Local Authority area. Information is only available from 1988. For 1988 and 1989 some information has been estimated as some Local Authorities did not provide statistical data. Information has been provided for the Local Authorities of Blackburn; Blackpool; Burnley; Chorley; Fylde; Hyndburn; Lancaster; Pendle; Preston; Ribble Valley; Rossendale; South Ribble; West Lancashire; and Wyre. HB statistics relate to claims from both IS and non-IS recipients. Available HB statistics are in the attached Table 2.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Table 1: Income Support Live Claims for Lancashire from 1991

	Income Support live claims
May 1991	212,329
May 1992	228,417
May 1993	248,700
May 1994	252,941
May 1995	251,972

Table 2: Housing benefit claims for Lancashire from 1988

	Housing benefit cases for Lancashire
May 1988[1]	80,570
May 1989[1]	77,550
May 1990	82,080
May 1991	81,240
May 1992	86,720
May 1993	88,840
May 1994	93,970
May 1995	96,880

[1] Estimated figures.

Information refers to the number of benefit units, which may be for a single person or a couple.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many persons were receiving sickness benefit and invalidity benefit on 31 March 1995; [25801]

(2) how many persons are currently receiving incapacity benefit. [25802]

Mr. Burt: The available information is in the table.

	Number (million)
Persons receiving sickness and invalidity benefit at 12 April 1995[1]	[2]1.88
Persons receiving incapacity benefit at 31 March 1996	[3]1.81

[1] Information from the day before the introduction of incapacity benefit, the nearest date to the 31 March 1995 for which information is available.

[2] From 1 per cent. sample of all claims in Great Britain.

[3] 100 Per cent. count of all claims in Great Britain. Excludes a small number of cases paid clerically.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have (a) passed and (b) failed the incapacity benefit all-work test in the City of Durham constituency since its introduction. [24917]

Mr. Burt: The administration of incapacity benefit is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ursula Brennan to Mr. Gerry Steinberg, dated 19 April 1996:

As Peter Mathison is away from the office on annual leave at the moment, the Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking how many people have (a) passed and (b) failed the Incapacity Benefit's all-work test in the City of Durham constituency since its introduction.

The information is not available in the format requested. Statistics are not kept which are specific to Parliamentary Constituencies, but are kept for Benefits Agency (BA) Districts. The BA District of North Durham comprises the BA Offices of Durham, Chester-Le-Street, Peterlee, Seaham and Stanley.

The information available for North Durham District is contained in the table below:

Allowed following reference to BA Medical Services (BAMS) on the all work test	Disallowed following reference to BAMS on the all work test
7,512	1,787

Notes:
1. The information is for the period 13 April 95 to 29 February 96.
2. Data is only available for cases counted by the computer system and therefore does not include details of any cases paid clerically, the numbers of which are very low.
3. Figures are provisional and subject to change.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many people who have been found capable for work under the all-work test of capacity have subsequently signed on as unemployed (a) in total and (b) for each month since April 1995; [25364]

(2) how many people who have been found capable of work under the all-work test of capacity who have subsequently signed on as unemployed receive (a) unemployment benefit only, (b) income support only and (c) unemployment benefit and income support. [25365]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I have been asked to reply.

In the period 1995 to February 1996, 33,454 people who have been disallowed incapacity benefit following the all-work test have made a claim for unemployment-related benefits. A monthly breakdown is given in the table. No figures are available regarding the type of unemployment benefit that these claimants have received.

April 1995 to February 1996

Month	Number of claimants	Cumulative total
April	153	153
May	275	428
June	510	938
July	1,448	2,386
August	2,880	5,266
September	3,708	8,974
October	4,519	13,493
November	5,059	18,552
December	4,366	22,918
January	4,801	27,719
February	5,735	33,454

Equality Monitoring

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what changes he has made to the funding of equality monitoring in his Department; for what reasons; and what representations he has received in respect of these changes; [25944]

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact of the reduction in equality monitoring in his Department and its agencies on (a) promoting equal opportunities and (b) eliminating discrimination; [25946]

(3) what factors underlay his decision to abandon ethnic origin re-survey exercises among staff in (a) the Child Support Agency and (b) the Contributions Agency. [25945]

Mr. Burt: There is no separate resource allocation for equality monitoring. The great majority of equal opportunities monitoring is carried out as an integral part of the wider monitoring of the Department's personnel policies and practices. This monitoring will continue in order to highlight both best practice and areas of concern, and to work to improve equality of opportunity for all staff.

Along with other civil service Departments, this Department has been looking at ways of reducing costs and, as part of this wider review, has looked at its work plans for equal opportunities. We have decided not to undertake any ethnicity follow-up surveys within the Department or its agencies in the next three years. The Department already has a very good overall response rate of 86 per cent., and this action will not affect our ability to promote equal opportunities and eliminate discrimination in the workplace.

Representations about changes to equality monitoring have been received from the trade union sides in DSS headquarters and the Contributions Agency.

Benefits Agency Advice Line

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) on what date the review of the Benefits Agency's freeline benefit advice line service will be published; when he evaluated a preliminary draft of the report; and if he will make a statement on the future of this service; [26280]

(2) on what date the review of the Benefits Agency's freeline benefit advice line service will be published; and what evaluation he has made of preliminary drafts of the report. [25440]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ursula Brennan to Mr. Frank Field, dated 22 April 1996:

As Peter Mathison is away from the office on annual leave at the moment, the Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking on what date the review of the Benefits Agency's freeline benefit advice line service will be published; what evaluation he has made of preliminary drafts of the report; and if he will make a statement on the future of this service.

This is an internal review, which is still continuing, and I cannot comment on any possible findings in advance of its completion. Once the review has been completed, the results will be evaluated in the context of the Agency's overall benefit advice services and running costs.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for, Social Security how many appointments to the public bodies listed in "Public Bodies" for his Department were made during 1994–95 from names supplied by the public appointments unit; and if he will list them. [25961]

Mr. Burt: There was one such appointment in the year ending 31 March 1995, Mrs. Nicole Davoud OBE, to the Disability Living Allowance Advisory Board.

Family Credit

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the effect on public revenues in 1996–97 and 1997–98 of allowing families in receipt of family credit to claim a child care disregard for each dependent child. [18241]

Mr. Roger Evans [pursuant to his reply, 11 March 1996, c. 477]: The estimated cost of disregarding all child care expenses for recipients of family credit would be in the region of £40 million in the long run, without allowing for behavioural effects. If all such costs were disregarded, there would be a strong incentive for people not paying for child care at the moment, to declare some payment. There are around 100,000 people on family credit who would be faced with such an incentive, which could lead to very substantial further costs.

Notes:

Estimates based on data 1991–92 and 1993 family expenditure surveys, and the 1994 annual statistical inquiry, uprated to 1996–97 and 1997–98 levels adjusted using data on child care in the 1993–94 family resources survey.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social security what has been the annual expenditure on cold weather payments for each of the last five years. [22779]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table:

Year	Expenditure (£000s)
1990–91	8,600
1991–92	23,000
1992–93	15,000
1993–94	12,400
1994–95	77
1995–96[1]	63,000

1. Up to and including 19 March 1996.

LORD PRESIDENT OF THE COUNCIL

Ministerial Duties

31. Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Lord President of the Council what proportion of his time is spent on (a) presiding at Cabinet Committees, (b) other Privy Council duties and (c) his duties as Leader of the House of Commons; and if he will make a statement. [24752]

Mr. Newton: As much time as the respective duties require.

EDS Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Lord President of the Council what savings to date have been made by his Department as a result of outsourcing arrangements made with the EDS computer system; what assessment he has made of the equivalent costs for carrying out this work in-house; and if he will make a statement. [24234]

Mr. Newton: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 28 February to the hon. Member for Wallasey (Ms Eagle), Official Report, column 612.

TRANSPORT

Railways (Safety)

12. Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on safety arrangements for the railways. [24728]

Mr. Watts: We have implemented in full the Health and Safety Commission's recommendations for an enhanced safety regime. The independent Health and Safety Executive will continue to enforce health and safety requirements.

Rail Freight

16. Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he intends to take to increase freight traffic on the rail system. [24733]

21. Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans the Government have to increase rail freight. [24738]

Sir George Young: Privatisation and liberalisation are essential if rail is to attract and retain freight customers. British Rail's trainload freight subsidiaries and rail express systems have been sold; final bids for Freightliner are being evaluated. Two companies have set up own-account rail freight operations using powers in the Railways Act 1993. We continue to provide targeted support for the industry through the two freight grant schemes.

Motorways (Repairs)

19. Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received on the state of repair of (a) the M4 and (b) other motorway routes. [24736]

Mr. Watts: Over the last 12 months there have been no representations on the state of repair of the M4 in England.

On other motorway routes there have been a total of four representations, relating to the M11 in Cambridgeshire and near Bishop's Stortford, the M25 between junctions 2 and 3, the M69 in Leicestershire and the M42 in the west midlands.

Rail Franchising

20. Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on progress on franchising passenger services in the south of England. [24737]

Mr. Watts: Franchises have been awarded for South West Trains, Great Western, Gatwick Express and Network SouthCentral. Grants will reduce from £243 million paid to British Rail in 1995–96 to £95 million in year seven for private operators.

All franchises will operate at least the existing number of trains with some service enhancements. London and South Coast Railways, which has been awarded the Network SouthCentral franchise, intends to introduce new off-peak and Sunday services to south London.

Invitations to tender have been issued for other south of England franchises—South Eastern, Chiltern and South Wales and West—and LTS Rail has been re-tendered to previously shortlisted bidders.

Road Fatalities

22. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what has been the trend in the numbers of road fatalities in the past 10 years. [24740]

Mr. Norris: In the 10 years to 1994, fatalities have fallen by 35 per cent., from 5,599 in 1984 to 3,650 in 1994.

Public Transport (Investment)

24. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what increases in the level of investment in public transport have taken place following reductions in the roads budget within the last year. [24742]

Mr. Norris: Our priority, as far as possible, has been to maintain funding for public transport in the face of an overall reduction in the transport budget. Rail investment is expected to increase significantly above the £1 billion spent last year, following privatisation of Railtrack and other businesses, while investment in London Transport this year will be at around last year's historically high level of £1.1 billion. Details are set out in the Transport report 1996, CM 3206.

Buses (Standing Passengers)

25. Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received about standing passengers on buses. [24744]

Mr. Norris: I have received representations over the past 12 months which reflect concerns ranging from safety to the comfort of standing passengers. They have been in the context of both the current United Kingdom legislation and the effects of possible harmonisation of bus and coach construction requirements across the EU.

East London Line

26. Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions he has recently had with London Transport on the East London line; and if he will make a statement. [24745]

Mr. Norris: I often discuss the East London line with the chairman of London Transport at our regular meetings.

Robin Hood Line

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next expects to meet local authorities in the east midlands to discuss the completion of the Robin Hood line. [24741]

Mr. Norris: My officials are in regular contact with officers of Nottinghamshire county council and partner local authorities about the line. We currently await further information in support of the value for money case for stage 3. I would be happy to meet the local authorities myself if such a meeting would serve a useful purpose but have no current plans to do so.

Supplementary Track Access Charges

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much additional subsidy has been made available to train operating companies and freight operating companies to cover the cost of supplementary track access charges. [24548]

Mr. Watts: The level of grant paid by the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising to passenger train operating companies takes into account all factors, including likely financial efforts of the introduction of the track access performance regime and the expected level of compensation payments from Railtrack.

Overall the level of grant paid by Opraf to the first five franchises by year seven will be one third the current funding paid to BR.

Crash Barriers

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what studies he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into (i) the need to erect a barrier fence to prevent vehicles coming into collision with mature trees planted on embankments and verges, (ii) hazards posed by the installation of an intermittent barrier, (iii) means to prevent the impact of vehicles with lighting columns installed on verges and embankments and (iv) the use of barriers to prevent vehicles coming into contact with adjacent roads, waterways and other hazards; [25144]

(2) what his policy is on the installation of crash cushions; [25148]

(3) what criteria determine whether the drop on the verge side of a road or carriageway should be protected by a verge barrier; and when such criteria were last revised; [25142]

(4) what assessment he has made of the effect of the installation of crash cushions on (a) the Birmingham ring road, (b) the Aston expressway, (c) the Stourbridge ring road, (d) the black country route and (e) the Queen Elizabeth II bridge; [25150]

(5) if he will commission a study to consider the provision of a continuous verge barrier on roads, motorways and dual carriageways (i) with traffic flows of greater than 10,000 vehicles per day and (ii) with an accident incidence rate of more than 1.5 times the average for that class of road. [25145]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Patrick Nicholls, dated 22 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent questions about the use of crash cushions and safety fences and barriers at the roadside verge.

Where a safety problem is identified on the highway it is the Agency's practice to consider what the range of options are for dealing with it. These options would embrace both measures that would help to avoid the risk occurring in the first place and those that would mitigate the effect of an accident should one occur. Thus, should a situation arise where the use of crash cushions was an option, then it would be considered alongside other possible options. It is difficult to generalise as to where and in what circumstances they would be used since this depends to a large extent on the local situation in terms of type of problem, highway layout and other local factors.

The Highways Agency has made no assessment of the crash cushions installed on the following roads since none of them form part of the trunk road network:

(a) Birmingham Ring Road,

(b) Aston Expressway,

(c) Stourbridge Ring Road and

(d) Black Country Route.

Since 1991 the operator of the Queen Elizabeth II Bridge has reported 9 incidents of vehicular impact with the crash cushions installed at the toll booth buffers.

Regarding the use of vehicle restraint systems along the verges of highways, the criteria for their application, last revised in 1985, are given in the Highways Agency Standard TD19/85 "Safety Fences and Barriers". A copy is in the House of Commons Library. Prior to this revision a study was carried out into the need to protect vehicles from mature trees on the embankments or verges of highways as well as the need to protect adjacent roads, waterways and other hazards. The results of this study were incorporated into the advice given in TD19/85. This Standard is currently under review to see whether any changes are required to cater for example, intermittent safety fences and barriers and protection to lighting columns. In making the review we will be taking account of international best practice.

Regarding your question on the use of continuous verge barriers, I would point out that nearly all trunk roads have traffic flows greater than 10,000 vehicles per day. The cost of providing continuous verge barriers on all motorways and trunk roads is estimated at over £500 million and unlikely to be cost effective. Where accident rates are above average along a stretch of road, or at a particular site or junction, they are investigated to determine if there is an identifiable cause that can be remedied. Verge barriers would be provided if that was the appropriate solution.

The present policy of only providing vehicle protection at identified obstructions and hazards is well tested and considered to be cost effective. It is reviewed from time to time and amended in the light of changing circumstances if this was cost effective to do so. In the circumstances I see no need to commission a study to consider the provision of continuous verge barriers at the moment.

I hope that this is helpful.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated value of each of the publicly owned assets which will be handed over to London and Continental Railways in respect of the channel tunnel rail link. [25594]

Mr. Watts: The two Government-owned companies, Union Railways and European Passenger Services, will be transferred to London and Continental Railways. The net assets of these companies are contained in their annual report and accounts, copies of which are in the Library of the House. Valuations of certain specific assets—including valuations for the King's Cross and Stratford railway lands and St. Pancras Station, which are to be leased or transferred to London and Continental but which do not form part of Union Railways—were given in answers to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 12 March 1996, Official Report, column 572, on 13 March 1996, columns 606-607 and on 14 March 1996, columns 720-21.

Parking

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the adequacy of local government control of parking; and if he will make a statement. [25033]

Mr. Norris: The enforcement of on-street parking restrictions by London boroughs since they assumed this responsibility in July 1994 has proved a success. Enforcement has been more effectively directed to support traffic management priorities, and traffic flow has improved as a result. Local authorities outside London have been invited to apply to the Secretary of State to assume this responsibility.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many heavy goods vehicles on Department of Transport contracts in relation to (a) the second Severn crossing and (b) other contracts have been found to be in breach of transport regulations. [26278]

Mr. Norris: The information requested can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many appointments to the public bodies listed in "Public Bodies" for his Department were made during 1994–95 from names supplied by the public appointments unit; and if he will list them. [25962]

Mr. Norris: One such appointment was made—Mr. Kenneth Ashcroft, who was appointed to Trinity House lighthouse authority in April 1994.

Rural Bus Services

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the provision of rural bus services; and if he will make a statement. [24739]

Mr. Norris: The provision of rural bus services has been monitored and evaluated in an extensive programme of research undertaken by the Transport Research Laboratory on behalf of the Department of Transport.

Transportation Links (North-west)

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received from industry regarding improvement of transportation links to the north-west. [24731]

Sir George Young: I regularly receive representations from industry about the improvement of transportation links to the north west.

Pollution

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what action he is taking to reduce (a) the number of vehicle journeys and (b) pollution from motor vehicles following the two most recent reports from the Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants; and if he will make a statement. [24743]

Mr. Norris: Following the publication in November 1995 on "Non Biological Particles and Health" by the Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants, the Government issued a preliminary response. The response set out policy measures from all sectors including road transport to abate emissions of particles to address both the findings of this report and the recommendation for an air quality standard for particles from the expert panel of air quality standards published at the same time. The Government undertook to progress the matter in the context of the air quality strategy being prepared under the Environment Act 1995 which will be issued for consultation later this year.

The Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants report, "Asthma and Outdoor Pollution", was published in October 1995. The report found that the link between air pollution and asthma in the United Kingdom was much less definite than has been suggested. Further research will be carried out as a part of a programme of work into air pollution and respiratory disease funded by the Department of Health, the Department of the Environment and the Medical Research Council.

Network SouthCentral

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the levels of investment in Network SouthCentral. [24729]

Mr. Watts: Earlier this month, the Network SouthCentral rail franchise was awarded to London and South Coast Ltd. The company plans to invest some £10 million over the next three years, the bulk of it in rolling stock and stations.

WALES

Neighbourhood Hospitals

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which neighbourhood hospitals have general practice beds; on what terms; in what numbers; and if he will make a statement. [26242]

Mr. Hague: As there is no official definition of "neighbourhood hospital", all hospitals which had general practice beds during 1994–95 are listed in the following table. Information on the terms on which these beds are administered is not held centrally.

Dental Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which Welsh NHS community health care trusts employ salaried dentists. [26288]

Mr. Hague: At 30 September 1995, the following Welsh NHS trusts employed community dental officers:

Cardiff Community Healthcare
Carmarthen and District
Ceredigion and Mid Wales
Clwydian Community Care
Gwent Community
Gwynedd Community
Llandough
Llanelli Dinefwr
Pembrokeshire
Powys Health Care

Training and Enterprise Councils

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what (a) was the gross public spending for each year since 1990–91, in 1995–96 prices and (b) is the projected expenditure for each year to 1997–98, in 1995–96 prices, of training and enterprise councils. [25977]

Mr. Richards: Information is not available centrally in the form requested. Expenditure by Departments on training and enterprise services delivered via TECs in Wales since their inception in 1990–91, together with planned expenditure on such programmes over the next two years, is given in the following table.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many appointments to the public bodies listed in "Public Bodies" for his Department were made during 1994–95 from names supplied by the public appointments unit; and if he will list them. [25963]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Of the appointments made by the Secretary of State during 1994–95, none was of a candidate whose name had been supplied by the public appointments unit.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Industrial Research and Technology Unit

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how much money was spent on the Industrial Research and Technology Unit of the Department of Economic Development in each year since 1990–91; and what is the planned spending for (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98; [26225]

(2) how much money is spent on technical clubs established in the textile and food sectors to promote the level of environmental awareness; [26222]

(3) if he will make a statement on the nature and business of the technology development programme in the Department of Economic Development. [26224]

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Industrial Research and Technology Unit under its chief executive, Mr. Greg McConnell. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from F. G. McConnell to Mr. Eric Illsley, dated 22 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me as Chief Executive of the Industrial Research and Technology Unit (IRTU) to reply to your questions about expenditure on IRTU and on Technical Clubs in the textile and food sectors and about the nature and business of the Technology Development Programme.

IRTU's total expenditure since its establishment in March 1992 and planned expenditure for future years is as follows:

1992–93	14.3 (actual)
1993–94	18.2 (actual)
1994–95	18.2 (actual)
1995–96	16.9 (estimate)
1996–97	17.8 (planned)
1997–98	17.8 (planned)
1898–99	17.8 (planned)

Expenditure on environmental awareness raising for industry and commerce as a whole in Northern Ireland was £29,339 in 1994/95 and £44,999 in 1995/96. Within this, the total expenditure on the textile and food Technical Clubs is small (£800 to date) and relates only to the administrative expenses of meetings.

The Technology Development Programme (TDP) is administered by IRTU and funded through EU Structural Funds. The total allocation for TDP is £19.4 million for the period 1994–99. To date £11.4 million has been committed to 9 projects; a further £8 million will be committed in October 1996.

The aim of TDP is to assist industry and the universities to develop their ability to undertake leading edge, industrially exploitable and commercially focused research. The programme concentrates on five main areas of activity—R&D Facilities, Demonstration Projects, Physical Infrastructure, Collaboration and Calibration, Testing and Standardisation.

I hope you will find this reply useful.

New Housing and Roads

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what mechanisms facilitate formal consultation between the various Departments in Northern Ireland regarding the building of (a) new stock by the Housing Executive and (b) new roads. [26196]

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Planning Service under its chief executive, Mr. T. W. Stewart. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from T. W. Stewart to Mr. Eric Illsley, dated 22 April 1996:

Mr. Moss has asked me to reply to your Question about what mechanisms facilitate formal consultations between various Departments in Northern Ireland regarding the building of (a) new stock by the Housing Executive and (b) new roads.

All formal consultation on new developments including housing and roads proposals are dealt with through the normal planning procedure set out in the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1991. This involves a wide range of consultations with statutory and non-statutory bodies including local district councils, the Department of the Environment and its various Agencies (Roads, Water, Environment and Heritage), plus the public and interested community groups. There is also wide consultation at the inception stage through the Area Plan consultation process for each local district area.

Community Projects

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland for what reasons there is a planned decrease in spending on community projects within the Department of Economic Development in (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1997–98. [26203]

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Training and Employment Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Ian Walters. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to given.

Letter from Ian Walters to Mr. Eric Illsley, dated 22 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me as Chief Executive of the Training and Employment Agency to reply to your question about the funding of community projects.

The decision to reduce the budget allocated to the Action for Community Employment (ACE) programme was taken against the background of the very encouraging performance of the Northern Ireland economy. With unemployment now at its lowest level for 14 years, employment opportunities increasing and with record numbers of job vacancies being notified by employers to Training and Employment Agency offices, the need to maintain community based temporary work programmes at former levels has diminished. Public Expenditure priorities have moved towards measures which will further encourage and sustain these very positive economic trends.

This Agency recognises a continuing need to assist job seekers and, in addition to its many other services and programmes, still expects to spend £46 million this financial year to provide over 8000 places for the long term unemployed on community based projects funded under ACE and the pilot Community Work Programme. In addition, £2 million is available under the package of support for ACE schemes announced by Baroness Denton on 19 February 1996.

I hope that you find this reply helpful.

Out-of-town Retail Centres

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what formal public consultation is required in respect of plans to develop out-of-town retail centres. [26205]

Mr. Ancram: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Planning Service under its chief executive, Mr. T. W. Stewart. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from T. W. Stewart to Mr. Eric Illsley, dated 22 April 1996:

Mr Moss has asked me to reply to your Question about formal public consultations in respect of plans to develop out of town retail centres.

Where an application for planning permission is made, except in certain minor cases, Article 21 of the Planning (Northern Ireland) Order 1991 requires that a notice of the application is published in at least one newspaper circulating in the locality in which the land to which the application site relates is situated. In addition, occupiers of land adjoining the application site are notified by means of a non statutory Neighbour Notification Scheme. The appropriate local District Council is also consulted on all applications.

Certain major applications are subjected to special procedures under Article 31 of the 1991 Order which may involve the holding of a local public inquiry by the Planning Appeals Commission for the purpose of considering and reporting on representations made in respect of an application.

Political Organisations

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the evidence he has collated about the existence of (a) the British Ulster Unionist party, (b) Democratic Partnership, (c) Independent Democratic Unionist party, (d) No Going Back, (e) the Northern Ireland party, (f) the Northern Ireland Women's Coalition, (g) Ulster Christian Democrat party and (h) Ulster's Independent Voice; and which have functioned as political parties. [25979]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Each of these organisations responded to the consultation paper issued by the Government on 3 April, and made representations to be included on the list of political parties eligible to contest the forthcoming elections in Northern Ireland.

SCOTLAND

Barlinnie Prison (Asbestos)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what date the Scottish Prison Service chief executive received the report of the Institute of Occupational Medicine on residual asbestos remaining in Barlinnie prison. [24871]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. John McFall, dated 22 April 1996:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your question asking about the date on which I received the report of the Institute of Occupational Medicine (IOM) on residual asbestos remaining in Barlinnie Prison.

The report was received in SPS HQ on 25 January and was passed to Barlinnie on 26 January. Subsequent tests which the IOM undertook on Barlinnie's behalf during March confirmed that asbestos levels were well within the safety limits. Tenders are now being sought for the immediate removal of what has been classified as "poor" quality asbestos. Other areas where asbestos is present but is classified as being either in a good or fair condition will be removed as part of an action plan being prepared by local management. In the meantime such areas will be monitored regularly at 3 monthly intervals, and where there are any signs of deterioration, arrangements will be made immediately for appropriate removal.

Electricity Generating Plants

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the capacity utilisation of electricity generating plants in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [25315]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The total electricity generating capacity in Scotland is approximately 10 GW. This total excludes the oil-fired generating station at Inverkip which is presently under care and maintenance. Scotland's peak winter demand is about 6 GW.

Gas-fired Generating Unit (Gartcosh)

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the consequences for the Scottish coal industry of the proposed gas-fired generating unit at Gartcosh. [25314]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: PowerGen's application for consent under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 to build a gas-fired generating plant at Gartcosh is at present the subject of a consultation exercise. It would not be appropriate for me to make any assessment of the possible impact of PowerGen's proposals until the consultation exercise is complete. It may be appropriate to hold a public inquiry.

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he plans to make a decision on a public inquiry into the application under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 by Powergen to construct a gas-fired generating unit at Gartcosh. [25316]

Mr. Forsyth: The relevant planning authority has a statutory period of four months in which to submit a report to me on PowerGen's proposal to build a power station at Gartcosh. Once the report is received, I will consider it together with the advice of my consultees and any representations I may receive from other interested parties. I will then decide whether it is necessary to hold a public inquiry. Such an inquiry is mandatory if the planning authority formally objects to the proposals.

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what consultations he plans to hold before reaching a decision on the application under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 submitted to him by Powergen. [25317]

Mr. Forsyth: Before determining PowerGen's application, I shall follow the procedures set out in the Electricity Act 1989 and the Environmental Assessment (Scotland) Regulations 1988, which entail giving due consideration to the views of the relevant planning authority. I shall also consult other interested parties, including Scottish Natural Heritage and the Scottish Environment Protection Agency. It is open to interested parties to respond to the proposals. I shall take account of all representations received.

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he plans to make a decision on the application by PowerGen for consent under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 to construct a gas-fired generating unit at Gartcosh. [25318]

Mr. Forsyth: PowerGen's application for consent under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989 was received in the Scottish Office on 5 March. It is not possible at this stage for me to give an idea as to when I will be in a position to reach a decision on the application.

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the applications for consent he has received under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989; and what decisions he has made on those applications. [25319]

Mr. Forsyth: The information is set out in the table, which lists all section 36 applications received in the Scottish Office since the Electricity Act 1989 was introduced.

Applicant	Application date	Proposals	Decision date	Decision
Hydro-Electric	4 March 1991	Extension to Peterhead power station	5 June 1991	Approved

Electricity Interconnector

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the present arrangements for the electricity interconnector between England and Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [25321]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The arrangements for the operation of the electricity interconnector between Scotland and England are a matter for its owners, those who have contracted to use it and the regulator.

Charities

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what restrictions are placed on the activities of registered charities which bring financial benefit to private companies. [25450]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: If a Scottish charity that is a recognised body under the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) (Scotland) Act 1990 were to apply its funds to bring financial benefit to a private company, the Inland Revenue would consider the extent to which its tax exemption would be restricted. In addition, the Scottish Charities Office has power to investigate any alleged misconduct or mismanagement in the administration of a Scottish charity.

Environmentally Sensitive Areas

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many consultants have been engaged by the Scottish Office Agriculture and Fisheries Department to monitor the implementation and operation of environmentally sensitive area plans; and what is the cost of such monitoring operations; [23013]

(2) if he will make a statement on the remit of consultants engaged by his Department to evaluate the existing management plans in environmentally sensitive areas; [23014]

(3) steps have been taken by his Department to identify the extent to which locally based farmers or crofters may be employed by his Department for the purposes of monitoring and evaluating environmentally sensitive area plans. [23015]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 1 April 1996]: A 10-year contract for monitoring the environmentally sensitive area scheme was won in competition by a consortium comprising the Macaulay Land Use Research Institute, the Institute of Terrestrial Ecology, Biomathematics and Statistics Scotland and AOC Scotland Ltd. Their remit is to assess the impact of the scheme on the biological, landscape and archaeological interest within each area. The average annual cost is £300,000.

To complement this work, local agricultural staff undertake an annual review of individual farm and croft conservation plans to ensure that the requirements of the scheme are being met and the conservation objectives achieved. I am satisfied that this co-ordinated approach represents the best value for money.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Youth Training Allowance

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much the present minimum weekly training allowance for youth training would be currently, if it had been uprated in line with inflation since 1990. [25443]

Mr. Paice: The present minimum weekly training allowance for youth training, which may be supplemented by employers, would be £37.93 for 16-year-olds and £45 for 17-year-olds and above if it had been uprated in line with inflation since 1990.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will give the number and percentage of young people in Sunderland who are participating in youth training and the percentage who are receiving more than the minimum allowance from employers or training provider. [25444]

Mr. Paice: Some 2,100 young people in Sunderland are currently participating in youth training. Of the 16-year-old cohort eligible to leave school in the summer of 1995, 25 per cent. in Sunderland went into youth training. Information on those who are receiving more than the minimum allowance in Sunderland is not available.

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to increase the minimum weekly training allowance for youth training. [25442]

Mr. Paice: There are no plans to increase the minimum weekly training allowance.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which TECs have set (a) higher minimum levels of training allowance for non-employed trainees than the minimum permitted and (b) more than the 19.5 days per annum holiday. [25445]

Mr. Paice: Training and enterprise councils are free to set allowances above the minimum. Information on TEC practice in this connection is not held centrally.

British Steel

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the total value of commercial orders placed by her Department, and by the Education and Employment Departments prior to merger, with British Steel plc in each year from 1988 to 1995. [25813]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested is not available without incurring disproportionate cost.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many of the providers participating in phase 1 of the voucher scheme will be inspected (a) within three months, (b) within six months, (c) within nine months and (d) within 12 months of beginning to operate under the voucher scheme. [25605]

Mr. Robin Squire: Inspections by registered nursery education inspectors cannot begin until after the Nursery Education and Grant-Maintained Schools Bill has received Royal Assent. The Office for Standards in Education's initial planning estimate is that all voluntary and private providers will be inspected within their first year of operation—that is, by April 1997.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many providers who have been given initial validation in respect of phase 1 of the voucher scheme will provide (a) one session a week, (b) two sessions a week, (c) three sessions a week, (d) four sessions a week and (e) five sessions a week; [25601]

(2) what proportion of vouchers in phase 1 of the voucher scheme have been redeemed in respect of places (a) in the private sector, (b) in the voluntary sector and (c) in the maintained sector. [25598]

Mr. Squire: Information on where parents have chosen to redeem nursery education vouchers, and on the number of sessions provided, will be available once vouchers returned from providers have been analysed.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will set out the calculation which underlay the ministerial statement that under the scheme of vouchers for pre-school education a local authority will be better off if just one additional four-year-old is able to use its provisions. [25851]

Mr. Squire: In phase 2, the deduction from each local authority's budget will be the voucher value multiplied by the number of four-year-olds in maintained provision in that local education authority area in the 1995–96 academic year, taking into account the number of terms for which each child attends. If the LEA recruits the same number of four-year-olds in the same termly pattern, all this money will be recovered. If the local authority provides for an additional four-year-old, an additional voucher, or a portion of that sum, depending on the number of terms that child is in school, will pass to the LEA. The arrangements in phase 1 are similar, except for an adjustment to allow for four-year-old pupils resident outside the phase 1 areas and who therefore do not hold vouchers.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many institutions in the (a) private, (b) voluntary and (c) maintained sectors have applied for initial validation in phase 1 of the voucher scheme; and how many such institutions did not previously provide places for four-year-olds. [25604]

Mr. Squire: Six hundred and twenty-eight private and voluntary sector and 494 maintained sector providers have been initially validated to date. Forty of these did not have any four-year-olds on roll at the time of registration, but had capacity to provide for them.

Implementation Group on Information Technology

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what were the total preparation and publication costs of the Follett report; [25596]

(2) what have been the total operational costs of the Follett implementation group on information technology; and to whom that money was awarded. [25597]

Mr. Forth: These are matters for the higher education funding bodies. I have asked the chief executive of the Higher Education Funding Council for England to respond in writing to the hon. Member.

Sight and Sound

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will investigate the award of contracts to Sight and Sound by the former South Thames training and enterprise council. [26285]

Mr. Paice: Training and enterprise councils are private companies. The award of contracts by TECs to providers of training is a matter for the companies concerned.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will investigate the quality of courses being operated by Sight and Sound through training and enterprise councils. [26284]

Mr. Paice: This is for the training and enterprise councils to investigate under the "TEC Quality Assurance: Supplier Management" framework.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Acceptance in Lieu of Inheritance Tax

Mr. Faulds: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the objects and property accepted in satisfaction of inheritance tax during the financial year ended 31 March; and if she will specify (a) the amount of tax satisfied in each case, (b) which offers carried conditions as to destination, (c) the date in each case of the recommendations received by her from the Museums and Galleries Commission for the acceptance of objects, (d) the total for the financial year of the tax thus satisfied and (e) how much of this total was covered in the public accounts by means of resort to the reserve in accordance with Government policy as announced on 26 July 1985, Official Report, column 779. [25516]

Mr. Sproat: The information requested is as follows:

Item	Tax satisfied £	Conditions as to destination	Date of MGC recommendations
George I pier glasses	128,086.00	Conditional	20 January 1994
Reynolds' Count Ugolino	121,067.00	Conditional	15 December 1994

Six works of art including paintings by Dubuffet, Hodgkin, and Caulfield and a sculpture by Brancusi	4,336,500.00	Wish	27 April 1995

The total expenditure in respect of the AIL scheme for the financial year 1995–96 was £9,406,959. Three offers, for which a total of £7,346,500 tax was forgone, and for which the DNH accordingly paid the Inland Revenue, were met by calls on the reserve.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Agriculture Council

Sir Jim Lester: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Luxembourg on 1 April; and if he will make a statement. [24702]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer the hon. Member to my statement to the House on 3 April 1996, Official Report, columns 405-408.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much money was spent, under the common agricultural policy, on set-aside in the United Kingdom in 1995; and how much will be spent in 1996. [26230]

Mr. Baldry: Payments for set-aside in the UK in the 1995–96 financial year are estimated to total £214.6 million. The estimate for payments in 1996–97 is £226.3 million.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of CAP fraud were reported in each year since 1993, in Great Britain. [26216]

Mr. Baldry: Fraud is difficult to define, being a matter of criminal intention. However, the United Kingdom, along with all other member states, is required to report to the Commission cases of irregularity in CAP schemes, exceeding 4,000 ecu. An irregularity is an overclaim on the part of the claimant, either deliberately or through error. The information for the period in question for the United Kingdom is as follows:

Number of cases

Year	Totals
1993	179
1994	228
1995	219

Source:
UK CAP scheme irregularities reported under Council regulation 595/91.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those of his Department's advisory non-departmental public bodies which (a) the Government are required to consult prior to legislative proposals and (b) the Government are required to publish their response to advice supplied by them. [21852]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 21 March 1996]: Under section 62(3) of the Medicines Act 1968, Agriculture Ministers are required to consult the Veterinary Products Committee before making an order. There is no requirement to consult our other advisory non-departmental public bodies prior to legislative proposals nor to publish our response to advice supplied by them, or the Veterinary Products Committee.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many appointments to the public bodies listed in "Public Bodies" for his Department were made during 1994–95 from names supplied by the public appointments unit; and if he will list them. [25949]

Mr. Willetts: Seventeen new appointments were made in 1994–95 to the public bodies sponsored by the Departments and agencies for which my right hon. Friend is responsible. None was as a result of information supplied by the public appointments unit.

Public Appointments Unit

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many people from each region appear on both the public appointments unit central and reserve lists. [25964]

Mr. Willetts: It is not possible to give fully accurate information as individuals may be counted as being in more one region if they live in one area and work in another, or if they have homes in different areas.

Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland also maintain their own central lists.

The available information requested is as follows:

Region	Number of people on the public appointments unit list
East Anglia	708
East Midlands	258
West Midlands	315
South East	2,622
Northern	174
North West	282
South West	401
Yorkshire and Humberside	286
Northern Ireland	[1] 9
Scotland	[1] 130
Wales	[1] 106
Elsewhere	[2] 36
Total	5,327

[1]Individuals in this category are those who are currently living or working overseas.
[2]This figure is higher than the total number of people currently on the public appointments unit's list (5,085 at 18 April 1996).

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many of the public appointments made in 1994–95 were public appointments unit nominees; and if he will list these appointments. [25947]

Mr. Willetts: The public appointments unit believes that 180 appointments were made following nomination by the unit during 1994–95. A list of these appointments is as follows:

Nationalised Industries and Public Corporations:
Commonwealth Development Corporation—1 appointment
Independent Television Commission—1 appointment

Written Answers to Questions

Tuesday 23 April 1996

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Information Superhighway

Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when he expects the publication of the report "Ethical Issues of Information Superhighways". [25245]

Mr. Freeman: The CCTA research paper on "Ethical Issues of Information Superhighways" will be published shortly.

Public Appointments

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are the working hours of Sir Leonard Peach, Commissioner for Public Appointments. [25566]

Mr. Freeman: Sir Len Peach's contract is for three days a week.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when the Commissioner for Public Appointments intends to publish guidance on public appointments, incorporating a code of practice, in line with the recommendations of the first report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life. [26747]

Mr. Freeman: The Commissioner for Public Appointments, Sir Len Peach, published earlier today a code of practice and guidance on public appointments. Copies have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Mr. Asif Majid

Mr. Madden: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the explanatory statement relating to the refusal of entry to the United Kingdom of Mr. Asif Majid, Ref: GV100/31308, sent to the Immigration Appellate Authority in the United Kingdom by the post in Islamabad on 16 February 1995 was received by the IAA; and if he will make a statement. [26352]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The explanatory statement was received by the immigration appellate authorities on 24 February 1995.

Mentally Handicappped Witnesses

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department in how many cases in each year since 1993 the courts have used the testimony of mentally handicapped individuals in order to secure a conviction. [25209]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Cynog Dafis, dated 23 April 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your Question about mentally handicapped witnesses.

I am sorry to have to tell you that this information is not available and could only be obtained at a disproportionate cost.

Primary Legislation (Availability)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proportion of primary legislation was readily available in its current amended form (a) November 1992 and (b) at the latest date for which figures are available. [25141]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Approximately one third of primary legislation was available in its current amended form in November 1992 and approximately the same proportion is available at the present time.

Magistrates Court Closures

Sir Roger Moate: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement about the consequences of local government reorganisation, with particular reference to the creation of unitary authorities, for the statutory rights of objection to the proposed closure of magistrates courts where such rights are currently held by county councils; and what assessment he has made of transferring this right in all cases to district and borough councils. [24995]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: After local government reorganisation in a magistrates courts committee's area, the statutory rights of appeal in relation to the proposed closure of a magistrates court will be held by any unitary authority in the area or by the county council insofar as it is not a unitary authority. The same bodies will be responsible for the funding of the magistrates courts service in their area. No assessment has been made of transferring the right of appeal to local authorities which do not contribute to the funding of the magistrates courts service, as would happen if the right were transferred in all cases to district and borough councils.

Industrial Tribunal Appeals (Northern Ireland)

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many appeals there have been from industrial tribunals in Northern Ireland to the Court of Appeal since 1 January 1990. [24989]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The number of appeals from industrial tribunals in Northern Ireland to the Court of Appeal since 1 January 1990 is 32.

The figures for each year from 1990 to 1995 are as follows:

	Number
1990	5
1991	5
1992	6
1993	3
1994	5
1995	8
Total	32

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many awards of an industrial tribunal in Northern Ireland have been altered on appeal on the grounds that the tribunal misdirected itself. [24990]

Mr. Evans: The number of awards of an industrial tribunal in Northern Ireland which have been altered by the Court of Appeal since 1990 is two.

The figures for each year from 1990 to 1995 are as follows:

	Number
1990	1
1992	0
1993	0
1994	0
1995	0
Total	2

Land Registry

Sir Michael Shersby: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what consultations the Land Registry has had with other parties regarding disclosure of the price paid for a property; and if he will make a statement. [24951]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Land Registry became open to public inspection in 1990 and in December 1993 the Land Registry issued a consultation paper on a proposal to restore "price paid" information to the Land Register.

Some 45 responses were received from professional bodies and other interested parties. The Lord Chancellor and the Chief Land Registrar decided that other proposals—to extend the mechanisms for bringing unregistered property on to the Land Register—should take higher priority. The Lord Chancellor plans to proceed with those proposals when there is an appropriate legislative opportunity.

Contempt of Court Act 1981

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to amend section 10 of the Contempt of Court Act 1981; and if he will make a statement. [25455]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Government at present have no plans to introduce amending legislation.

TREASURY

St. Thomas's Hospital

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer of St. Thomas's hospital has been listed by the private financial panel in the Department of Health section for a private finance investment. [25529]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 18 April 1996]: A private finance initiative project for St. Thomas's hospital was included in the illustrative list published by the private finance panel on 29 November 1995.

Investments

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the percentage growth in business investment in 1995 over its level in 1994; if he will make a statement on the differences between the growth in business investment in 1995 and his forecast in the November 1995 Red Book; and what is his revised forecast of business investment for 1996 and 1997. [25550]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 19 April 1996]: Business investment, as defined in chapter 3 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report", grew by 1.8 per cent. in 1995 compared with the November FSBR forecast of $3\frac{1}{4}$ per cent. This difference reflects subsequent revisions to the Office for National Statistics data for 1994 and earlier quarters of 1995. Business investment actually grew more quickly in 1995 Q3 and Q4 than forecast. The FSBR forecast shows business investment growth of 9 per cent. in 1996 and $6\frac{3}{4}$ per cent. in the year to the first half of 1997.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of funding to be made available to his Department through the private finance initiative in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26167]

Mr. Jack: Estimated levels of private sector capital spending for private finance initiative projects within the Chancellor's departments for 1995–96, 1996–97 and 1997–98 are nil, £40 million and £40 million respectively. Further details about the private finance initiative and capital spending can be found in table 6.4 and 6.5 of the Treasury "Financial Statement and Budget Report" for 1995–96.

Environmental Accounts

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what use he plans to make of the data on the interactions between the economy and the environment contained in the Government's satellite environmental accounts, referred to in paragraph 154 of "This Common Inheritance" annual report 1996. [25841]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Environmental factors have performed an important role in economic policy decisions in recent year. The pilot environmental accounts will improve Government's ability to judge the environmental effects of economic policy.

Women's Pay

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what were the average hourly earnings for (a) female part-time employees, (b) female full-time manual employees and (c) female full-time non-manual employees as a percentage of those of the equivalent male employees by standard region. [26245]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Average hourly earnings of male and female full-time manual and non-manual employees in April 1995, by standard region, are published in "New Earnings Survey 1995", part A, a copy of which is held in the House of Commons Library. Average hourly earnings of female part-time employees, by standard region, is published in part F of the same publication. There are no available estimates for male part-time employees, except in the south-east where they were £6.07 in April 1995.

Paracetamol

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people died as a result of paracetamol use and the use of compounds containing paracetamol in 1992 and for the five previous years. [26434]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The data are published for each year separately in table 10 of "Mortality statistics: injury and poisoning, England and Wales" series DH4, Nos. 13 to 18, copies of which are available in the House of Commons Library.

In table 10, the drugs are listed alphabetically, and when two or more drugs are listed together they are put under the drug which comes first alphabetically. Any such combination of drugs is not cross-referenced under the other drugs in the combination, so there is no double counting.

Since the principle of showing combinations of poisons is alphabetical, it therefore follows that no conclusions can be drawn concerning which drug, if any, played the major role. In addition, the inclusion of any substance in table 10 does not necessarily imply that it is toxic.

The listing of a substance on its own signifies that only that drug was mentioned on the death certificate. It does not therefore include those cases where the drug occurred in combination with other drugs.

Registration Service

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what arrangements have been made following the establishment of the Office for National Statistics for the approval of local schemes and regulations for the registration service in Wales. [26676]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Under the Transfer of Functions (Registration and Statistics) Order 1996, SI 1996 No. 273, the Chancellor of the Exchequer is responsible for approving local schemes and regulations relating to the registration service in England and Wales. The agreement of the Secretary of State for Wales will also be necessary for those local schemes for regulations relating to Wales.

ENVIRONMENT

"Policy Appraisal and the Environment"

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if it is Government policy to apply the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" to all Government policy statements where they are likely to have a significant direct or indirect effect on the environment. [25624]

Mr. Clappison: The guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" stresses that policy appraisal is applicable across the whole range of policies and programmes, and not just those with environmental objectives. The guide therefore raises awareness of the role of appraisal in the development of policies which have both direct and indirect environmental impacts.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what criteria are used to determine when the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" is to be applied to (a) Government consultation papers, (b) Bills before Parliament, (c) White Papers and (d) planning policy guidance notes. [25623]

Mr. Clappison: Systematic appraisal, as described in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment", should automatically be part of effective policy formulation where there are likely to be both direct and indirect effects on the environment. No other criteria are required to determine cases where the guidance in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" should be applied.

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if the guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" pertains to (a) Government consultation papers, (b) Bills before Parliament, (c) White Papers, (d) planning policy guidance notes and (e) policy statements. [25622]

Mr. Clappison: The guidance contained in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" has been designed so that it is relevant for all stages of policy development, from the consultation stage through to policy statements.

Toxic Waste

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to reduce the quantities of toxic waste going to landfill. [25753]

Mr. Clappison: Reducing the amount of waste we produce is our first priority. But it is equally important that we reduce its hazardousness. In Great Britain hazardous waste is called "special waste". Defined in this way, it covers approximately 1 per cent. of controlled waste arisings.

Because of the threat posed by hazardous wastes to human health and the enviornment, we agree that it is important to minimise the quantities of these substances in waste arisings. The waste minimisation measures we have taken relating to the hazardousness of waste often take the form of regulations, such as the marketing and use directive amendments, which restrict or prohibit harmful materials such as chlorofluorocarbons, found in refrigerators, asbestos, polychlorinated biphenyls, formerly used in electrical equipment, and now certain types of battery.

In the White Paper "Making Waste Work: A Strategy for Sustainable Waste Management in England and Wales", we have set a target to reduce the proportion of all controlled waste going to landfill from 70 per cent. to 60 per cent. by 2005.

British Steel

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total value of commercial orders placed by his Department with British Steel plc in each year from 1988 to 1995. [25818]

Sir Paul Beresford: A total of £77,000 was paid to British Steel plc and its associate companies during 1995–96. This figure also covers payments amounting to £39,258.50 made by Property Advisers to the Civil Estate, which was part of this Department during the period in question.

Figures for preceding years are obtainable only at disproportionate cost.

Water Leaks

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the connection between rising groundwater and water lost through leaks from water company pipes; and if he will make a statement. [25714]

Mr. Clappison: None. Although most water leaking from the distribution system is likely to find its way into groundwater, it is unlikely to contribute significantly to rising levels of groundwater in the London area, where water in the distribution system is generally drawn from groundwater. The rise in groundwater levels in London is believed to be due chiefly to the reduction in abstractions for industrial purposes.

Asthma

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the incidence of occupational asthma (a) nationally and (b) by region among (i) men and (ii) women in each of the past five years; and for each category and year what has been the change, by number and percentage, over the previous year. [25785]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information is not available in the format requested.

The surveillance of work-related and occupational respiratory disease scheme, based on reporting by specialist doctors, provides national estimates of the number of new cases of occupational asthma diagnosed by specialists. The available information from SWORD for 1991 to 1995 inclusive is shown in table 1.

Table 1: Reports of occupational asthma to SWORD, United Kingdom 1991–1995

Year	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995
Estimated total cases seen by specialists[1]	—[2]	1,047	879	941	851
Percentage male[3]	71	72	70	66	65

Notes:
[1]System of estimating total cases using one-month per annum returns from sampled physicians together with full 12–month returns from a core group was introduced in 1992 to decrease under-reporting.

Injury Reporting Regulations

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the revision of the Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985 will take effect; if it will include a change in the definition of an accident to include physical injury due to an assault arising out of or in connection with work; and if he will make a statement. [25715]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1995 came into force on 1 April 1996. The new regulations define an accident to include "an act of non-consensual physical violence done to a person at work".

This change will ensure that the health and safety enforcing authorities are provided with valuable data on the extent and nature of violence to people at work.

Green Belt

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the guidance he has issued to planning authorities in respect of green belt land surrounding or containing historic hospital complexes which become surplus to requirements and for which development using part of the green belt land is proposed; and if he will make a statement. [25716]

Sir Paul Beresford: Advice on major developed sites in the green belt, including hospitals, is provided in annexe C to planning policy guidance note 2. Paragraph C11 advises that suitable re-use is to be preferred to redevelopment where the buildings are of architectural or historic interest.

Energy Efficiency Voucher Scheme

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has carried out on the number of inquiries received by private companies from members of the public in respect of the energy efficiency voucher scheme; and how many vouchers have been presented to date. [26260]

Mr. Clappison: A full assessment will be carried out in the summer when further research results have become available. Preliminary results show that the promotion—which was supported by the private sector, and included the industry's own advisory service—successfully maintained awareness of energy efficiency within the "Wasting Energy Costs the Earth" campaign. So far, there have been almost 12,000 consumer responses, either through presentation of vouchers or through requests for advice.

Urban Regeneration

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance has been issued by his Department to the urban development corporations to ensure that the regeneration statements prepared for urban development areas are consistent with local development plans and other strategic plans agreed by local authorities which have a bearing on urban regeneration. [26015]

Sir Paul Beresford: None. It is for each urban development corporation to consider the most appropriate means of regenerating its area, in the light of its knowledge of local needs and conditions. In doing so, it will naturally wish to have regard to any local authority plans which may impact upon the urban development area.

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what legal obligations exist to ensure that urban development corporations consult local authorities and other public bodies about (a) regeneration statements and (b) other exit strategies. [26017]

Sir Paul Beresford: None. However, my Department encourages all urban development corporations to consult local authorities and other interested parties about both their regeneration statements and their exit strategies.

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what priority will be given for English Partnerships investment in urban development areas which contain areas of dereliction and contamination following designation. [26016]

Sir Paul Beresford: English Partnerships has been invited by several urban development corporations to become actively involved in the succession arrangements for the areas. The agency will consider taking on responsibility for the regeneration of sites within the UDC areas where the reclamation and redevelopment of those sites fits the agency's strategic objectives and priorities. The reclamation of derelict land continues to be one of English Partnerships' key objectives and high priority is given to the regeneration of sites that are contaminated.

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the estimated outstanding financial liabilities incurred by each of the urban development corporations in respect of (a) property and land which cannot be sold for a positive price in its present condition, (b) public open space and infrastructure, (c) rental guarantees, grant or compensation liabilities, and (d) staff and member liabilities, including redundancy, pension entitlements and terminal bonuses; and if he will list the provisions made within each urban development corporation budget in the financial years 1996–97 and 1997–98 to cover these liabilities. [26014]

Sir Paul Beresford: Information in this form is not held by my Department. Each urban development corporation has been asked to provide details of all its remaining liabilities as part of this year's corporate plan round. However, the estimated cost of settling particular liabilities is commercially sensitive, since negotiations with potential successor bodies are still taking place. Corporations are expected to meet the cost of settling liabilities from within the resources available to them from grant in aid and receipts.

Infected Clinical Waste

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on missing infected clinical waste; and what action he is taking with health trusts to deal with this problem. [26321]

Mr. Clappison: My officials have written to the Environment Agency requesting that it investigate this matter. At this point, it would be inappropriate for me to comment further on this issue.

Council Tax Transitional Relief (Redbridge)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was (a) the total sum, (b) the amount paid to the London borough of Redbridge, (c) the percentage of the total paid to the London borough of Redbridge and (d) the amount per dwelling in the London borough of Redbridge, in transitional relief in respect of the council tax in each year from 1993–94 to 1995–96. [26503]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information is as follows:

(a) Total amount of transitional relief

1993–94: £378,652,826

1994–95: £111,283,179[1]

1995–96: £27,178,179[1]

(b) Amount of transitional relief paid to the London borough of Redbridge

1993–94: £1,383,863.00

1994–95: £179,637.30[1]

1995–96: £13,929.30[1]

(c) Percentage of total amount paid to London borough of Redbridge

1993–94: 0.37%

1994–95: 0.16%[1]

1995–296: 0.05%[1]

(d) Amount paid per chargeable dwelling in London borough of Redbridge

1993–94: £15.12

1995–96: £0.15[1]

These figures are averages. The actual amount of transitional relief varied according to a household's council tax banding, its composition and its previous liability for community charge.

[1] Information for 1994–95 and 1995–96 is provisional and is subject to final grant claims being made during 1996–97.

Green Ministers

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Committee of Green Ministers last met; which Departments were represented at that meeting; and which Departments were represented by a Cabinet Minister. [25847]

Mr. Clappison: Green Ministers last met on 29 January. All Departments were represented, but not by a Cabinet Minister.

Energy Survey

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish the 1991 energy survey undertaken as part of the 1991 English house condition survey; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [25835]

Mr. Curry: This summer. Some key findings from the 1991 energy survey were published last year, in a guide entitled "Energy Efficiency in Council Housing: Condition of the Stock," and copies placed in the Library.

Health Action Plan

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he plans to publish the United Kingdom environmental health action plan. [25837]

Mr. Clappison: It is proposed to publish the United Kingdom environmental health action plan in the summer of this year.

"This Common Inheritance"

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what measures he is taking to stimulate debate across the country on the first set of sustainable development indicators, as envisaged in paragraph 171 of "This Common Inheritance" United Kingdom annual report 1996. [25840]

Mr. Clappison: The report on indicators of sustainable development for the United Kingdom published on 12 March provides a preliminary set of indicators. The report invites comments and ideas from readers which will be taken into account in developing the indicators further. Further discussions will take place with local authority associations, non-governmental organisations, and academic and research organisations.

The Secretary of State has also written to his ministerial counterparts in other EU member states drawing attention to the work that the UK has done in developing indicators, inviting their views on the UK indicator package and to share their countries' experiences in this area.

The Department of the Environment also intends to hold a seminar this summer for a thorough examination of the indicators, inviting participants from national and local government, industry, commerce, non-governmental organisations and the academic community.

Smoking (Public Places)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the target set in 1992 for the percentage of public places which should have effective no-smoking policies in place by 1994; what percentage figure was achieved in 1994; and what is the current percentage figure. [25842]

Mr. Clappison: In 1992, the Government's target was that 80 per cent. of public places should have effective smoking policies by the end of 1994. The statistical information is not available in the form requested. However, the report "Smoking in Public Places, 2nd Survey Report," a copy of which has been put in the Library of the House of Commons, shows for eight categories of establishment the percentage with an effective smoking policy:

Category	Percentage
Shops	63
Advice/money transactions	48
Travel	38
Health	71
Formal education	77
Informal education	62
Food/entertainment	37
Sports/recreation	48

The report relates to a survey carried out in 1995.

Private Finance Initiative (Construction Industry Report)

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to make a formal response to the construction industry's paper of October 1995 about the private finance initiative; and if he will make a statement. [26785]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The Government have taken the industry's views into account in reviewing the PFI and deciding what further improvements to make to its operation. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and I and other Ministers met a construction industry delegation today and provided a full response to the points raised in the report.

Actions taken by the Government to deal with these points include:

(a) better guidance: a practical PFI handbook "Private Opportunity, Public Benefit" was published by HM Treasury in November 1995. Further guidance notes and practical case studies will be published during 1996;

(b) new procurement guidelines for Government Departments: highlighting best practice, published by HM Treasury on 3 April 1996;

(c) model contract clauses: will be produced, for whenever it makes sense to use them, to minimise the need to reinvent the wheel for each PFI project. The Treasury is also to establish a standing committee to resolve precedent-setting contractual issues at an early stage;

(d) large-scale PFI training: arrangements are being made to give practical training to 5,000 to 10,000 civil servants in 1996–97. The programme of training has commenced, and is open to private sector delegates;

(e) more effective co-ordination: the Treasury private finance unit and the private finance panel executive have been strengthened;

(f) closer dialogue with the construction industry: my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State chaired a PFI meeting with industry representatives on 22 November 1995, with Ministers from five Departments present, including the Financial Secretary to the Treasury. Today's is the second such meeting, and bilateral meetings between the industry and Ministers in a number of Departments are taking place;

(g) encouragement for equity investment: the private finance panel will continue to strengthen its dialogue with funding institutions, building on the positive response the market is already making;

(h) removal of unnecessarily restrictive contract conditions: to encourage greater flexibility in project funding;

(i) developing the potential for smaller PFI projects: the emergence of model projects and contract documentation will assist the development of smaller projects. Other methods to bundle together smaller projects are also being considered;

(j) regional PFI contacts: Government offices for the regions have established PFI co-ordinators and contact points.

The operation of PFI will be kept under review and further action taken where necessary to remove obstacles to the quick and successful implementation of projects.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Television Violence

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on her policy in respect of the introduction of V-chips. [25350]

Mr. Sproat: The Secretary of State has initiated a thorough and careful analysis of the new V-chip technology and associated issues in conjunction with broadcasters, regulators and other interested parties as well as with our partners in Europe. This is not a straightforward issue. There are practical and technical difficulties in introducing new technology of this kind and we would not wish to be rushed into a premature decision.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many manufacturing companies in the west midlands have closed since 1992. [24783]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 16 April 1996]: On the basis of VAT registrations data, a total of 4,007 manufacturing firms became individually deregistered—for whatever reason—in the west midlands region during 1993 and 1994. In the same period, 3,354 new manufacturing businesses became deregistered in the region. Figures for 1995 are not yet available.

Corruption (Football Clubs)

Miss Hoey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what evidence he has given to the premier league inquiry into football corruption within English football clubs. [25738]

Mr. Oppenheim: None.

Auditors' Reports (Public Limited Companies)

Miss Hoey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, (1) what assessment he has made of the quality of auditors reports of public limited companies in England; and if he will make a statement; [25736]

(2) what is the supervisory role of this Department over the quality of reports made by auditors in public limited companies' annual reports with special reference to football clubs. [25737]

Mr. Oppenheim: Company auditors and the conduct of company audit work for all companies, including those that are football clubs, are governed by the provisions of part II of the Companies Act 1989, which aims to ensure that audits are carried out only by persons who are properly supervised and appropriately qualified, and that such audits are carried out with integrity and with a proper degree of independence. Using the criteria set down in part II, five professional accountancy bodies—recognised supervisory bodies—have been recognised for the purposes of monitoring, inspecting, supervising and disciplining registered company auditors. These bodies are in turn responsible to me for the way in which they operate this self-regulatory regime, and are required to submit to me annual reports on audit regulation.

British Steel

Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the value of the debts of the British Steel Corporation (a) assumed by central Government and (b) otherwise written off between 1979 and privatisation in 1988. [25821]

Mr. Page: A two-stage reconstruction of British Steel Corporation's balance sheet involving the write-off of public dividend capital provided to the company was effected under the Iron and Steel Acts of 1981 and 1982 in recognition of the fact that trading losses could not be recovered out of existing assets. The 1981 Act reduced by £3 billion the sums invested in BSC by the Government under section 18(1) of the Iron and Steel Act 1975, with a further reduction of £1 billion effected in December 1982 by a statutory instrument made under the 1982 Act. In conjunction with this exercise, the Iron and Steel Act 1981 extinguished £509 million of national loans fund loans together with accrued interest thereon as at the end of the corporation's 1980–81 financial year, in respect of the long-term indebtness of the corporation.

In 1988, preparing British Steel plc for privatisation, Her Majesty's Government made a number of adjustments to the company's capital structure to bring it into a form that was appropriate for a public limited company. Full details of these adjustments are given in the National Audit Office report "Department of Trade and Industry: Sale of Government Shareholding in British Steel plc", HC 210, 1989–90 Session, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the implications of the incentives being offered by the state of Alabama, USA, to British Steel plc and its partners in the Trico steel mill venture for future investment in the British steel industry. [26013]

Mr. Page: None. This is purely a commercial matter for British Steel.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what information he has evaluated from UK Nirex Ltd. in regard to its proposed charging scheme for the disposal of intermediate-level radioactive waste in the planned repository; what is the real rate of return on the capital employed in the disposal charges; and if he will indicate the period of capital expenditure used in calculating this rate of return. [26274]

Mr. Page: My Department receives a variety of information from UK Nirex Ltd., but these are matters of the management of the company.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of funding to be made available to his Department through the private finance initiative in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26169]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The capital value of PFI projets being planned by my Department is estimated to be as follows:

Year	£ million

For the period 1995–96, I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my predecessor on 7 November 1995, Official Report, column 705, to a question from the hon. Member for Sheffield, Attercliffe (Mr. Betts).

Rural Post Offices

Mr. Illsley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many post offices in rural areas have been closed in Northern Ireland since 1979. [26232]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 22 April 1996]: I understand from Post Office Counters Ltd. that records are available only from 1987. The total number of post offices in rural areas of Northern Ireland in March 1987 was 515. In March 1996, the corresponding number was 460, a net change of 55. Some of this change was due to some rural offices being reclassified as urban offices. The majority of rural closures are due to the difficulty of finding a suitable applicant to take over the office.

Nuclear Industry

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library a copy of his reply to the European Commission's request for the United Kingdom's response to the Consortium of Opposing Local Authorities and Friends of the Earth reports relating to competition policy and the nuclear industry. [26524]

Mr. Eggar: The Government are aware of only one report sent by the Consortium of Opposing Local Authorities and Friends of the Earth to the European Commission. This report is entitled "UK Nuclear Privatisation and Public Sector Liabilities".

The Commission is aware of the Government's view that there is no basis for the concerns which were expressed by COLA on publication of that report.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the estimated annual saving to business from the Deregulation (Insurance Companies Act 1982) Order 1996. [25763]

Mr. Oppenheim: The order has three main purposes:

(a) the abolition of section 18(3) of the Insurance Companies Act 1982 ("the Act") which requires a five-yearly statement of a life assurance company's business. The life assurance industry has estimated that these measures will save £6 million for the industry over a five-year cycle;

(b) the abolition of section 22(2) of the Act which requires each insurance company to return a statement of connected intermediaries. This measure is estimated to save the insurance industry in excess of £500,000 annually; and

(c) amendment of sections 22(1), 42(4) and 82 of the Act in order to allow insurance companies to submit copies of their annual returns in an electronic format. This measure is for the convenience of the industry and cost savings will be small, representing the difference between the cost of production and submission of four paper copies of the return, and that of producing a diskette. The administrative cost to companies of taking corrective action, if required to do so under section 22(5) of the Act, should also be reduced.

Women (Unfair Dismissal)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) how many cases of unfair dismissal of women have been recorded in Scotland during the last three years; and if he will make a statement; [25213]

(2) how many cases of unfair dismissal of women have been recorded in England during the last three years; and if he will make a statement; [25215]

(3) how many cases of unfair dismissal of women have been recorded in Wales during the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [25211]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The numbers of unfair dismissal cases brought by women and registered by the industrial tribunals for 1994 and 1995 are set out. Figures for 1993 can be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Cases of unfair dismissal brought by women in England, Scotland and Wales

Year	Region	Total registered
1994	England	11,592
	Scotland	1,338
	Wales	834
1995	England	8,601
	Scotland	1,122
	Wales	687

The tribunal area for Wales includes the following neighbouring parts of England—Crewe and Congleton; county of Shropshire except southern part of Bridgenorth; south Herefordshire; Leominster; Hereford and Malvern Hills; Newcastle upon Lyme, Stoke-on-Trent and Staffordshire Moorlands.

Gas Prices

Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the percentage change in (a) gas beach prices and (b) the price of gas to domestic consumers since 1986. [26023]

Mr. Eggar: Between 1986 and 1995 the price of gas to domestic consumers excluding VAT fell by 24 per cent.—15 per cent. including VAT—in real terms. The DTI does not publish a similar series for beach prices.

Insolvency Service

Mr. Waterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what targets he has set the Insolvency Service executive agency for 1996–97. [26723]

Mr. Oppenheim: Against the Insolvency Service's planning assumption that compulsory insolvencies will total 27,500 cases in the year to 31 March 1997, I have set it the target of completing 26,500 cases with no more than 9 per cent. of uncompleted cases being more than 36 months old. I have also set it the target of reducing the unit cost of bankruptcy and compulsory liquidation case administration in 1996–97 by 8 per cent. Resources will increasingly be concentrated on the service's investigative effort and I expect the number of proceedings taken for the disqualification of directors of failed companies to exceed last year's outcome of 1,390, itself an increase of some 50 per cent. on the previous year. In concentrating on the more serious and resource-intensive criminal investigative work, I shall expect the service to contain the effect that this will have on the other prosecution action it carries out. I shall also expect the service to operate within its agreed gross running cost provision for 1996–97 of £51,197 million and its programme budget of £3,689 million.

In addition, I have set the service the following quality of service targets for 1996–97:

- to report to creditors on assets and liabilities within eight weeks in at least 90 per cent. of cases and within 12 weeks in 98 per cent. of all cases;
- to hold the initial meeting of creditors within 12 weeks in 90 per cent. of all cases and within four months in 98 per cent. of all cases;
- to submit reports within 10 months in at least 90 per cent. of bankruptcy cases and 80 per cent. of company liquidation cases where there is evidence of criminality;
- to submit disqualification reports within 15 months in at least 80 per cent. cases where there is evidence of unfit conduct by directors;
- to check and action at least 95 per cent. of insolvency services account payment requisitions within five days or by the due date;
- to process 95 per cent. of official receivers' receipt and payment transactions within 24 hours;
- to give notice to insolvency practitioners of interest credited to estates within four weeks.

In addition, I expect the service to action all invoices for payment within 30 days of receipt and the agency chief executive to continue to reply within 10 working days to all letters from Members of Parliament delegated to him for reply.

Wages Councils

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many new jobs have been created in each region of the United Kingdom in those industries where rates of pay were previously determined by wages councils in each year since 1992. [24948]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I have been asked to reply.

Information is not available by regions for industries formerly covered by wages councils. Net job councils for Great Britain are given in the following table.

Year-on-year changes in employees in employment, December of each year (thousands)

Industry	SIC92 Code	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
Retail	52 (except 52.7)	–11	61	18	1
Restaurants, cafes, takeaway food shops	55.3	7	10	10	12
Hotels and other residential accommodation	55.1–55.2	10	0	11	23

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 23 April. [25034]

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 23 April. [25035]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Lake Kojanovskoe, Russia

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what discussions he had at the Groups of Eight nuclear safety and security summit in Moscow of radioactive contamination of Lake Kojanovskoe. [25530]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The specific questions of contamination levels in Lake Kojanovskoe did not arise at the summit.

Third-party Liability Convention

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister what reasons he had from the Ukraine and Russia in respect of the signature and ratification of the Vienna convention on third-party liability. [25531]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 22 April 1996]: I understand that both Russia and the Ukraine have indicated that they intend to join the Vienna convention. As a first step, both are currently in the process of developing compatible national legislation.

Beef Industry

Sir Julian Critchley: To ask the Prime Minister what is his policy in respect of requiring the feed and meat processing industries to make a contribution to the culling of the nation's cows. [24480]

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food made a statement to the House on 16 April, Official Report, columns 513–16, covering measures for the removal of cattle over 30 months of age from the human food chain, and on the possibility of a selective cull of animals potentially at high risk from bovine spongiform encephalopathy.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Tropical Rainforests

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those projects concerned with the conservation of tropical rainforests, or species within them, funded through the global environment facility, together with the sums of money which have been committed internationally to each project; and if he will indicate if each project forms part of biodiversity action plans published by the Governments of the countries in which the projects are located. [25925]

Mr. Hanley: The information is not readily available. We are consulting the secretariat of the global environment facility and will reply as soon as possible.

TRANSPORT

Public Transport (Investment)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been invested in public transport over the last five years; and what was the percentage change for each of those years. [25243]

Mr. Norris: The figures are given in the table. They comprise estimates of public and private investment in London Transport, national railways and local public transport.

	Total public transport £ million	Percentage difference (year on year)
1991–92	1,850	—
1992–93	2,370	+28
1993–94	2,220	–6
1994–95	2,100	–5
1995–96	2,290	+9

Train Engine Units (Fires)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many fires there have been in high-speed train engine units in each of the last five years. [25505]

Mr. Watts: This information is not available in the form requested. Table 12A of Her Majesty's railway inspectorate's annual report on railway safety for 1994–95, a copy of which is in the Library, lists the number of train fires by type of vehicle but does not distinguish between the engine units and the coaches of high-speed trains. The total number of fires in high-speed trains is shown in the following table:

Type of vehicle	High-speed Trains
1991–92	12
1992–93	9
1993–94	15
1994–95	5

Figures for 1995–96 are not yet available.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what safety procedures are in place for dealing with fires in engine units of high-speed trains. [25506]

Mr. Watts: The engine compartments of high-speed train power cars are equipped with a fire detection system that is alarmed in the driving cab. A fire suppression system is also provided.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will instruct the Health and Safety Executive to investigate (a) the cause of and (b) the safety procedures following the fire in the engine unit of the 17.35 service from London to Plymouth, at Bristol Parkway station, on 7 April. [25504]

Mr. Watts: The Health and Safety Executive's railway inspectorate has inquired into the incident.

The fire was caused by a component failure in the engine fuel system. Remedial action is in hand.

Safety procedures at the time of the incident involved summoning the fire service, which attended promptly, and separating the vehicle on fire from the rest of the train.

Road Schemes (Environmental Assessment)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what advice has been issued by his Department on the implementation of the Standing Advisory Committee on Trunk Road Assessment recommendations on environmental assessment of road schemes. [25843]

Mr. Norris: Revised and expanded guidance on the environmental assessment of trunk road schemes was issued in 1993 as volume 11 of the design manual for roads and bridges. This is kept under review and updated as necessary.

M27 (New Road Signs)

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many new road signs have been ordered for the Bursledon-Nursling section of the M27; when they were placed in storage; at what cost they were purchased; and when he expects them to be installed. [25762]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. John Denham, dated 23 April 1996:

The Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to write to you in reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about road signs for the Bursledon Nursling section of the M27.

No new road signs have been ordered for this section of the M27. 14 variable message signs are being recovered from the M25 during the widening works. These signs are being stored and will be installed on the M27 when funds become available for this work.

Motor Vehicles (Accident Damage)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make it his policy to make it compulsory for details of accident damage to be entered on motor vehicle registration documents with the name of the insurance company where appropriate and relevant. [25419]

Mr. Norris: Such an endorsement did appear on the old-style green logbook. The practice ceased in 1971 because it was found that it could give a false impression of a vehicle's condition. Some vehicles which were assumed to be unroadworthy were in fact repaired to a high standard. This reason is still valid today.

Officials are, however, discussing with the insurance industry and the police the possibility of making available to the public information on total loss vehicles.

Traffic Congestion

Mr. Butterfill: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 26 February, Official Report, column 340, in respect of projections of future road congestion, what assessment he has made of the extent to which it will be practicable and economic for the railways to enlarge their market share of goods and passenger traffic to alleviate likely road congestion; and what proposals he has to quantify this. [25865]

Mr. Watts: It is not possible to quantify the potential impact in general terms of an expansion of the railways on national road congestion, although it can make important local differences. Liberalisation and privatisation will improve the ability of rail to attract and retain passenger and freight traffic.

Train Services (Disabled Access)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what guidance he has given to the franchising director in respect of train operating companies guaranteeing disabled access to train services. [25503]

Mr. Watts: None. The Rail Regulator is responsible for protecting the interests of disabled rail passengers. All train and station operators are required to submit for the regulator's approval a disabled people's protection policy, as a condition of being granted a licence to operate. Details of the accessibility of rolling stock were set out in my answer of 19 April to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood (Ms Short), Official Report, column 632.

Sea Empress Incident

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what decisions were taken by the executive committee of the international oil pollution compensation fund at its meeting on Tuesday 16 April in relation to compensation payments to victims of the Sea Empress disaster; and if he will make a statement. [26353]

Mr. Norris: At a meeting of the IOPC fund's executive committee held in the immediate aftermath of the Sea Empress incident the committee decided that the fund should not make any compensation payments until the position regarding the total level of likely claims was clearer. On the basis of an agreement brokered by the Government, the ship's insurers, the Skuld Protection and Indemnity Club, agreed to make payments to claimants suffering hardship. To date, 62 payments have been made totalling some £240,000.

At a meeting of the fund's executive committee on 16 April the committee decided that the fund could start paying compensation to claimants, but because of continuing uncertainty about the level of total claims such payments should be restricted to 75 per cent. of the damage suffered by the claimant on the basis of the advice of the fund's experts at the time when a payment was made. It is believed that in the majority of cases the position of the claimants will be improved, but there might still be circumstances in which some claimants could still suffer genuine financial difficulty. To address this possibility, the Government have brokered a further agreement with the Skuld club whereby the club will make payments above 75 per cent. in cases of genuine financial hardship. The details of this arrangement will be discussed with representatives of Sea Empress claimants at meetings to be held in Milford Haven on 25 April.

MV Derbyshire

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received concerning the forthcoming return to the wreck fo the MV Derbyshire; and if he will make a statement. [25582]

Mr. Norris: Representation have been received from, and on behalf of, the Derbyshire Family Association. They are being considered. We hope to be able to respond to the representations in the near future.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) when he will publish the list of people to visit the wreck of the MV Derbyshire; and what date he has set for this investigation; [25581]

(2) when he proposes to make a statement on the inclusion of DFA nominated representatives in the visit to the wreck of the MV Derbyshire. [25563]

Mr. Norris: We await the final recommendations of the technical assessors and salvage advisors appointed to oversee this project. Until their recommendations have been received and considered and any necessary contractual procedures completed, it is premature to fix the possible date for a return to the Derbyshire or to list those who will be involved.

Railways (Season Ticket Discounts)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which train operating companies are and were paying season ticket discounts under the passengers charter (a) currently, (b) 12 months ago and (c) 24 months ago. [24546]

Mr. Watts: For the purposes of the passengers charter season ticket compensation scheme, train operating companies are split into 59 route groups. The following route groups are and were triggering season ticket discounts at the end of March:

(a) 52 weeks ending 29 March 1996

Emergency Salvage Cover

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) when his Department's charter of the tug Smit-Lloyd Safe for emergency salvage cover in Scottish waters ends; and if he will make a statement; [23290]

(2) when his Department's charter of the tug Far Turbot for emergency salvage cover in the English channel ends; and if he will make a statement. [23289]

Mr. Norris: The existing Coastguard agency charter of the tugs Smit-Lloyd Safe and the Far Turbot ends on 30 April 1966. The intention is that this provision will recommence on 1 October 1996 for a period of six months.

The Coastguard agency has arrangements with four firms of UK tug brokers to make towing vessels available in an emergency. HM Coastguard rescue centres maintain databases of suitable vessels in their locality, including harbour tugs. The agency has a draft understanding with the British Tugowners Association that its members will, if possible, make tugs available for emergencies. We will continue to work closely with the tug industry to ensure the best possible access to emergency towing vessels.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of funding to be made available to his Department through the private finance initiative in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26177]

Mr. Watts: Private sector contributions under the private finance initiative for the years in question are estimated at roundly (a) £250 million, (b) £630 million, and (c) £820 million.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Entertainment Costs

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what were the entertainment costs at each British embassy in each EU country in 1995; and if he will make a statement. [24595]

Mr. Hanley: Expenditure on official entertainment at British embassies in European Union countries in the financial year 1994–95—the latest figure available—was £1,183,614. It is our practice not to publish how this is divided between posts.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what were the entertainment costs at each British high commission in each Commonwealth country in 1995; and if he will make a statement. [24596]

Mr. Hanley: Expenditure on official entertainment at British high commissions overseas in the financial year 1994–95—the latest figure available—was £1,252,368. It is our practice not to publish how this is divided between posts.

Turkey

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the human rights situation in Turkey; and what plans Her Majesty's Government have to address the issue at the current UN Commission on Human Rights. [25875]

Mr. David Davis: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave to the hon. Member for Sunderland, South (Mr. Mullin) on 19 April, Official Report, column 631.

Sub-Saharan Africa

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total number of staff in the British high commission in (a) Lesotho, (b) Malawi, (c) Kenya, (d) Ghana and (e) Botswana in the years 1992–93 to 1996–97. [25564]

Mr. Hanley: The authorised establishment in these posts is as follows:

(a) UK-based staff

Post	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996
Maseru (Lesotho)	6.00	6.00	6.00	6.00	3.00
Lilongwe (Malawi)	13.00	13.00	13.00	13.00	13.00
Nairobi (Kenya)	37.00	37.00	35.00	33.00	35.00
Accra (Ghana)	22.00	19.00	17.50	17.50	17.00
Gaborone (Botswana)	7.00	7.00	7.00	6.00	5.00

(b) Locally engaged employees, in staff years:

	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996
Maseru	15.50	15.50	15.50	11.00	11.00
Lilongwe	58.25	58.25	58.25	59.25	60.75
Nairobi	67.50	68.50	68.50	68.50	68.00
Accra	87.50	87.50	91.50	93.50	84.50
Gaborone	17.50	17.50	17.50	13.90	13.90

In addition, the Overseas Development Administration has two development divisions in Africa. The office in Lilongwe was transferred to Harare in 1995.

Development division UK-based staff establishment

	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996
Lilongwe	15.00	12.00	12.00	12.00	—
Nairobi	10.00	10.00	10.00	10.00	10.00

Lilongwe	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a	n/a
Nairobi	14.00	14.00	18.00	18.00	18.00

Staff figures are still awaited from Lilongwe.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of funding to be made available to this Department through the private finance initiative in (a) 1995–96, *(b)*1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26168]

Mr. Hanley: We consider the use of private finance as the preferred option for all proposed capital projects. I refer the hon. Member to the capital spending estimates in table 6.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1996–97", which is available in the House Library. no capital investment took place under the private finance initiative scheme in 1995–96.

South Africa (Trade Access)

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the position of Her Majesty's Government in the Council of Ministers of the EU with regard to the liberalisation of trade access by the Republic of South Africa to the EU; and if it will make it the policy to work for a fair and asymmetrical trade deal with particular emphasis on allowing as much market access for agricultural products as possible. [26093]

Mr. David Davis: The UK has consistently argued for an EU trade agreement with South Africa which will help South Africa's successful transition to a prosperous and stable non-racial democracy. The agreement should cover substantially all trade, with as much market access for agricultural products as possible. The mandate agreed at the Foreign Affairs Council on 25 March is not as liberal as we would have liked, and we therefore abstained in the vote and made a statement expressing our concerns. We will continue to work for as liberal an agreement as possible. We expect that the Commission will need more negotiating flexibility: we will respond sympathetically to any such request, and urge our EU partners to do likewise.

Israel-Lebanon Conflict

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his recent speeches regarding the present Israeli-Lebanese conflict represent a change in Government policy in respect of the respect for territorial integrity between Lebanon and Israel as outlined in Security Council resolution 425. [26140]

Mr. Hanley: We continue to support the territorial integrity of Lebanon, and have consistently called for the implementation of Security Council resolution 425. The UK co-sponsored resolution 1052 on 18 April, which called for a ceasefire and recalled SCR 425.

Miss Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps Her Majesty's Government propose to take to support attempts by members of the international community to bring about an immediate ceasefire in the present conflict between Lebanon and Israel. [26137]

Mr. Hanley: We are in close touch with all the Governments concerned. My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary has sent messages to Foreign Ministers Bouez and Shara'a and has spoken to Warren Christopher and the Israeli Foreign Minister. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister met the Lebanese Prime Minister and has discussed the situation with Presidents Clinton and Chirac. We strongly support US efforts to mediate. We also supported UNSCR 1052, which calls for immediate ceasefire.

Miss Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps Her Majesty's Government plan to take to support international relief efforts to alleviate the suffering of people displaced in Lebanon by the present conflict between Israel and Lebanon. [26141]

Mr. Hanley: We are providing bilateral emergency aid to Lebanon of £250,000. In addition, the European Commission is providing 600,000 ecu, which will be spent on medical aid, tents, blankets, food aid and safe water supplies.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to ensure non-discrimination between the sexes in employment conditions in the public service on St. Helena. [26464]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: There is no discrimination between the sexes in employment conditions.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take steps to ensure that no public service employee on St. Helena loses her employment because she becomes pregnant. [26463]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: St. Helena Government public service orders provide that all established female officers are eligible for maternity leave. However, those engaged on temporary terms are not eligible. The St. Helena Government are reviewing the terms and conditions of unestablished employees.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to remove Government control of access to the broadcasting service on St. Helena. [26465]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The Government of St. Helena are examining options for the management of Radio St. Helena, including establishing a media trust.

EU Member States (Territories)

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 12 March, Official Report, columns 531-32, for what reasons the Falkland Islands were not included in the list of United Kingdom territories. [26462]

Mr. David Davis: This was due to an administration error. The answer should have included the Falkland Islands within the list of UK dependent territories as follows:

Territory	Part of EU?	Vote in EP elections?
Falkland Islands	No	No

A request for an amendment to the Official Report was made on 15 March.

Land Mines

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the use of anti-personnel land mines. [26722]

Mr. David Davis: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley) yesterday.

DEFENCE

Royal Air Force Training

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to suspend non-essential RAF training. [25795]

Mr. Soames: RAF training is designed to fit individuals with the skills to meet the tasks expected of them both now and in the future. Not all training has to take place within fixed time frames. Accordingly, as part of the measures to avoid unnecessary pressure on personnel during transition to the future RAF manning structure, we plan to suspend refresher training in common core skills for the period to March 1997, except where this would prejudice safety standards or jeopardise support for the RAF's operational commitments. Military effectiveness will not be compromised.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will obtain the details of the research experiments conducted by Dr. Mohamed Abou-Donia at Duke university medical centre in the United States into the causes of Gulf war syndrome. [26266]

Mr. Soames: My Department will consider very carefully the report on the research undertaken at Duke university medical centre when it is published.

Bosnia

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the British armed forces serving in Bosnia have available (a) armoured vehicles plated with depleted uranium and (b) depleted uranium shells for operational use. [26262]

Mr. Soames: No.

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) full-time and (b) part-time members of the Ulster Defence Regiment there were at the date of its abolition; and how many (i) full-time and (ii) part-time members are now serving in the Royal Irish Regiment in Northern Ireland. [25931]

Mr. Soames: There were 2,990 full-time and 2,858 part-time members of the Ulster Defence Regiment when it amalgamated with the Royal Irish Rangers to form the Royal Irish Regiment on 1 July 1992. The Royal Irish Regiment (Home Service) consisted of 3,014 full-time and 2,122 part-time soldiers on 31 March 1996.

Cyprus

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column 98, for what reason no Turkish Cypriots are employed in the western sovereign base area; what proposals he has to ensure that employment by the base reflects the composition of the population of the western sovereign base area; and if he will make a statement. [26239]

Mr. Soames: Following the events of 1974, the Turkish Cypriot population now lives in the Turkish-controlled area to the north of the UN-patrolled buffer zone. No Turkish Cypriots are registered for employment in the catchment area for the western sovereign base area. The employment of Cypriot personnel within the WSBA reflects this position.

Nuclear Weapons Transport

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the provision of aid to the Russian Federation to assist the safe transport and storage of nuclear weapons. [26263]

Mr. Soames: The UK, at a cost of some £35 million, has provided Russia with 250 armoured weapon containers and 20 heavy armoured transport vehicles to provide additional protection for its nuclear warheads in transit and in storage. These warheads are those made surplus under the strategic arms reduction talks treaty. Russia has expressed its appreciation for this assistance.

Married Quarters Estate

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what arrangements he has made for the management of the properties of the married quarters estate which his Department will continue to occupy after the proposed sale. [26454]

Mr. Arbuthnot: As we explained in the preliminary information memorandum, a copy of which is in the Library of the House, my Department will retain responsibility for the management and maintenance of the quarters which we lease back. This responsibility will continue to be discharged by the Defence Housing Executive after the sale.

Home Defence Facilities

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what facilities for home defence and the wartime administration of the armed forces have been provided within the Kincardine-on-Forth area of Scotland since 1970 (a) in facilities established for that purpose and (b) otherwise; and what the costs of establishing and maintaining such facilities have been during the period. [25545]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 18 April 1996]: There are no records or knowledge of any facilities for home defence or wartime administration in the area of Kincardine-on-Forth.

Emergency Communications Links

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what purpose emergency communications links were provided between Lanark, Strathclyde and the former underground wartime command centre of the headquarters, United Kingdom land forces at Sopley, Hampshire; for how long they were established; and at what cost. [25546]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 18 April 1996]: There are no records or knowledge of emergency communication links between Lanark, Strathclyde and the former underground wartime command centre of the headquarters, United Kingdom land forces at Sopley.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what purpose emergency communications links were provided between Inverbervie near Montrose and the former underground wartime command centre of the headquarters, United Kingdom land forces at Sopley, Hampshire; for how long they were established; and at what cost. [25547]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 18 April 1996]: There were no specific emergency communication links between the former home defence and wartime administration facility at Inverbervie near Montrose and the former underground wartime command centre of the headquarters, United Kingdom land forces at Sopley.

The only permanent communication system at Inverbervie was based on British Telecom telephone lines at a cost of £8,000 per annum. All communication systems had been removed by January 1994.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Police Authorities

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if police authorities are subject to (a) investigation by the Parliamentary Commissioner, (b) scrutiny by the Audit Commission, (c) scrutiny by the National Audit Office, (d) statutory provisions for open government, (e) performance indicators and (f) provisions under the citizens charter. [25974]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 April 1996]: Police authorities, established under the Police and Magistrates' Courts Act 1994, are not open to investigation by the Parliamentary Commissioner but by the Commissioner for Local Administration. Similarly, they are subject to scrutiny by the Audit Commission, not the National Audit Office. Also, the Audit Commission's citizens charter performance indicators include a range of indicators that apply to the police service, and police authorities are required to publish these annually. As regards statutory provision for open government, police authorities are bound by rules similar to those that apply to local government.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) annual reports, (b) annual accounts, (c) minutes of meetings, (d) agendas of meetings and (e) registers of members' interests are published by police authorities; and if in each case this is under a statutory requirement. [25969]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The Police and Magistrates' Courts Act 1994, which established the new police authorities, requires them to publish an annual report on local policing for that year and to copy that report to the Home Secretary. Under the Act, they are also bound by provisions in the Local Government Act 1972, as amended, which require agendas, minutes of proceedings and accounts to be open to inspection during reasonable hours and also requires members to declare any direct or indirect pecuniary interest in business which is under discussion. Additionally, regulations are being prepared which will extend to police authorities a requirement to maintain a register of members' interests which is similarly open to public inspection.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was (a) the gross public spending for each year since 1990–91, in 1995–96 prices and (b) is the projected expenditure for each year to 1997–98, in 1995–96 prices, of police authorities. [25975]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 22 April 1996]: Expenditure in 1995–96 prices by police authorities in England and Wales in the period 1990–91 to 1995–96 was as follows:

1990–91: £5,607 million

1991–92: £5,896 million

1992–93: £6,150 million

1993–94: £6,309 million

1994–95: £6,449 million

1995–96: £6,606 million (estimated)

Details of projected police authority expenditure are not available beyond 1996–97, for which the figure is £6,715 million.

Police Complaints Authority

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects provisions to be in place to allow the Police Complaints Authority discretion to publish information to inform the public of the outcome of investigations; and if he will make a statement. [26370]

Mr. Maclean: The disclosure of information by the Police Complaints Authority is governed by section 98 of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984. We have already announced our intention to amend section 98 to allow the PCA discretion to publish such information as is reasonably necessary to inform the public of the outcome of investigations and we await a suitable legislative opportunity.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to give the Police Complaints Authority powers to recommend disciplinary charges if evidence shows that on the balance of probability an offence has been committed by a police officer. [26371]

Mr. Maclean: The Police Complaints Authority already has powers to recommend or, ultimately, to direct that disciplinary charges be brought against a police officer.

Alcohol and Drug-related Crime

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his estimate of the number of crimes that were committed under the influence of (a) alcohol, (b) heroin, (c) ecstasy and (d) cannabis for each of the past five years. [26345]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is not collected centrally.

Buckley Hall Prison

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 3 April, Official Report, columns 289–90, about the timing and implementation of improvements and other recommendations at Buckley Hall prison, (a) on what dates verbal recommendations were made by the area manager for Buckley Hall, (b) how these are recorded by the Home Office controller and the director of the prison and (c) what system is in place to ensure that the recommendations are carried out. [25759]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 23 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about verbal recommendations made by the area manager regarding Buckley Hall prison.

The area manager makes regular visits to the establishment. He also chairs a monthly progress meeting at which any recommendations are recorded in the minutes. During scheduled visits he meets the Director and Controller and he may make recommendations, which are then monitored by the Controller as part of her normal duties.

The area manager's recommendations can be separated into those which attract an immediate solution and those which do not. In the case of the former, the Director will seek to act upon comments by the area manager without delay. In the case of the latter a more formal approach would be taken. The Director would be required to submit a full report to the area manager at the next progress meeting. The Controller would be required to monitor progress both before and after to that meeting.

The Controller also produces a monthly progress report for the area manager and monitors any points raised on his behalf.

Prisoners

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many category A (a) male and (b) female prisoners are serving a life prison sentence in prisons in England and Wales. [26089]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 23 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about how many category A (a) male and (b) female prisoners are serving a life prison sentence in prisons in England and Wales.

On 17 April 1996 there were 326 male and one female category A prisoners serving life sentences in prisons in England and Wales.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisons in England and Wales hold category A inmates. [26095]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 23 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about how many prisons in England and Wales hold Category A prisoners.

There are currently 22 prisons in England and Wales which hold Category A prisoners on a regular basis.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) men and (b) women inmates are serving a life prison sentence in prisons in England and Wales. [26096]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 23 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many (a) men and (b) women prisoners are serving a life prison sentence in prisons in England and Wales.

The latest available information is for 29 February 1996. On that date there were 3,277 male and 122 female life sentence prisoners in Prison Service establishments in England and Wales.

Long Lartin Prison

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what items have been found as a result of (a) strip searches and (b) anal searches in the last 12 months at Her Majesty's prison, Long Lartin; and if he will make a statement about the effectiveness of such searches; [25877]

(2) what is the routine for (a) strip searches and (b) anal searches at HMP Long Lartin; and how many such searches have been carried out in the last 12 months. [25876]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 23 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about strip and anal searches in Long Lartin prison.

The procedures for strip searching at Long Lartin are the same as those contained in the Prison Service manual on security, copies of which are available in the Library. Prison staff at Long Lartin do not perform intimate searches.

Strip searches are performed mainly on two occasions: during a cell search and on suspicion following a visit.

Figures are not available in the form requested, however of the 203 cell searches carried out between January and April, there were 100 finds of unauthorised articles. During the period November 1995 and April 1996, 139 searches were conducted following visits which resulted in three items being found.

Details of the articles and where they were found could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Prison Visitors (Drugs)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visitors to prisons in England and Wales were charged with attempting to import drugs into prisons during 1995. [26088]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 23 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about how many visitors to prisons in England and Wales were charged with attempting to import drugs into prisons during 1995.

Charges relating to offences by visitors of attempting to bring drugs into prisons are brought by the police.

There are no central records held by the police or Prison Service on the number of such charges and this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Gun Dealers

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many licensed gun dealers there are currently in the United Kingdom. [25569]

Mr. Maclean: The latest available information on firearms dealers was published in the Home Office statistical bulletin "Firearm Certificate Statistics, England and Wales 1994", issue 11/95, copies of which can be found in the Library. The bulletin contains the information that 2,521 firearms dealers were registered at 31 December 1994.

Figures for Scotland are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and figures for Northern Ireland are a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Live Animal Export Demonstrations (Policing)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the cost of policing demonstrations against the export of live calves during 1995. [25570]

Mr. Maclean: During 1995, eight police authorities incurred additional expenditure as a result of demonstrations against the export of live animals. I understand from them that the estimated additional costs caused by these demonstrations in the year were £7,746,225. It is not possible to apportion costs by type of animal.

Dorset Police Authority

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by how much funding to the Dorset police authority has increased since 1979; what percentage this represents in real terms; what has been the increase in (a) police officers and (b) civilian staff over the same period; and if he will make a statement on future funding and manpower. [25754]

Mr. Maclean: Expenditure on the Dorset police increased by £56.87 million between April 1979 and March 1996. This is a real terms increase of 110.6 per cent. During this period, police strength increased by 123—plus 11 per cent.—and civilian support staff strength increased by 344—124 per cent.

The spending power of the Dorset police in 1996–97 will be £68.1 million. This includes £250,000 as their share of the extra funding for more officers, sufficient to recruit 13 more constables. This is an increase of 3.9 per cent.—£2.6 million—over 1995–96. My right hon. and learned Friend has additionally exercised his powers under section 31(1)(b) of the Police Act 1964 and awarded the force special grant of up to £1.5 million for national security expenditure at the Government party conference in October. I understand from the chief constable that police strength is expected to increase by 19 by the end of March 1997.

Ministerial Visit (Soho)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the findings of his official visit to Soho on the night of 1 to 2 April; who accompanied him; and from which budget the visit was funded. [25575]

Mr. Howard: On 1 April, as one of a number of visits I undertook that day to Metropolitan police operations, I accompanied members of the Metropolitan police on one of their regular foot patrols in Soho. The patrol provided me with an insight into the reality of day-to-day policing.

From the Department, I was accompanied by a private secretary and, in view of the known media interest in my visit, two press officers. No additional expenditure was incurred as a result of the visit except for nominal overtime costs.

Private Prisons (Assaults)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the average assault rate since October 1995 in all privately operated prisons and their Prison Service operated comparator group establishments. [25195]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 23 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking for the average assault rate since October 1995 in all privately operated prisons and their Prison Service operated comparator group establishments.

A report has been commissioned from consultants Coopers and Lybrand to assess the relative costs and performance of contractually managed prisons against comparable establishments in the public sector during 1994/5. This report will be published in the next few weeks.

I will write to the Honourable Member following publication of the Coopers and Lybrand report with information on the period mentioned in his question.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Education Exhibition

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee if he has considered an application for an exhibition relating to Education Extra and the Open School to be displayed in the Upper Waiting Hall. [26369]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: I understand that, under procedures agreed by the Administration Committee, arrangements have been made for the exhibition to be held in the Upper Waiting Hall from Monday 29 April to Friday 3 May 1996.

WALES

Dental Services

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 25 March, Official Report, columns 451-52, on people who have been deregistered from their dentist, (1) if the table includes patients deregistered by dentists because of their dissatisfaction with the remuneration system; and deregistrations for what reasons are excluded; [25224]

(2) if the statistical basis for calculating the number of people deregistered by their dentists is the same as that applied by the Department of Health; and what changes in the method of calculation have been made in the last 18 months. [25225]

Mr. Richards: Welsh family health services authorities were asked to provide, at fortnightly intervals, the number of child and adult patients for whom dentists have given them written notice to deregister during the previous two-week period. They were not asked to record reasons.

This information is simply recorded and aggregated by the Welsh Office to produce the all-Wales figure and cumulative totals; the procedure has not been changed.

Statistical procedures applied in England are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on what date dentists were first required to register their patients; and when his Department first received information (a) total registrations with dentists and (b) total deregistrations by dentists from each family health services authority or equivalent body. [25222]

Mr. Richards: Dentists have been able to register patients since 1 October 1990. The Dental Practice Board first published the numbers of patients registered for each family health services authority in January 1991. Information about deregistrations has been supplied by each Welsh family health services authority fortnightly since 14 August 1992.

Local Authority Negligence Claims

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultation he has had with local authority associations and the Association of British Insurers concerning the adequacy of insurance cover for local authority negligence claims in connection with the publication of independent reports commissioned by local authorities. [25878]

Mr. Hague: None.

National Library of Wales

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will discuss with the officers of the national library of Wales the adequacy of the number of staff it can currently employ to meet its responsibilities; and if he will make a statement. [26182]

Mr. Hague: The Under-Secretary of State, my hon. Friend the Member for Clwyd, North-West (Mr. Richards), met library officers on 27 March to review its 1996–97 operational plan, including proposed staffing. The library's grant in aid for 1996–97 includes additional funding for operation of the third library building, including provision for additional staff.

Breast Cancer

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people were diagnosed with breast cancer in (i) 1993, (ii) 1994 and (iii) 1995 in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [25244]

Mr. Richards: The latest information on the number of Welsh residents with newly registered cases of breast cancer was published in "Health Statistics Wales 1995", a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Penmaenbach Tunnel

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what maintenance costs have been incurred on the Penmaenbach tunnel since 1991; and what proportion of this has been to deal with the cracks in the lining of the tunnel. [25893]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The average annual civil engineering maintenance cost of Penmaenbach tunnel is approximately £45,000, of which about 5 per cent. is expended in dealing with monitoring and treating the cracking.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the cause of the cracks in the Penmaenbach tunnel; and say whether these cracks have grown worse in the last five years. [25892]

Mr. Jones: The cracking in the non-structural unreinforced concrete lining of the Penmaenbach tunnel was and is due to shrinkage of the concrete during the normal curing process. Some shrinkage is inevitable during this process.

There has been a small increase in the cracking over the last five years, but this is no more than would be expected to occur during the residual part of the concrete curing process, which takes some years.

Battlefields Register

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to publish a battlefields register for Wales. [25845]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: We have no plans currently to produce a battlefields register for Wales. In England a register has been produced which lists 43 known, and often well-documented, sites of significant military engagements. Military action in Wales generally took the form of skirmishes and sieges. In the latter case, these were often associated with major fortifications and related earthworks which are protected under the provisions of the Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979.

Environmental Health Action Plan

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to publish an environmental health action plan for Wales. [25838]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: A public consultation draft of the UK environmental health action plan was issued in August 1995 and it is now being revised in light of comments received. It is proposed that a UK plan will be issued in the summer of this year.

Welsh Health Common Services Authority

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority concerning (i) the market-testing procedures for the materials management section of the authority and (ii) requests for post-tender adjustments by Exel Logistics; [26507]

(2) what guidelines he has issued to the Welsh Health Common Services Authority concerning market-testing procedures and the amendment of winning tenders between the award and the signature of the contracts; [26508]

(3) what representations he has received concerning Exel Logistics market-testing award for the materials management section of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority; and if he will make a statement. [26509]

Mr. Hague: I have had no consultations with the chairman about the market-testing exercise. One representation has been received, from the hon. Member. This exercise is being carried out in line with current procedures and negotiations are continuing on a commercially confidential basis.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Avon County Council

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if she will consider taking action against Avon county council for failing to provide the child whose name has been sent to her with any education since July 1994; [24958]

(2) if she will direct Avon county council or its successor authority, Bath and North-East Somerset council to find a suitable school or otherwise offer suitable education for a child whose name has been sent to her; [24956]

(3) if she will direct Avon county council or its successor authority, Bath and North-East Somerset council to discuss with the mother the future education needs of a child whose name has been sent to her. [24957]

Mrs. Gillan [holding answer 16 April 1996]: I shall write to the hon. Member.

Learning Difficulties

Mr. Sedgemore: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if funds and facilities can be provided in the state sector to give children with learning difficulties an education based on the principles used by Professor Feuerstein of the international centre for the enhancement of learning potential in Jerusalem; and if she will ensure provision along these lines is made for the child whose name has been sent to her. [24955]

Mrs. Gillan [holding answer 16 April 1996]: It is for local education authorities and schools to decide how best to meet the needs of children with special educational needs in the light of the statutory code of practice on the identification and assessment of SEN. Where a child has been assessed as requiring a statement of SEN, LEAs have to consult parents and others about the provision to be specified in the statement. It is open to LEAs to use funding from the grants for educational support and training programme for SEN training to train teachers in any area of SEN.

Risk Assessment

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what opportunities there are in the national curriculum to teach risk assessment. [25254]

Mr. Paice: Under the national curriculum for mathematics, pupils are taught from the age of seven to develop an understanding of probability, and older pupils are taught to estimate and calculate the probability of events. Pupils use real contexts in the mathematics classroom, which enables them to expand their understanding of mathematics and its application, and helps prepare them for adult life.

Conductive Education

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what Government resources have been made available in each of the last six years for the development of conductive education in the United Kingdom. [25874]

Mrs. Gillan: The results of a Government-funded research project to examine the effectiveness of conductive education were published in 1993. Since 1994–95, the amounts supported under the grants for educational support and training programme for special educational needs training have been as follows:

1994–95: £9.7 million

1995–96: £10.5 million

1996–97: £10.3 million.

It is open to local education authorities to use this programme to support the training of teachers in conductive education.

Construction Industry Training Board

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many new companies were registered with the Construction Industry Training Board (a) for training and (b) for paying their levy in each year since 1992. [25732]

Mr. Paice: For the years in question the number of new employers (a) registered with the Construction Industry Training Board and (b) assessed to pay levy were as follows:

Year	Total	Assessed to positive levy
1991–92	8,279	1,197
1992–93	8,839	777
1993–94	14,376	1,410
1994–95	18,761	1,994

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what were the total running costs of the Construction Industry Training Board in each year since 1992. [25728]

Mr. Paice: The operating costs for each year since 1992 were as follows:

1991–92: £33.3 million

1992–93: £39.7 million

1993–94: £35.5 million

1994–95: £47.6 million.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the companies which fall within the scope of the Construction Industry Training Board, but who are not registered with the Construction Industry Training Board. [25726]

Mr. Paice: It is not possible to estimate the number of companies which fall within the scope of the board but which are not registered.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many court cases the Construction Industry Training Board initiated in 1995 to recover costs of training levy from those who refused to pay it. [25722]

Mr. Paice: During 1995, 3,408 summonses were issued and 978 cases required enforcement action through the courts.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much money was spent by the Construction Industry training Board in each year since 1992. [25730]

Mr. Paice: The total expenditure for each year since 1992 was as follows:

1991–92: £116.2 million

1992–93: £115.2 million

1993–94: £ 87.8 million

1994–95: £101.3 million.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many firms involved solely in the construction and erection of agricultural buildings are registered for training levy with the Construction Industry Training Board. [25725]

Mr. Paice: No figure is available for the number of firms involved solely in the construction and erection of agricultural buildings.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people are employed by the Construction Industry Training Board to supervise the registration of companies. [25733]

Mr. Paice: The board employs 15 staff whose duties include the registration of companies.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much money was raised via payment to the Construction Industry Training board by construction companies towards training grants awarded by the Construction Industry Training Board. [25729]

Mr. Paice: For the year ending March 1995, £61.9 million was raised from the levy on employers and training grants of £30.8 million were awarded.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many employees are currently working for the Construction Industry Training Board. [25727]

Mr. Paice: The Construction Industry Training Board currently has a total of 967 employees, of whom 922 are permanent staff and 45 are on temporary contracts.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much money was raised in levy by the Construction Industry Training Board in each year since 1992. [25731]

Mr. Paice: The levy income for each year since 1992 was as follows:

1991–92: £62.8 million

1992–93: £57.4 million

1993–94: £46.5 million

1994–95: £61.9 million.

Local Education Authority Reserves

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for each education authority in England, and by class and in total, the amount of balances held in reserve for each year since 1990. [25743]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table shows all general fund reserves for each local authority with an education service in England since 1990.

Local Authority Reserves 1990–1995

	Reserves (£000s) as at:

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many and what percentage of parents of four-year-olds in each of the pilot authorities (a) were expected to apply for vouchers and (b) applied for vouchers. [25599]

Mr. Robin Squire: Estimates of population and pupil numbers are less reliable when broken down by local authority and by year group. The estimated number of children, the number of applications and the percentage of eligible children this represents are given in the table.

Local authority area	Estimated number of four-year-olds	Number of applications at 12 April 1996	Percentage of estimated four-year-olds
Norfolk	9,300	8,517	92
Kensington and Chelsea	1,650	910	55
Wandsworth	3,300	2,786	84
Westminster	1,900	1,133	60

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many places have been made available to four-year-olds in (a) the private, (b) the voluntary and (c) the maintained sectors following initial validation; and how many such places are new places. [25600]

Mr. Squire: Information on where parents have chosen to redeem nursery education vouchers will be available once vouchers returned from providers have been analysed.

The number of children attending maintained schools is given in the following table.

Local education authority	Four-year-olds in maintained provision at January 1995
Kensington and Chelsea	800
Wandsworth	2,600
Westminster	1,100
Norfolk	6,300

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment which local education authorities refused to take part in the trials on nursery vouchers. [26445]

Mr. Squire: All local education authorities were invited to volunteer to participate in phase 1 of the nursery education voucher scheme; Kensington and Chelsea, Wandsworth, Westminster and Norfolk decided to take part.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of funding to be made available to her Department through the private finance initiative in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26174]

Mr. Robin Squire: The capital that the Department expects to raise through the private finance initiative is set out at table 6.5 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1996–97", a copy of which is placed in the House of Commons Library. That document shows that for 1996–97 and 1997–98 capital spend via the private finance initiative is expected to be £20 million and £40 million respectively. There is no available information on finance raised by the Department through the private finance initiative for 1995–96. The figures do not include the significant capital expected to be raised through the private finance initiative by independent educational institutions, which include universities, further education colleges and grant-maintained schools.

Sixth Forms

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the criteria on which decisions to approve applications to open a sixth form are based; and in what circumstances she would reject the advice of the Further Education Funding Council on such applications. [26213]

Mr. Paice: The Secretary of State has regard to the following criteria when considering proposals from schools for the addition of sixth forms:

- whether the proposals will significantly increase choice and diversity in the area concerned;
- whether there is a basic need for new provision and, if not, whether the viability of existing good quality provision would be adversely affected if the proposals were approved;
- whether the provision will be of sufficient size and quality to deliver a reasonably wide-ranging curriculum; and
- whether the provision will be delivered at reasonable cost.

We look at each proposal on its merits in the light of these criteria and taking account of all the circumstances, including any objections. If the Further Education Funding Council objects to a proposal, its comments are considered alongside those of other interested parties and of the proposers.

Grant-maintained Schools

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures she proposes to take to ensure that grant-maintained schools are subject to adequate financial controls. [26214]

Mr. Robin Squire: Under the Education Act 1993, the Funding Agency for Schools is responsible for the financial monitoring of grant-maintained schools. The agency issued a comprehensive set of requirements and guidance for schools in December 1995. It will keep these under review.

Wakefield TEC

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the total amount of money paid to the Wakefield training and enterprise council to assist with social and economic regeneration in respect of the pit closure programme; and if she will make a statement. [26273]

Mr. Paice: Over the last three years, over £6 million has been available to Wakefield training and enterprise council as part of the agreed "coal plan" to assist in areas affected by the closures of collieries. Of this, over £4.5 million has been paid directly to the TEC, and the balance has been available to fund allowances to support unemployed adults attending additional training for work provision and organised by the TEC. Other Government funding available to the TEC will also have benefited former mining areas.

Careers Service Companies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what (a) annual reports, (b) annual accounts, (c) minutes of meetings, (d) agendas of meetings and (e) registers of members' interests are published by careers service companies; and if in each case this is under a statutory requirement. [25970]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The Companies Acts require all companies to publish an annual directors' report which is available to the public. They also require the accounts of all companies to be lodged with Companies House where they may be examined by the public. The Secretary of State's contract with careers service companies also obliges them to be responsive and accountable to their local communities. Many careers service companies publish annual reports as one way of demonstrating this requirement. Careers service companies under contract to the Secretary of State are private companies and access to minutes of meetings or to any registers of members' interests is a matter for the directors.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Educationa and Employment if she will place in the Library a copy of the letter sent to regional offices on 22 March suggesting that TECs be vigilant in relation to the viability and probity of training providers. [26506]

Mr. Paice: The letter to regional offices included advice and guidance of a confidential nature which it would be inappropriate to place in the Library.

HEALTH

Bonemeal

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the health risks to humans from food grown following (a) the use of bonemeal and (b) the practice of ploughing in abattoir and butchers' animal waste; [23327]

(2) if he will make a statement on the risks to health of gardeners who use bonemeal made from beef cattle bones. [23323]

Mr. Horam: It is not considered that there is a risk to human health from the use of bonemeal for horticultural purposes or from eating food grown following its use. Bovine spongiform encephalopathy infected animals are incinerated and specified bone material is destroyed and is not used as bonemeal for any purpose. The spreading of waste on land for the benefit of agriculture or ecological improvement, including abattoir waste consisting of blood and gut contents from animals slaughtered for human consumption, is a recovery operation for the purposes of the amended European Community framework directive on waste. The spreading of waste for these purposes is controlled under part II of the Environmental Protection Act 1990 and the Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994. It must be carried out without endangering animals or human health or posing a risk to the environment. Codes of practice have been issued in Great Britain which offer farmers and others spreading waste for these purposes guidance on good practice.

Asthma

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what was the cost to the NHS of providing acute care to adults suffering from occupational asthma attacks in the last five financial years; [25788]

(2) what was the cost to the NHS of treating adult occupational asthma sufferers, in each year from 1989–90 to 1994–85; [25786]

(3) what are the main drugs used to control and treat adult occupational asthma sufferers; and how much the NHS spent on providing them in each of the last five years. [25787]

Mr. Horam: Information is not available on the costs to the national health service of occupational asthma. The main types of drug used to control and treat all asthma, including occupational asthma, are anti-inflammatory drugs and bronchodilators. The net ingredient cost of NHS prescriptions is collected on a calendar year basis. The net ingredient cost is the basic price of a drug before discounts and the addition of dispensing costs or fees. The available information for asthma medication is shown in the table.

Year	Net ingredient cost (£ million)
1991	260
1992	305
1994	381

Information on the cost of other NHS services, including acute care, is not available for individual conditions. However, the Department has provisionally estimated that the cost of services for asthma was £150 million in 1993.

Elderly People (Care)

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he proposes to publish his consultative document on care of the elderly. [24685]

Mr. Bowis: Shortly.

Sperm Counts

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research has been commissioned by his Department concerning the possible causes of declining sperm counts. [25207]

Mr. Horam: The main agency through which the Government supports medical and clinical research is the Medical Research Council which receives its grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade. The MRC has recently completed research which suggests that semen quality in the United Kingdom is deteriorating and referred to possible environmental factors. The results of the research were published in the British Medical Journal on 24 February 1996.

Nurses

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) registered general nurses and (b) registered mental nurses have qualified in each year since 1986. [25864]

Mr. Horam: The information is not available centrally. I refer the hon. Member to the English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting annual reports, copies of which are available in the Library.

Methadone Deaths

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on deaths from methadone in each of the past five years. [26435]

Mr. Bowis: Methadone is an established substitute drug therapy used internationally to treat people who are opiate dependent. The latest available information on deaths related to drug misuse covering a five-year period is given in the 1994 Home Office Statistical Bulletin "Statistics of Drug Addicts Notified to the Home Office, United Kingdom", 1994, copies of which are available in the Library. The task force set up to review the effectiveness of drug treatment services has examined methadone treatment in detail. We shall publish the report shortly and issue guidance to health authorities later this summer.

We issued guidelines on clinical management[1] to all doctors in 1991 which provided advice on assessing and reviewing a patient's drug problem, including prescribing where appropriate. Copies of the guidelines are available in the Library.

Methadone dispensed for consumption at home, as with any other medicine, should be stored securely and kept out of the reach of children.

Mr. Nigel Whittaker

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what work Mr. Nigel Whittaker has undertaken for Ministers or his Department; and on what basis he has been appointed. [26453]

Mr. Horam: Mr. Nigel Whittaker has been involved, as a member of a two-man team deployed by the Malcolm Hurlston Corporate Consultancy, in preparing a report for the Department of Health on need for 24-hour nursed beds for people with very severe and enduring mental illness who need a high degree of support for long periods. The consultancy firm will be undertaking further work for us over the coming year to ensure speedy implementation of this essential element of provision.

Hospitals (Private Finance Initiative)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the PFI contracts for the (i) Norfolk and Norwich, (ii) South Buckinghamshire, (iii) Carlisle, (iv) Swindon, (v) North Durham and (vii) Bishop Auckland hospitals have now been signed. [26484] p Mr. Horam: The contracts for the above schemes are being negotiated between the trusts and their private sector partners.

Health Authority Headquarters Building (Harrogate)

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those companies involved as partners or co-developers in the purchase of the former headquarters of the Yorkshire regional health authority at Harrogate. [21526]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 19 March 1996]: Dysart Developments Ltd. was the shortlisted organisation whose tender was selected for the development of the new regional office at Durham.

The tender involved Dysart Developments Ltd. being responsible for the developments of the new headquarters building, and for ensuring purchase of the former Yorkshire regional health authority offices. The purchase of the former Yorkshire regional health authority headquarters in Harrogate was completed by Simpart No. 128, later renamed Harrogate and London Properties Ltd.

There were no other partners or co-developers.

Employment Termination Payments

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a statement on the irregular employment termination payments cited in paragraphs 49, 52 and 53 of the report of the Comptroller and Auditor General "NHS (England) Summarised Accounts 1994–95", including the names of the trusts and health authorities that made irregular settlements, the name and rank of each person in receipt of an irregular settlement, and the date upon which each settlement was made and the date upon which the irregularity of each settlement was brought to the attention of the NHS executive. [21653]

Mr. Barron: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list, as far as possible, the recipients, amounts paid and health service bodies making payments that were uncovered by the departmental trawl of questionable severance cases. [22889]

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the health authority, the sum of money involved and the date of each of the employment termination settlements mentioned in paragraphs 49, 52 and 53 of the Comptroller and Auditor General's report on the "NHS (England) Summarised Accounts 1994–95". [22989]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 20 March 1996]: This matter is still under consideration.

Mr. Mudie: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give a breakdown of the 87 employment settlements made by health authorities and deemed irregular by the National Audit Office (a) by health authority and (b) by amount; and if he will list those whose recovery is being sought (i) by health authority and (ii) by amount. [21999]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 21 March 1996]: This matter is still under consideration.

Surplus Property

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 321, if he will place in the Library a list by region of the 876 properties that are surplus to NHS requirements. [24380]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 2 April 1996]: It would be premature to publish a list of all those properties currently identified as being possibly for sale over the next ten years.

Changing patterns of health care delivery mean that some properties which are listed are in the planning process and final decisions have not yet been made. These properties have not been transferred to national health service trusts, but may be occupied and utilised by NHS trusts for up to 10 years. They will be offered for sale only at the appropriate time.

All properties which are actually for sale are advertised locally or nationally.

Committee on Safety of Medicines

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reasons his Department gave to each of the six members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines who were not reappointed as of 1 January for not wishing to reappoint them; and if he will make a statement. [25739]

Mr. Malone: None.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines have received honours. [25811]

Mr. Malone: Four members of the committee hold honours.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of funding to be made available to his Department through the private finance initiative in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26176]

Mr. Horam: Estimates of capital funding made available by the private sector as a result of the private finance initiative were provided at the time of the November 1995 Budget. The information for the Department of Health is reproduced in the list:

1995–96: £50 million

1996–97: £170 million

1997–98: £200 million

Birth Defects (Assaults)

Mr. Keith Hill: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has evaluated on the number and proportion of birth defects to children caused by assaults on their mothers by spouses or partners during pregnancy; and if he will make a statement. [26011]

Mr. Bowis: None.

Hospital Trusts (Ex Gratia Payments)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the changes in the maximum amount of ex gratia payments which an individual NHS hospital trust can give without referral to the NHS executive over the past five years. [25941]

Mr. Horam: The delegated limit to individual national health service trusts for all ex gratia payments from inception to July 1995 was £5,000. In July 1995 the delegated limit in respect of ex gratia payments for clinical negligence and personal injury cases involving negligence was increased to £1 million, for those cases where appropriate qualified legal advice had been obtained and where departmental guidance is followed. In cases where the appropriate legal advice was not obtained the limit remained at £5,000.

The revised losses and special payments guidance issued in December 1995 promulgated new limits as follows:

To patients and staff for loss of personal effects	50,000
For clinical negligence—negotiated settlements following legal advice—where the guidance relating to such payments has been applied	[1]1,000,000
For personal injury claims involving negligence where legal advice obtained and relevant guidance has been applied	[1]1,000,000
Other clinical negligence cases and personal injury claims	50,000
Other, except cases of maladministration where there was no financial loss by claimant	50,000
Maladministration where there was no financial loss by claimant	Nil
Patient referrals outside the UK and European Economic Area guidelines	Nil

Ambulance Service

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the ambulance cost per mile by ambulance authority in 1994–95. [26320]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 29 March, Official Report, column 781.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Belfast Gas Network

Mr. Hume: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which companies have submitted bids for the purchase of the old Belfast Gas network; what plans they have submitted for developing the Belfast network; which was the highest bid; and what was the Department of Economic Development's response. [24867]

Mr. Ancram: Bids were submitted by Northern Ireland Electricity and Premier Energy Suppliers Ltd. NIE made the higher bid, but both bids were heavily qualified. Both companies submitted plans for developing the Belfast network. The plan submitted by Premier Energy Suppliers Ltd. was considered to meet most closely the Government's objectives of the most rapid and extensive as possible development of a downstream gas industry.

The Department is currently engaged in negotiations with Premier Energy Suppliers Ltd. on licence terms for the development of a natural gas industry in an area which includes Belfast. The availability of the former network is essential to this development and its purchase is an integral part of the negotiations.

Incapacity Benefit

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in Northern Ireland who were in receipt of invalidity benefit have since been declared ineligible for incapacity benefit; and how many have had their cases listed for hearing by the independent tribunal service. [25523]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Social Security Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alec Wylie. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Alec Wylie to Dr. Joe Hendron, dated 22 April 1996:

I have been asked to reply to your recent parliamentary question on Incapacity Benefit.

You asked for information on the number of people who were in receipt of Invalidity Benefit who have since been declared ineligible for Incapacity Benefit. Unfortunately, records are not maintained on the actual number of claims which were either allowed or disallowed but I can tell you that from 13 April 1995 to 31 March 1996, 7539 claims were disallowed solely on incapacity grounds. Not included in this figure are claims disallowed for other reasons such as insufficient contributions or late claims.

You also wished to know how many cases which were disallowed have been listed for appeal hearing by the Independent Tribunal Service. I can advise you that a total of 1832 Incapacity Benefit appeals have been received for the period 13 April 1995 to 31 March 1996. To date 841 have been cleared, 311 of which were allowed by the Appeal Tribunal. Of the remaining 991, 247 are with the Independent Tribunal Service for hearing and 744 are being prepared by the Agency.

I hope this explains the position for you but I would be happy to provide you with any further information you require.

Prisoner Releases

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many prisoners are planned to be released from prison in Northern Ireland in each of the next 12 months; and what proportion of these have benefited from the increase in remission rates introduced in the Northern Ireland (Remission of Sentences) Order 1995. [25461]

Sir John Wheeler: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Northern Ireland Prison Service under its chief executive, Mr. Alan Shannon. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. D. Shannon to Ms Marjorie Mowlam, dated 23 April 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to the Parliamentary Question you tabled relating to the numbers of prisoners it is planned to release from prison in Northern Ireland in each of the next 12 months.

The information which you are seeking is contained in the attached table. In brief a total of 513 prisoners of whom 75 are affected by the Northern Ireland (Remission of Sentences) Order 1995 are expected to be released from prison during the period 1 May 1996 and 30 April 1997. You should note that this figure does not include 20 prisoners who are in the final stage of release from life sentences and who are provisionally expected to be released during the next 12 months.

You should also note that these figures are based on the prison population at the date of writing and cannot take account of the restoration of remission to individual prisoners.

I hope this is helpful.

Expected releases from 1 May 1996 to 30 April 1997—Figures in brackets represent the numbers affected by the application of the Northern Ireland (Remission of Sentences) Act 1995

Date	MAGILL	MAGH'B	MAZE	YOC	Total
May 1996	44 (1)	8 (1)	24 (2)	20 (0)	96 (4)
June	40 (1)	18 (1)	14 (4)	11 (0)	83 (6)

Total	243 (15)	69 (18)	128 (42)	73 (0)	513 (75)

In addition there are currently 20 prisoners who are in the final stages of release from life sentences and who are provisionally expected to be released during the next 12 months. None of these prisoners have benefited directly from the 1995 increase in remission rates.

Water Quality

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures are presently being taken to monitor the quality of water at the point of consumption. [25519]

Mr. Moss: The quality of water supplied to consumers in Northern Ireland by the Water Executive is monitored in accordance with the provisions of the Water and Sewerage Services (Northern Ireland) Order 1973, as amended, and the Water Quality Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1994. These provisions incorporate EC water quality standards and monitoring requirements. Information about the quality of public water supplies is available on a public register at the four divisional offices of the Water Executive in Ballymena, Belfast, Craigavon and Londonderry. The first annual reports of the quality of the Water Executive supplies, required under the 1994 regulations will be published in June 1996 along with reports to district councils summarising the quality of supplies within their areas.

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what measures are presently being taken to monitor the level and concentration of asbestos fibres in the public water supply system at the point of consumption; [25520]

(2) what measures are presently being taken to monitor the level and concentration of asbestos fibres in the water supply system subsequent to breakages in asbestos cement water mains; [25521]

(3) what measures are presently being taken to ensure that the asbestos cement pipes currently in use are of an acceptable structural integrity, with particular reference to corrosion by the water supply; and how long they have been in existence. [25522]

Mr. Moss: Consideration of a report by the water research centre commissioned by the Department's Water Executive into the use of asbestos cement pipes is nearly completed. I expect in the near future to be in a position to make an announcement about the future use of asbestos cement pipes by the Water Executive.

Green Park HSS Healthcare Trust

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) how much money has been expended in connection with legal costs as a result of settled and on-going actions on the foot of orders from a fair employment or industrial tribunal since the appointment of the present chief executive of the Green Park HSS healthcare trust; [25555]

(2) how much money has been expended in connection with legal costs incurred as a result of settlements out of court, settled and on-going actions in respect of fair employment and industrial tribunal actions since the appointment of the present chief executive of the Green Park HSS healthcare trust. [25556]

Mr. Moss: Since 1993, the trust has been provided with legal services by the legal department, Central Services Agency. The services were provided through a standard yearly agreement. In addition, the trust purchased ad hoc services from another legal source.

The costs of legal services in respect of fair employment and industrial tribunal cases do not appear as a separate element of the agreement with the Central Services Agency irrespective of how much or how little the service has been utilised. Our counsel fees can be identified. However, it is normal practice for any counsel involved on behalf of the trust, whether through the Central Services Agency or through the ad hoc arrangement, to bill for services at the conclusion of the case. Any information that could therefore be provided in relation to legal services would be incomplete.

Mr. Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money has been expended on the foot of orders from a fair employment or industrial tribunal since the appointment of the present chief executive of the Green Park HSS healthcare trust. [25557]

Mr. Moss: The trust was ordered to pay costs amounting to £270.25 in relation to its non-compliance with an order for discovery of documents concerning an ongoing case. The issue arose in 1994. No other moneys have been paid on foot of orders by a fair employment or industrial tribunal since the appointment of the present chief executive.

Mr. Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money has been expended in connection with out-of-court settlements in respect of fair employment or industrial tribunal actions since the appointment of the present chief executive of the Green Park HSS Healthcare Trust. [25558]

Mr. Moss: Out-of-court settlements in respect of fair employment or industrial tribunal actions since the appointment of the present chief executive of Green Park HSS healthcare trust are shown in the table.

Number of cases	Type of case	Date lodged	Date settled	Amount of settlements £
2[1]	Fair employment	1992	1994	40,000
2[1]	Sex discrimination
1[1]	Trade union activities
1	Sex discrimination	1991	1993	2,000
1	Unfair dismissal	1994	1996	2,000

Housing Benefit

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many non-housing executive and housing association recipients of housing benefit there were in each Northern Ireland constituency in 1995; and what was the amount paid in each case. [25757]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many new housing benefit claims in Belfast and North Down in the most recent week for which figures are available were processed with the name of an estate agent but without details of a beneficial landlord. [25756]

Mr. Moss: None. All cases processed carry details of the estate agent and landlord.

Industrial Development Board

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the 10 new inward investment projects for Northern Ireland that the Industrial Development Board negotiated in 1994–95. [26228]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The 10 new inward investment projects negotiated during 1994–95 by IDB were as follows:

Transtec Foundries Ltd.

Allen Industrial Ltd.

ABC Laboratories (Europe) Ltd.

Daehwa Metal (UK) Ltd.

Real Software (NI) Ltd.

Daewoo Electro Components UK Ltd.

Radix Telecom Ltd.

Daewoo Electronics UK Ltd.

Seagate Technology (Ireland)

Northern Bank Factors Ltd.

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give a breakdown of estimated spending for 1996–97 in the Industrial Development Board within the units of (a) purchases of office and computer equipment, (b) purchase, development and landscaping of sites and construction of factories, (c) repair and maintenance of factories and sites and (d) payments for services provided by estate agents. [26206]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The estimated expenditure for 1996–97 is as follows:

Office and Computer Equipment	127
Purchase, development and landscaping of sites and construction of factories	33,021
Repair and Maintenance of factories and sites	686
Payments for service provided by Estate Agents	29

Local Enterprise Development Unit

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures are in place to monitor the use made of money given by the LEDU to small businesses in Northern Ireland. [26227]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 April 1996]: In addition to the monitoring obligations of the Department of Finance and Personnel, the Department of Economic Development and the Northern Ireland Audit Office, LEDU operates an extensive appraisal, monitoring and evaluation system with regard to the allocation, measurement and impact assessment of its assistance to small businesses.

Formal appraisal is carried out ensuring that all forms of assistance offered by LEDU meet the objectives of the organisation in the most efficient, effective and economic manner.

An independent evaluation of LEDU's impact on its client companies is undertaken on LEDU's behalf by the Northern Ireland Economic Research Council. This takes the form of an annual survey to measure the survivability, growth in employment for all clients, and sales and export sales for a subset of clients. In addition, LEDU operates a rolling evaluation schedule whereby all major schemes are evaluated every five years.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of CAP payments in Northern Ireland go to farms of over (a) 60 and (b) 100 hectares. [26217]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 April 1996]: It is not possible to proportion CAP payments in this way, but the proportion of Northern Ireland farms in these sizes which attract CAP payments is as follows:

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provisions have been made to combat CAP fraud in Northern Ireland. [26192]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 April 1996]: Claims for payments under CAP measures are subjected to a wide range of anti-fraud action including the inspection of books and records, on-farm inspections including unannounced visits by verification staff, inspection of stocks in stores, marking of animals, secure information recording on computer and computer cross-checks, and extensive manual desk checks. All CAP payments are now subject to the control provisions of the integrated administration and control system which in particular enable checks to be made that animals and land used for arable or livestock production are not claim or declared by more than one producer.

Village School Closures

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many village schools have been closed in Northern Ireland since 1979. [26233]

Mr. Ancram: [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The information is not available in the form requested. However, since 1979 a total of 155 primary schools either were closed or amalgamated with other schools.

Small Businesses

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provisions the Department of Economic Development in Northern Ireland makes for giving small businesses access to long-term loans. [26191]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The Local Enterprise Development Unit has two options for providing small businesses with long-term loan finance. Both options are subject to the business owner having exhausted all other sources of promoter or private sector equity, bank and commercial sources of finance including hire purchase, leasing and the small firms loan guarantee scheme.

The options are:

1. Preference share capital. LEDU can invest up to £250,000 in the form of non-voting redeemable non-cumulative preference shares. This capital is normally repayable at the end of a five-year period and LEDU may choose to waive dividends for the first two years of the investment.

2. Loans. Loans may be offered where a LEDU preference share investment is not practical. Security is sought for all loans; however, unsecured loans can be offered up top £10,000 and secured loans can be offered over £60,000.

Rural Bus Services

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many rural parishes in Northern Ireland have no daily bus service. [26194]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 22 April 1996]: This information is not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Selective Assistance and Trade Support Unit

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what factors underlay the decrease in spending on the selective assistance and trade support unit in the Department of Economic Development, in each of the years from 1990–91 to 1997–98. [26202]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The key factor which accounts for the decrease in spending on selective assistance and trade support in the years 1990–91 to 1997–98 is the gradual decline in expenditure under the packages of financial assistance which supported the privatisation of Harland and Wolff and Short Bros. in the late 1980s.

For example, expenditure under the privatisation arrangements totalled £90 million in 1991–92 but had decreased to £35 million by 1994–95. The provision for 1997–98 stands at £7 million.

Housing Association Rents

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what form of regulation is in place to check the rents charged by housing associations in Northern Ireland to their tenants. [26223]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 22 April 1996]: Under article 8 of the Housing (Northern Ireland) Order 1992, registered housing associations in Northern Ireland may fix the amount of rent to be charged for any housing accommodation they provide under a tenancy granted on or after the 16 September 1992. Guidance issued by the Department of Environment, Northern Ireland however stipulates that rents should be affordable and within the reach of tenants in low-paid employment.

Rents for lettings granted prior to 16 September 1992 are controlled by means of a determination issued by the Department and registered housing associations are required to charge the same rent as that which would be charged by the Northern Ireland Housing Executive for similar properties. Compliance is checked by the Department by means of the cyclical monitoring of associations.

Public Housing Sales

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland to which Department the money collected by the Housing Executive from the sale of public housing went in each of the years from 1990 to 1995. [26231]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 22 April 1996]: Money collected by the Housing Executive is retained by it as a capital receipt and included in the resources available to meet their organisational objectives. Additional capital receipts above those included in estimates are surrendered to the Northern Ireland block.

Homelessness

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many homeless people have been recorded in rural areas in Northern Ireland in each year since 1979. [26193]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 22 April 1996]: This is a matter for the Northern Ireland Housing Executive, whose chief executive has advised me that the information is not available in the form requested. The Housing Executive became responsible for providing accommodation for the homeless only in 1989 and maintains statistics by Housing Executive district management area. The statistics do not distinguish between rural and urban areas.

Set-aside Scheme

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money was spent, under the common agricultural policy, on set-aside in Northern Ireland in 1995; and how much will be spent in 1996. [26218]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 April 1996]: Some £538,000 was spent on set-aside in Northern Ireland in 1995. The estimated cost of payments on set-aside in 1996 are £633,000.

Fair Employment

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what assessment he has made of the contribution of (a) policy appraisal of fair treatment and (b) targeting social need to the creation of employment opportunities. [26226]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 April 1996]: Neither of these initiatives directly aims to create additional employment opportunities.

Policy appraisal and fair treatment seek to ensure that issues of equality and equity are fully considered in the policy-making process and in service delivery in all spheres of government activity in Northern Ireland.

Targeting social need is a public expenditure priority established to ensure that resources are directed towards areas and people identified as socially and economically disadvantaged. It complements Governments' social and economic policies, including those aimed at creating employment opportunities.

It is expected that the Standing Advisory Commission on Human Rights will consider the impact of both initiatives in its report on employment equality in Northern Ireland to be published later this year.

Rural Crime

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many crimes have been recorded in rural areas in Northern Ireland in each year since 1979. [26199]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The following figures refer to crimes recorded in the north and south regions. RUC statistics are held by police station area and police stations are sited in urban areas. It is therefore not possible to provide figures for totally "rural" areas.

Figures are not available prior to 1987.

Year	Crimes recorded
1987	22,010
1988	19,273
1989	19,979
1990	21,233
1991	24,452
1992	27,037
1993	28,184
1994	28,453

Breast Cancer

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were diagnosed with breast cancer in (a) 1993, (b) 1994 and (c) 1995 in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [25214]

Mr. Moss: This information is not presently available. A major initiative by the Northern Ireland cancer registry is currently under way to produce reliable incidence data on all cancers including breast cancer.

SCOTLAND

Home and Civil Defence (Kincardine)

Mr. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what facilities for (a) home defence, (b) civil defence, (c) the wartime administration of the police or armed forces and (d) the wartime administration of Departments of central Government have been operated or provided at Kincardine-on-Forth since 1970 (i) in facilities established for that purpose and (ii) otherwise; and for what purpose and at what cost emergency communications links were established or operated within the period 1970 to 1990 between Kincardine and the Scottish Office wartime regional headquarters formerly operated at Barnton quarry, Edinburgh and Anstruther, Fife. [25548]

Mr. Michael Forsyth [holding answer 18 April 1996]: The Scottish Office has not at any time established facilities at Kincardine-on-Forth for the purposes specified in this question. There are no records, or knowledge, of communications links between any premises in Kincardine on Forth and the former regional government headquarters in Barnton quarry, Edinburgh or Anstruther, Fife.

Child Care Initiative

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many places have been created and how much money (a) spent and (b) allocated each year under the out-of-school child care grant initiative. [21391]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 26 March 1996]: The number of places created and sums allocated to the enterprise network for each of the three years of the out-of-school child care initiative are set out in the table. Delivery of the scheme is the responsibility of local enterprise companies and information on the actual amount spent is not available.

Year	Number of places created	£ amount allocated
1993–94
Development phase	—	269,000
1994–95	1,066	1,530.000
1995–96	6.354	2,025.000

Electricity Generating Unit (Gartcosh)

Mr. Stewart: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will direct Scottish Enterprise to make an assessment of the impact on the Scottish economy of the proposal by Powergen to construct a gasfield generating unit at Gartcosh. [25313]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I understand that any sale to PowerGen of land at Gartcosh currently owned by Scottish Enterprise would take place on commercial terms. There is no question of subsidy by Scottish Enterprise of the proposed project and there is consequently no requirement on Scottish Enterprise to undertake an impact assessment.

Isle of Lewis (Roads)

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what sums have been granted from the European regional development fund for road projects on the Isle of Lewis between 1989–80 and 1992–93. [25384]

Mr. Kynoch: The projects and level of award are as follows:

	ERDF award £
B8060 Sheildinish to Kintaravey bridge improvement	375,000
B8011 Ben Mocacleit to Loch Suirstavat improvement	347,000

Escapees

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the risk of attack from escaping prisoners to those residents who live close to a prison. [25912]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. Sam Galbraith, dated 23 April 1996:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your question about what research has been commissioned and evaluated on the risk of attack from escaping prisoners to those residents who live close to a prison.

Public safety is of paramount importance to the Scottish Prison Service and the secure accommodation of the prisoner population is the principal aim of the Service. As part of that process, all prisoners are assessed on a regular basis as to the level of dangerousness they may present to the public if they were to escape and are allocated a security category. Category A and B are the highest categories and prisoners so allocated are subject to particular security precautions and restrictions balanced with the need to provide appropriate care.

Escapes by such prisoners, which were defined as having taken place when a prisoner breaches a perimeter security barrier or evades a secure escort, have been published key targets since April 1993 when the Scottish Prison Service became an Executive Agency. The targets have been met and are published in the Agency's Annual Report which is laid before Parliament and available in the House of Commons Library.

Paramedics

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many qualified paramedics there are per head of population in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [26001]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There is one qualified paramedic for every 14,700 people in Scotland.

Housing Revenue Account

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the (i) planned and (ii) final outturn expenditure on (a) non-HRA capital allocation and (b) HRA capital allocation in each (1) district and (2) islands council for 1995–96. [25585]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The gross housing capital allocations issued to local authorities for 1995–96 on the HRA and non-HRA block are set out in the table. Information on the final outturn expenditure for 1995–96 is not yet available.

European Agricultural Guidance and Guarantee Fund

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in what ways the Scottish Office criteria regarding the allocation of FEOGA funds under EC regulation 866/90 differ from those used by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. [25613]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 22 April 1996]: With effect from 31 March 1996, EC regulation 866/90 does not now operate in England.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many FEOGA grants under EC regulation 866/90 were received by his Department in each year over the past three years on the dates on which decisions were announced. [25614]

Mr. Robertson [holding answer 22 April 1996]: FEOGA grant applications under EC regulation 866/90 received for each tranche of awards were as follows:

19 for consideration in December 1994;

32 new applications plus three carried forward for consideration in June 1995;

29 new applications plus five carried forward for consideration in June 1996.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the time taken in each of the last three years for his Department to process FEOGA grants under EC regulation 866/90. [25615]

Mr. Robertson [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The current scheme under EC regulation 866/90 was opened to applications on 1 July 1994 with the intention that announcements would normally be made in six-monthly tranches. The cut-off date is three months prior to the announcement to allow time for appraisal and selection of best projects.

Applications for the current round closed on 31 March and an announcement will be made in June.

Proposed Power Station, Gartcosh

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will order a public inquiry into the application by PowerGen to establish a gas-fired power station at Gartcosh in Lanarkshire; and if he will make a statement. [25920]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The relevant planning authority has a statutory period of four months in which to submit a report to my right hon. Friend on PowerGen's proposal to build a power station at Gartcosh. Once the report is received, the Secretary of State will consider it together with the advice of his consultees and any representations he may receive from other interested parties. He will then decide whether it is necessary to hold a public inquiry. Such an inquiry is mandatory if the planning authority formally objects to the proposals.

Local Enterprise Companies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what (a) was the gross public spending for each year since 1990–91, in 1995–96 prices and (b) is the projected expenditure for each year to 1997–98, in 1995–96 prices, of local enterprise companies. [25976]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The expenditure of local enterprise companies is an operational matter for Scottish Enterprise. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what (a) annual reports, (b) annual accounts, (c) minutes of meetings, (d) agendas of meetings and (e) registers of members' interests are published by local enterprise companies; and if in each case this is under a statutory requirement. [25968]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 22 April 1996]: Local enterprise companies are private companies limited by guarantee that operate under contract to Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise. The information requested relates to the operational activities of Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise and I have asked the chairmen of these organisations to write to the hon. Member.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if local enterprise companies are subject to (a) investigation by the Parliamentary Commissioner, (b) scrutiny by the Audit Commission, (b) scrutiny by the Audit Commission, (c) scrutiny by the National Audit Office, (d) statutory provisions for open government, (e) performance indicators and (f) provisions under the citizens charter. [25973]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 22 April 1996]: Local enterprise companies are private companies limited by guarantee operating under contract to Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise. They are not therefore subject to the Parliamentary Commissioner, the Accounts Commission—the Scottish equivalent of the Audit Commission—or statutory provisions on open government.

Local enterprise company accounts are audited by commercial auditors. Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise now prepare group accounts which consolidate their results with those of the local enterprise companies. The National Audit Office, as the statutory auditors of Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise, and therefore principal auditors of the group accounts, may require to scrutinise local enterprise company accounts. Local enterprise companies may also be subject to scrutiny by the National Audit Office as part of value-for-money examinations of Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise.

Under the terms of their operating contracts, performance indicators are set for local enterprise companies by Scottish Enterprise and Highlands and Islands Enterprise. Highlands and Islands Enterprise and its local enterprise companies have gained the charter mark award and, under the terms of their operating contracts, local enterprise companies in the Scottish Enterprise area are expected to apply for charter mark status.

Mink

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on how many occasions officials of the state veterinary service have observed the killing of mink on fur farms in the last 12 months; and what method of killing was used in each case. [26483]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I offered him on 19 March, Official Report, column 167, advising that no mink farms had been licensed in Scotland since 1993.

Breast Cancer

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people were diagnosed with breast cancer in (a) 1993, (b) 1994 and (c) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [25210]

Mr. James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is as follows:

Breast cancer registration in Scotland

[1]1995 data not yet complete.

Ambulance Service

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is Her Majesty's Government's policy in respect of NHS trusts in Scotland putting parts of the Scottish ambulance service out to competitive tender. [26026]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Guidance was issued from the NHS management executive in December 1993 on the arrangements for contracting for ambulance services; this included provision for hospitals to invite competitive tenders for non-emergency patient transport services from providers other than the Scottish Ambulance Service NHS trust.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he will take to ensure that ambulance services in Scotland are provided only by staff trained to the same standard as that of the Scottish ambulance service. [26029]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This has been made explicit in the guidance which was issued in December 1993. I have arranged for copies of the guidance to be placed in the Library of the House.

Patient Transport Services

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the remit given to Mr. Lawrence Peterken, special projects director of the Common Services Agency, by chief executives of NHS trusts in Lothian in relation to their patient transport service. [26027]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The chief executives of NHS trusts in Lothian have asked Mr. Peterken to examine the current arrangements for the provision of the non-emergency patient transport service and to report.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with chief executives of NHS trusts in Lothian in respect of their active consideration of putting their patient transport service out to competitive tender. [26028]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: None. This is entirely a matter for the trusts concerned.

Travelling People

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number of sites for travelling people within the highlands recommended by the advisory committee on Scotland's travelling people. [26332]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Secretary of State's advisory committee on travelling people has recommended that 74 pitches are required in the Highland council area to meet the needs of travelling people.

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are the number and location of sites for travelling people in each of the eight districts within the highlands. [26323]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Seventy-four pitches are provided on a number of sites throughout the area, including 20 pitches provided on private sites. The local authority-owned sites in the area are as follows:

Former district council area	Number of pitches	Location
Badenoch and Strathspey	7	Laggan road, Newtonmore
Inverness	20	Longman, Inverness
Lochaber	15	Spean bridge
	12	Kentallan

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total running cost to his Department for the financial years 1991–92 and 1993–94 of the local government compulsory competitive tendering enforcement team. [26324]

Mr. Kynoch: Staff costs of the unit currently responsible for administering local government compulsory tendering are expected to total £56,000 in the current financial year. The corresponding figures for 1991–92 and 1993–94, based on current salaries, were £94,000 and £115,000 respectively.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many complaints his Department received alleging anti-competitive behaviour by local authorities in Scotland under the terms of the Local Government Act 1988 for the financial years 1990–91, 1991–92, 1992–93, 1993–94 and 1994–95; and how many local authorities were subsequently issued with a section 19a notice or 19b direction as a result. [26325]

Mr. Kynoch: In 1990–91, we received six complaints of anti-competitive behaviour under the Local Government Act 1988; these resulted in one notice under section 13 of that Act and one direction under section 14 of that Act being issued. In 1991–92, we received five complaints: these resulted in four notices and four directions being issued. In 1992–93, we received four complaints: these resulted in two notices. In 1993–94, we received 10 complaints: these have resulted in six notices. In 1994–95, we received eight complaints: these resulted in two notices.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many complaints his Department received alleging anti-competitive behaviour by local authorities in Scotland under the terms of the Local Government (Planning and Land) Act 1980 for the financial years 1990–91, 1991–92, 1992–93, 1993–94 and 1994–95; and how many local authorities were subsequently issued with a section 19a notice or 19b notice as a result. [26326]

Mr. Kynoch: In 1990–91, we received two complaints of anti-competitive behaviour under the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980: neither of these cases resulted in statutory action. In 1991–92, we received six complaints: a notice was served in relation to one of these. In 1992–93, we received four complaints: two of these resulted in a notice and one in a direction. In 1993–94, we received three complaints: these have resulted in two notices. In 1994–95, we received three complaints: no statutory action was taken.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by service the local authorities in Scotland that have been challenged by his Department under regulations under section 9 of the Local Government Act 1992 in relation to their internal arrangements for establishing client-contractor splits. [26329]

Mr. Kynoch: The Scottish Office Development Department has not taken statutory action against any authority in relation to its internal arrangements for establishing client-contractor splits.

Local Authority Direct Labour Organisations

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list, by authority and service area, the recorded deficits made by local authority direct labour or services organisations in Scotland that have failed to meet the rate of return requirements operating contracts under the terms of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 and of the Local Government Act 1988 for the financial years 1990–91, 1991–92, 1992–93, 1993–94 and 1994–95 in both cash and constant prices. [26327]

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many local authority direct labour or services organisations in Scotland, operating contracts under the terms of (a) the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 and (b) the Local Government Act 1988, have achieved the required rate of return for the financial years (i) 1992–93, (ii) 1993–94 and (iii) 1994–95. [26328]

Mr. Kynoch: For services subject to the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980: in 1992–93, 74 DLOs/DSOs, in an individual service area, met the prescribed financial objective, which represented 94.9 per cent. of the total returns received; in 1993–94, 75 met the prescribed financial objective which represented 92.6 per cent. of the total returns received; and in 1994–95, 75 met the prescribed financial objective which represented 91.5 per cent. of the returns received.

For services subject to the Local Government Act 1988: in 1992–93, 258 DLOs/DSOs, in an individual service area, met the prescribed financial objective which represented 94.9 per cent. of the total returns received; in 1993–94, 267 met the prescribed financial objective which represented 96.7 per cent. of the total returns received; and in 1994–95, 266 met the prescribed financial objective which represented 93 per cent. of the returns received.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list by authority the surplus achieved on trading accounts for the financial years 1992–93, 1993–94 and 1994–95 for (a) general highways work, (b) construction and maintenance of sewers, (c) works of new construction and (d) maintenance work, delivered by local authority direct labour or services organisations in Scotland under the terms of the Local Government, Planning and Land Act 1980 and Local Government Act 1988. [26330]

Mr. Kynoch: Detailed lists by authority of the surpluses and deficits achieved on DSO/DLO trading accounts have been placed in the Library.

Victoria Hospital, Glasgow

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list (a) the companies initially shortlisted for the support services contract put out to competitive tender by the Victoria hospital in Glasgow, (b) those companies still bidding for that contract and (c) the reasons notified to his Department for the loss of interest in the contract by companies originally shortlisted that subsequently withdrew. [26349]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Information is as follows:

(a) ISS Mediclean

Initial Healthcare Services

Gardner Merchant Sodexho

Capita

Tarmac Servicemaster

Taylorplan Services.

(b) Initial Healthcare Services

Gardner Merchant Sodexho

Capita

Tarmac Servicemaster

(c) ISS Mediclean and Taylorplan Services notified the Victoria Infirmary NHS trust that they would not be submitting bids as they wished to concentrate on their other commitments.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in what roles Mr. Norman Foster was employed by the Victoria hospital in Glasgow in each month since 1 January 1995. [26351]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This is a contractual matter between an employee and the employing trust.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what steps he has taken to monitor the implementation of Government guidance on competitive tendering at the Victoria hospital in Glasgow; and what assessment he has made of whether it has been implemented adequately; [26346]

(2) if he will place in the Library a copy of the guidance on competitive tendering issued to the NHS in Scotland; [26347]

(3) if he will make a statement on the competitive tendering exercise for support services initiated last year and being implemented this year by the Victoria hospital in Glasgow. [26348]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Comprehensive guidance on market testing in the NHS in Scotland was issued most recently to the service in October 1993. Copies of that guidance are available in the Library of the House. The responsibility for implementing market testing within NHS hospitals in Scotland rests with trust boards. It was for the Victoria Infirmary NHS trust to determine the arrangements for the competitive tendering of support services. Safeguards exist to ensure that contracts for goods or services are awarded in a proper manner by health boards and NHS trusts in Scotland. This takes the form of a statutory requirement on all health boards and NHS trusts to undergo an end-year audit by external auditors to ensure that the trust standing financial instructions, and any other financial instructions determined by the management executive of the national health service in Scotland, have been complied with.

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland for what reasons no in-house bid was allowed for the contract for support services put out to competitive tender by the Victoria hospital in Glasgow; and to what extent this was in breach of Government guidelines on competitive tendering in the NHS. [26350]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The existing in-house service was free to bid for the contract on the same basis as commercial tenderers. The trust did offer to fund independent external advice for any staff group which wished to mount a bid. This offer was not taken up and no bid was made.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Ingram: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases of BSE have been identified in (a) the East Kilbride constituency and (b) Lanarkshire in each of the last 10 years; and how many farms were involved. [26332]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The information requested is being collated and will be placed in the Library of the House as soon as it becomes available.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many appointments to the public bodies listed in "Public Bodies" for his Department were made during 1994–95 from names supplied by the public appointments unit; and if he will list them. [25960]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The Scottish Office maintains its own public appointments list and therefore makes limited use of names from the public appointments unit, although names are exchanged from time to time. The Scottish Office list is used as a source of names of suitably qualified candidates for consideration for a wide range of appointments. No central records are, however, kept of the sources from which the names of those appointed are derived.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Occupational Pensions

12. Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what measures he is proposing to improve the security of occupational pensions. [24680]

Mr. Heald: The measures in the Pensions Act 1995, most of which will become effective from April 1997, reflect the Government's commitment to safeguarding the security of occupational pension scheme assets.

Pensioner Incomes

13. Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of pensioners' gross income in the north-west comes from (a) benefits, (b) occupational pensions and (c) investments for the most recent years for which figures are available. [24681]

Mr. Heald: For the United Kingdom as a whole, 53 per cent. of pensioners' average incomes is from state benefits, 25 per cent. from occupational pensions and 16 per cent. from investment income.

It is not possible to provide a reliable breakdown by region due to the limited sample size.

Unemployment Benefits

14. Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what incentives to work will be included in his reforms of unemployment benefits. [24682]

Mr. Burt: Helping people back to work is a key aim of Government policy.

This month we introduced extended payments of housing benefit and council tax benefit for unemployed people who return to work and the national insurance contribution holiday for employers.

With jobseeker's allowance in October, we will be introducing the back-to-work bonus. This will enable at least 150,000 people a year to receive a tax-free lump sum of up to £1,000 when they leave benefit to take up work.

We will also be introducing earnings top-up, a new in-work benefit for people without dependent children, in eight pilot areas from October.

Long-term Care

15. Mr. Riddick: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he intends to take to assist people to make additional provision for their own long-term care in their old age. [24683]

Mr. Heald: To help people retain more of their savings when they enter long-term care, we have more than trebled the lower capital limit and doubled the upper capital limit for those in residential care; and for those who are covered by the preserved rights provisions, we have also introduced a 50 per cent. disregard on income from their occupational pension if they have a spouse who remains at home.

We have already taken steps to give personal pension holders more flexibility in the use of their pension savings during retirement, and are committed to building on that foundation by giving members of occupational pension schemes extra choices.

Asylum Seekers

16. Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received recently regarding the withdrawal of benefits from asylum seekers. [24684]

Mr. Roger Evans: We have received representations in various forms from hon. Members, members of the public, local authorities and voluntary organisations. Representations were also made to the Social Security Advisory Committee which were included in its report to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for what social security benefits persons who have a legal right to live in the United Kingdom, but do not hold a British passport, will be eligible under the new Asylum and Immigration Bill; and if he will make a statement. [25349]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Asylum and Immigration Bill provides that an immigrant will not be entitled to child benefit unless he satisfies prescribed conditions. Regulations will set out those conditions. An immigrant is defined as a person who requires leave under the Immigration Act 1971 to enter or remain in the United Kingdom. A non-British passport holder's eligibility for other social security benefits depends on his immigration status.

Pensions (Administrative Costs)

17. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the relative administrative costs of (a) the state pension and (b) personal pension schemes. [24686]

Mr. Heald: The estimated cost of administering state retirement pension in 1994–95 is £309 million. Information on the administrative costs of personal pensions is not collected centrally.

Source:
Social Security departmental report, March 1996—Cm 3213.

Habitual Residence Test

18. Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current annual cost of administering the habitual residence test; and what savings in benefits have been made in the current year following the introduction of the test. [24688]

Mr. Roger Evans: The current annual cost of administering the habitual residence test in relation to income support is estimated at £3 million. The best estimate of savings for the financial year 1995–96 is £25 million.

Social Security Reform

19. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations about future social security reform he has been notified will be forwarded to him in the next three months; and if he will make a statement. [24689]

Mr. Burt: None.

Child Support

20. Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action he plans to take in response to the report of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration in respect of (a) the Child Support Act 1995 and (b) the Child Support Agency. [24690]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The report mainly relates to the first 18 months of the agency's performance, and there have been very substantial improvements since then. In addition, I recently announced the recruitment of an independent complaints examiner, improvements to the agency's compensation scheme and the introduction of interest payments on maintenance collected but not transferred promptly to the parent with care.

Personal Pensions

22. Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of holders of appropriate personal pensions failed to earn sufficient to generate a national insurance rebate in the most recent year. [24692]

Mr. Heald: In 1993–94, 31 per cent. of appropriate personal pension holders had reckonable earnings below the national insurance rebate threshold.

Notes:

(i) Source: Personal Pension Statistics 1993–94 which is based on a 1 per cent. sample of national insurance records taken in February 1995.

(ii) Figures relate to the Uhnited Kingdom and are rounded to the nearest whole number.

Benefits Agency

23. Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the future of Benefits Agency offices in north Wales. [24693]

Mr. Roger Evans: One of the next key steps in the long-term reform of social security is the change programme, which aims to produce administrative efficiencies of 25 per cent. over the next three years. As part of this, consideration is being given to the future of service delivery in Wales. Any proposals will be subject to consultation before final decisions are taken.

Lone Parents

24. Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what benefit changes he is undertaking to help lone parents to work. [24694]

Mr. Burt: The Government have a well-developed strategy for helping families, including lone parents, into work. Further measures are being implemented in the coming months.

From this month, the child care disregard in the in-work benefits has been increased from £40 to £60 a week. The back-to-work bonus and the child maintenance bonus will be introduced in October 1996 and April 1997 respectively. They will encourage part-time work and provide opportunities to build up a tax-free lump sum on leaving benefit for work. Also in April 1997 a major new pilot will commence providing training and employment opportunities to up to 25,000 lone parents.

In addition, lone parents can qualify for other work incentive measures introduced this month, including extra help with housing costs on return to work, faster delivery of family credit and relief from national insurance contributions for their employer.

State Pensions

25. Mr. Roy Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the level of state pensions in other European Union countries relative to those in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [24695]

Mr. Heald: Most other EU countries have wholly earnings-related pension schemes, so there is a wide variation in the rate of pension paid to individuals. This can mean that low earners receive low pensions. Direct comparisons of the level of state pensions do not take account of health care, occupational pensions and safety net benefits, which are all significant factors in the provision for pensioners in the United Kingdom. The relative position of state pension provision is further distorted by differences in the cost of living.

Benefits (Young People)

26. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many representations his Department has recently received on the question of benefit availability to 16 and 17-year-olds; and if he will make a statement. [24696]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Department has received a number of such representations.

We believe that unemployed 16 and 17-year-olds should take the more positive options of youth training or education in place of dependence on benefit.

Benefit Reforms

27. Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received from political parties over the past three months concerning reforms of the benefit system. [24697]

Mr. Burt: None.

Centenarians

28. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the estimated cost to his Department of sending telegrams to centenarians over the past year; and if he will make a statement. [24698]

Mr. Heald: This Department arranges for telemessages to be sent to residents of Great Britain on their 100th birthday, at 105 and yearly thereafter. In 1995, a total of 3,025 such messages were issued at an estimated cost of £74,900, most of which arose from visits by Benefits Agency staff prior to the issue of the messages.

Fraud

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what priority he attaches to tackling fraud in his social security reforms. [24691]

Mr. Heald: I refer the hon. Lady to the answer my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Gravesham (Mr. Arnold) earlier today.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proposals he has in respect of the right of appeal in incapacity benefit cases. [26533]

Mr. Burt: We have no current plans to make any changes to the right of appeal in incapacity benefit cases. However, as part of the long-term reform of social security we are now reviewing its administration, including decision making and appeals arrangements.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many persons have ceased to receive incapacity benefit because of a failure to attend a medical examination following completion of questionnaire form IB50. [25803]

Mr. Burt: At 31 March 1996, 2,416 persons had been disallowed incapacity benefit following failure to attend for medical examination.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) former recipients of invalidity benefit now claiming incapacity benefit and (b) new incapacity benefit claimants have passed the all-work test and how many in each case have been deemed fit for work. [25805]

Mr. Burt: The available information is in the table.

	Found capable of work following the all-work test	Found incapable of work following the all-work test
Former Invalidity Benefit recipients with transitional protection	33,580	113,500
Incapacity Benefit claimants since April 1995	6,780	24,340

All figures as at 30 November 1995 taken from a 5 per cent. sample of cases from the incapacity benefit computer system. Excludes a small number of cases not on the system.

Occupational Asthma

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the cost to his Department of providing industrial injury scheme benefits to people suffering from occupational asthma in each year from 1989–90 to 1994–95. [25780]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

The figures are estimates of the cost of industrial injuries disablement benefit reduced earnings allowance and retirement allowance paid to people suffering from occupational asthma and do not include the costs of administration or the benefit expenditure on constant attendance allowance, exceptionally severe disablement allowance or unemployment supplement.

The data on which these estimates are based are not yet available for 1994–95.

Estimated cost of providing Industrial Injuries benefits to people suffering from occupational asthma

	Cash prices £ million
1989–90	1.0
1990–91	2.0
1991–92	2.5

Estimated costs are given at cash prices, rounded to the nearest £0.5 million and may be subject to a margin of error.

Income Support

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many persons have ceased to receive income support as a result of failing the all-work test. [25792]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information requested is not available.

Sir Teddy Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many persons in the borough of Southend receive income support. [24687]

Mr. Roger Evans: The numbers receiving income support in the area covered by the Benefits Agency Essex South East district office, which includes the borough of Southend, was 37,403 in May 1995.

Redundant Steel Workers

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much was paid in means-tested benefits to redundant steel workers in each year between 1979 and 1995. [25820]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information requested is not available.

Mini-cab Drivers

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many mini-cab drivers had details checked against benefit records as a result of Operation Spotlight in (a) Croydon, (b) Enfield and (c) Haringey; how many withdrew their benefit claims; and how much money has been saved. [26261]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information requested is not available as the spotlight on benefit cheats campaign in Croydon, Enfield and Haringey is still under way and individual investigations will take some time to follow up.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of funding to be made available to his Department through the private finance initiative in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26171]

Mr. Burt: The estimated capital spending relating to Department of Social Security projects under the private finance initiative is in the list:

1995–96: £60 million

1996–97: £130 million

1997–98: £70 million.

Disability Living Allowance

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the annual saving from the withdrawal of the mobility component of disability living allowance after a claimant has been hospitalised for (a) four weeks and (b) 12 weeks in the case of children. [25586]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information requested is in the table.

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
(a) Adults (four weeks)	20	35	35
(b) Children (12 weeks)	5	10	10
Total	25	40	45

1. Estimates assume an end of July start date. 2. Estimates rounded to nearest £5 million. Totals may not sum due to rounding.

In-work Benefits

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total annual expenditure on (a) family credit, (b) disability working allowance and (c) other in-work benefits by standard region. [26142]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information for 1994–95 is set out in the tables.

[1] Information on Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit is provided by standard administrative region. Information on Family Credit and Disability Working Allowance is only available by Social Security administrative region.

[2] Total expenditure figures from 1996 Departmental Report. Figures are rounded to the nearest million.

[3] Figures are estimates derived from the annual 1 per cent. Housing Benefit sample inquiry and are rounded to the nearest million. The figures get less reliable the smaller they are. The figures exclude expenditure on recipients for Housing Benefit and Council Tax Benefit who work but who also get Income Support.

War Pensions

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the cost of the current £10 mandatory disregard of war disablement pensions and war widows pensions for (a) housing benefit and (b) council tax benefit; [26534]

(2) what is the cost to local authorities of the use of the discretionary disregard of war disablement pensions and war widows' pensions for (a) housing benefit and (b) council tax benefit. [26535]

Mr. Roger Evans: The benefit cost of the mandatory disregard of the first £10 of a war disablement pension or a war widow's pension is broadly estimated to be around (a) £5 million in housing benefit[1] and (b) £5 million in council tax benefit[1].

In addition, the mandatory disregard of the supplementary pension paid to some 80 per cent. of war widows—currently worth £51.71 a week— and of any mobility supplement (£37.75); constant attendance allowance (£19.85–£79.40); exceptionally severe disablement allowance (£39.70); or severe disablement occupational allowance (£19.85) paid to a war disablement pensioner cost an estimated further £10 million in additional housing benefit and council tax benefit payments[1].

In 1994–95, the latest year for which information is available, local authorities reported expenditure of around (a) £30 million on their local schemes for housing benefit and (b) £10.5 million on their local schemes for council tax benefit.

Note:

[1] Estimates based on the 1991, 1992 and 1993 Family Expenditure Surveys uprated to 1996–97 levels. Expenditure is rounded to the nearest £5 million.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are his plans for the provision of advice and assistance under part III of the Disability Discrimination Act. [26675]

Mr. Burt: The Government are seeking to establish a new service which will provide independent advice and support on the Act's rights of access to services and property. The service is planned to be operational in time for the implementation of the first of these rights around the end of 1996. The principal aim of the service will be to promote the settlement of disputes without the need for court action. Widely available and high-quality advice and support services will also help prevent discrimination and disputes.

Disabled people and businesses already make use of existing advice points, such as citizens' advice bureaux and business links. The new service will be targeted at these organisations, giving them access to expert knowledge on this new legislation. By enhancing the knowledge of existing advice points, the service will aim to ensure that disabled people and businesses will have access to locally available, high-quality advice and support. The Government are also investigating the possibilities for providing conciliation services, either as part of the advice and support service, or as a separate entity.

Those interested in providing the advice and support service are asked to respond to advertisements which will appear tomorrow. Respondents will then be sent an outline specification and asked to provide information regarding their background, relevant experience, and financial stability by 28 May 1996. This information will be used to identify preferred candidates who will be formally invited to enter the negotiation phase of the project. The final specification will be produced during the negotiation phase. Copies of the outline specification have been placed in the Library.

Details of the negotiations will remain confidential. An announcement of the result will be made prior to the service being commenced.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the nationality of each member of the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee. [24906]

Mrs. Browning: We do not hold details of committee members' nationality. The members of the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee are appointed for their technical expertise in the subjects considered by the committee, irrespective of their nationality.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the number of cases of bovine TB since 1979. [25378]

Mrs. Browning: In Great Britain, between 1979 and 1995—the latest year for which figures are available—a total of 17,979 cattle were compulsorily slaughtered because they reacted positively to the tuberculin test. This figure includes all cattle which reacted positively to the test whether or not the presence of disease was subsequently confirmed at post mortem or by the culture of samples in the laboratory. In addition, between 1979 and 1994—the latest year for which figures are available—a total of 247 cases of bovine TB were confirmed from slaughterhouses.

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the incidence of bovine TB since 1979 in areas assessed by his Department to have (a) heavy and (b) light badger populations. [25376]

Mrs. Browning: It is not possible to answer this question in the form requested. Detailed badger population estimates do not exist. However, a national badger survey undertaken between 1985 and 1988, which assessed badger activity and presence of setts within 2,455 randomly selected 1 km squares of land in Great Britain, indicated that badger density was generally higher in south-west England and Wales. The incidence of bovine TB in cattle is considerably higher in Cornwall, Devon, Gloucestershire and Avon, Wiltshire, Dyfed, Gwent and South, Mid and West Glamorgan than elsewhere in Great Britain; in 1994 the number of new confirmed TB cattle breakdowns in these areas as a percentage of total herds was 1.231 per cent. Elsewhere in Great Britain the number of new confirmed TB cattle breakdowns as a percentage of total herds was 0.049 per cent.

Mr. Bottomley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how often herds are tested for bovine TB. [25375]

Mrs. Browning: Cattle herds everywhere in Great Britain, with the exception of Devon, Cornwall, Gloucestershire and Avon, are routinely tested for tuberculosis every four years. Herds in Devon are routinely tested every three years, and herds in Cornwall, Gloucestershire and Avon are routinely tested every two years. Division veterinary managers of the state veterinary service may exercise discretion in setting testing intervals in any areas of Great Britain where cattle herds have suffered a recent TB breakdown or where herds are considered to be at risk; this may result in some herds being tested more frequently than the prescribed testing interval for the region.

Badgers

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will estimate the numbers of badgers killed since 1979. [25377]

Mrs. Browning: It is not possible to answer this question in the form requested. However, the total number of badgers captured and destroyed in removal operations carried out by the Department following TB breakdowns in cattle between 1985 and 1995 was 11,260.

Live Animal Transport

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total amount invoiced to his Department in respect of staff present at Dover lairages to undertake the certification of livestock for export on (a) 13 February, (b) 14 February, (c) 15 February and (d) 16 February. [25355]

Mrs. Browning: The total amount invoiced by the Department in respect of staff present at Dover lairages to undertake the certification of livestock for export between 13 and 16 February was as follows:

Date	Total invoiced £
13 February	1,818.41
14 February	1,435.77

Date	Total invoiced £
15 February	2,184.96
16 February	350.76

These figures are exclusive of VAT, which was added at the standard rate.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many animals were rejected as unfit to travel prior to export from the United Kingdom in (a) 1992, (b) 1993, (c) 1994 and (d) 1995. [25431]

Mrs. Browning: The numbers of bovine, ovine and porcine animals rejected as unfit to travel prior to export from the United Kingdom were as follows:

1992: 28,070

1993: no figures available

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food who conducted the export certification for consignments of animals at Abbotsland lairage, Capel-le-Ferne in the 48-hour period prior to 9 am on 20 January. [25432]

Mrs. Browning: Export certification for consignments of animals at Abbotsland lairage, Capel-le-Ferne in the 48-hour period prior to 9 am on 20 January was carried out by a local veterinary inspector. The name of the local veterinary inspector is being withheld under paragraph 4g of part II of the code of practice on access to Government information.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which consignments were certified by Mr. Jonathan Stirling for export where animals were subsequently rejected by Ministry officials, excluding any animals rejected as unfit to travel under the Welfare of Animals During Transport Order 1994, at (a) the port of Dover; (b) Brightlingsea wharf and (c) the port of Shoreham (i) during 1995 and (ii) from 1 January 1996 to 8 March 1996. [25433]

Mrs. Browning: Details of consignments certified by Mr. Jonathan Stirling and subsequently rejected by Ministry officials on veterinary health certification grounds are as follows:

On 27 April 1995, one animal was rejected from a consignment of 203 calves.

On 2 May 1995, two animals were rejected from two consignments totalling 322 calves.

On 14 June 1995, 11 animals were rejected from one consignment of 240 calves.

On 20 June 1995, 35 animals were rejected from 4 consignments totalling 732 calves.

(ii) from 1 January 1996 to 8 March 1996 no animals were rejected.

(b) At Brightlingsea wharf no animals were certified by Mr. Stirling during 1995 or from 1 January 1996 to 8 March 1996.

(c) At the port of Shoreham no animals were certified by Mr. Stirling during 1995 or from 1 January 1996 to 8 March 1996.

Licensed Veterinary Inspectors

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list (a) the dates on which staff carrying out LVI duties on behalf of the Maison Dieu veterinary practice or welfare services of 3 Whitehall court, London, were involved in discussions with his Department about their performance as LVIs and (b) the names of those involved (i) in 1995 and (ii) between 1 January 1996 and 8 March 1996. [25434]

Mrs. Browning: Records show that in 1995 meetings were held with staff carrying out LVI duties on behalf of the Maison Dieu Veterinary Practice on 14 March 1995, 10 May 1995, 20 June 1995, 13 September 1995, 17 October 1995, 20 December 1995. Telephone discussions were held on 18 April 1995, 4 May 1995, 18 May 1995, 25 May 1995, 14 June 1995, 15 June 1995, 23 June 1995, 29 June 1995, 30 June 1995, 3 July 1995, 25 July 1995, 26 July 1995, 31 July 1995, 1 August 1995, 9 August 1995, 1 November 1995, 10 November 1995, 15 November 1995 and 17 November 1995.

From 1 January 1996 and 8 March 1996 meetings were held with the Maison Dieu veterinary practice on 31 January 1996, 8 February 1996, 22 February 1996 and 6 March 1996. Correspondence was sent on 16 February 1996.

The names of the local veterinary inspectors involved are being withheld under paragraph 4g of part II of the code of practice on access to Government information.

Integrated Administration and Control System

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what disciplinary action he is taking against Ministry employees responsible for sending confidential documents relating to other people to integrated administration and control system applicants. [25525]

Mr. Boswell: Integrated administration and control system documentation, including field data printouts which contain information about the previous year's application, is sent to applicants by an external contractor. This operation is contracted out, in line with central Government policy, in the interests of efficiency. Any disciplinary action as a result of errors in the 1996 mailing of IACS documentation by the contractor's employees is an internal matter for the contractor.

Sir Dudley Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to prevent officials sending other people's forms to integrated administration and control system applicants with particular reference to Warwickshire; and what assessment he has made as to how the errors occurred. [25526]

Mr. Boswell: About 0.2 per cent. of integrated administration and control system applicants have reported receiving wrongly addressed IACS field data printouts or had field data printouts missing from their IACS package; 18 per cent. of these problems were reported by farmers in Warwickshire representing about 0.04 per cent. of the total mailing. This operation is contracted out in line with central Government policy because its size—some 246,000 A3 original field data printouts and the same number of A4 copies—means that it cannot be handled by the internal resources available within the Ministry. The contractor is one of Europe's largest computing/mailing houses, and has carried out this work for the past three years.

As a result of the problems reported by farmers, the external contractor responsible for producing the field data printouts and mailing them with the IACS documentation for 1996 carried out a detailed investigation. It was concluded that the mistakes in the mailing arose because of very limited operator error. The contractor for this mailing already operates to International Standards Organisation standards. Nevertheless, we are considering additional measures further to safeguard personalised packages in respect of the next IACS round.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many appointments to the public bodies listed in "Public Bodies" for his Department were made during 1994–95 from names supplied by the public appointments unit; and if he will list them. [25948]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 22 April 1996]: Our officials regularly consult the public appointments unit for names of suitable, qualified candidates for public appointments. Of the new appointments made by my right hon. Friend in 1994–95, 12 were made from names supplied by the public appointments unit, as follows:

Agricultural Wages Board: Professor T. Smith

Apple and Pear Research Council: Balram Gidoomal

Committee of Investigation for Great Britain: Mrs. Suzan Matthews QC

Covent Garden Market Authority: Gulam Noon

Home Crown Cereals Authority: Dr. Caroline Vaughan

Regional Flood Defence Committees

(Northumbria): John Hackney

(North West): Professor Margaret MacKeith

(Severn Trent): Mrs. Joan Davies

(Thames): Mrs. Pamela Castle

Regional Panels (Anglia): Mrs. Anne Chamberlain

Sea Fish Industry Authority: Barry Skipper

Sugar Beet Research and Education Committee: Mrs. Anne Chamberlain

Farmers (Compensation Scheme Payments)

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he plans to make payments to farmers under the compensation scheme effective in the week beginning 29 April. [26200]

Mrs. Browning: Details of the scheme are still being worked up with industry representatives. It is envisaged that claims will be made by collection centres at weekly intervals. The Intervention Board executive agency, which will administer the scheme, normally aim to make payments within 28 days of receipt of a valid claim. It is likely that the earliest payments will be made at the beginning of June.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will consider making interim payments to farmers eligible for compensation under the scheme effective from 29 April. [26201]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 April 1996]: There are no provisions for interim payments within the scheme rules.

Beef

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what scientific basis he has decided that beef from animals slaughtered over the age of 30 months should not be offered for human consumption; and what other considerations underlay his decision to select 30 months as a critical age for this purpose. [26207]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 22 April 1996]: In the absence of detectable infectivity in tissues of clinically affected cattle other than brain, spinal cord and retina, the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee considered that the greatest risk to consumers of clinically normal animals would be associated with exposure to central nervous tissue. This is precisely why these tissues are designated as specified offals. Nevertheless, after giving further consideration to the slaughtering/butchering process, it was felt that risk of exposure could be reduced further by requiring changes to certain procedures, such as removal of bones so that in doing so tissues contaminated with spinal cord were also removed, as would visible nerves and lymph nodes. It was, however, unnecessary to apply this to all cattle. This decision was partly based on the pathogenesis of scrapie in sheep and mice, where infectivity is only detectable in the central nervous system approximately half-way through the incubation period, subsequently rising to a peak at the time of clinical disease. That evidence is increasingly supported by the on-going pathogenesis experiment of cattle, where infectivity has so far not been detected in CNS up to 18 months post-infection. The mean incubation period of BSE in naturally infected animals is five years and the appropriate mid-point would therefore be 30 months. Clearly in cattle older than 30 months there will be increasing levels of infectivity in the CNS of infected animals, and more of them are likely to be approaching the onset of clinical disease prior to slaughter.

The use of 30 months as a watershed was originally introduced in relation to exports of bone-in beef in 1995 under EC rules and was taken up by the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee in its advice to Ministers on 20 to 24 March respectively that the meat from animals over 30 months of age should be deboned in licensed premises and the obvious nervous and lymphatic tissue removed and treated as specified bovine offal. In view of the concern expressed by the committee about the meat from animals above this age and the difficulties of introducing an immediate requirement for all of this meat to be deboned, it was decided during the consultation period that a ban should be introduced on the use of this meat for human consumption until such time as the consultation period was ended and suitable arrangements for deboning were introduced. Subsequently, it was decided a European Union level that, in view of the collapse of demand for beef from older cattle, the prohibition on the use of meat from older animals in the human and animal feed chains should be maintained.

Ministerial Statements

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what requirement has been placed by the EU on United Kingdom Ministers to consult EU institutions before statements are made in the House, with particular reference to the case of bovine sponfigorm encephalopathy; and if he will make a statement. [26020]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 22 April 1996]: I am aware of no such requirement set out in the treaty or in any legal instruments adopted by the Council of Ministers.

Forestry

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what charges are imposed by the Forestry Commission on (a) recreational riders and (b) riders following hunts in the New Forest. [26344]

Mr. Boswell: None.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Attorney-General (1) how much was paid late to the private sector for goods and services by his Department in 1995–96; [26160]

(2) what percentage of bills were paid late by his Department in 1995–96. [26111]

The Attorney-General: The Serious Fraud Office paid 92 per cent. of valid invoices on time—within 30 days, or specific contract provision if different—during 1995–96. The value of late payments made by the SFO to the private sector was £977,000. This represents about 6 per cent. of total expenditure and includes a number of substantial and complex invoices from large companies.

On the basis of samples of bills settled during 1995–96, the percentage of valid invoices paid on time was 94.3 per cent. for the Crown Prosecution Service and 75 per cent. for the Treasury Solicitor's Department.[1] Information is not held about the value of late payments made by these departments.

[1] Includes figures for Government property lawyers, the legal secretariat to the Law Officers and the lawyers management unit.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

"Hansard" Index

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chairman of the Administration Committee on which date the latest bound publication of a Hansard index was published and for which Session; what are the estimated dates of publication of all sessional indices not so far published; and what are the reasons for delays in publication after January of the preceding normal Session. [26010]

Mr. Michael J. Martin: The index for the long Session 1992–93 was published in November 1995. The proofs for Session 1993–94 will be returned to HMSO parliamentary press in early June 1996 and should be published two to three months thereafter. It is expected that the 1994–95 index will be sent to HMSO by the end of 1996 and published early in 1997. Editing the 1995–96 index will begin in January 1997, with a likely publication date later in 1997.

The Library provides the copy for the fortnightly, volume and sessional indexes to Hansard, which are printed and published by HMSO. The entries for the sessional index are generated after the last volume index for the Session has been processed; the copy for the volume is usually received by the indexers two to three months after the proceedings reported. The objective is that the index for a Session of normal length should be published late in the following Session. I understand that this objective should be met for the 1995–96 Session.

The current backlog is a result of problems arising from major changes to the Library's computer system in the summer of 1995.

ENVIRONMENT

Abbatoir Waste

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if fifth-quarter material derived from cattle can be spread on agricultural land outside the waste management licensing regime; and if he will make a statement; [25719]

(2) for what reason fifth-quarter material derived from cattle is not classified as waste; and if duty of care waste transfer notes are required once this material changes hands. [25718]

Mr. Clappison: The Department's views on the application to animal by-products of (a) the definition of waste, (b) waste management licensing and (c) the duty of care, are set out in DOE circular 11/94, paragraphs 1.17(c), 2.33(d)(ii),4.91–4.94 and 5.167.

Wheelie Bins

Sir David Steel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many rural district councils currently collect domestic refuse from the doorstep; and how many have transferred to the wheelie bin system [26092]

Mr. Clappison: Mr. Department does not hold the information requested, but I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the publication by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance and Accountancy entitled "Waste Collection Statistics 1993–94 Actuals", which contains that organisation's most recently published statistics covering the information that the right hon. Gentleman requests.

Seal Skins

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the (a) locations and (b) seal species from which the skins exported from the United Kingdom in 1994 and during the first nine months of 1885 came. [26446]

Mr. Clappison: Between 1 January 1994 and 30 September 1995 permits were issued for the re-export of skins of the Afro-Australian fur seal, Arctocephalus pusillus, originally imported from Namibia; and the South American fur seal, Arctocephalus australis, originally imported from Uruguay.

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of bills were paid late by his Department in 1995–96. [26115]

Sir Paul Beresford: This information is being collated by the Department of Trade and Industry and will be published by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade before the summer recess.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much was paid late to the private sector by his Department for goods and services in 1995–96. [26156]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department does not hold a central record of the amount owed to businesses not paid within the agreed period. This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Heating Costs

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the percentage of extra fuel which is required to heat identical houses in (a) Nottingham and (b) Derby, taking Bristol as the base. [26602]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The percentage of extra fuel required to heat a typical semi-detached house with gas central heating is estimated to be as follows for each of the specified locations:

(a) Nottingham +17 per cent. and

(b) Derby +17 per cent.

These figures have been calculated using the Building Research Establishment domestic energy model and taking Bristol as the base case.

Tyne and Wear Development Corporation

Mr. Etherington: To ask the Secretary of State for the Enviornment if he will list those (a) new and (b) established companies in the Tyne and Wear development corporation area which have appointed staff members of the corporation as (i) directors and (ii) advisers to their boards, indicating (1) the period of appointment of individuals, (2) their remuneration, (3) if capital or revenue financial assistance, grants or loans from the corporation have been awarded to the companies and for what purpose and (4) other corporation assistance to the companies. [26557]

Sir Paul Beresford: Six companies in the urban development area of the Tyne and Wear development corporation have members of the corporation's staff appointed as directors in pursuance of the corporation's statutory object of securing the regeneration of the urban development area.

Of these, five companies are regarded as new, having been formed since the corporation was created in 1987. These five companies are The Customs House Trust Limited, Jarrow AD Limited, North Shields Fish Quay Development Company Limited, Sunderland Enterprise Park Management Company Limited and Tyneside Enterprise Factory.

The sixth company, South Tyneside Groundwork Trust Limited, is regarded as an established company, being part of a national group undertaking similar work in different areas of England.

No companies in the urban development area have appointed any members of the corporation's staff specifically as advisors.

Each appointment of a member of the corporation's staff will terminate not later than 31 March 1998.

No remuneration is paid to any of the corporation's staff for the work that they undertake as directors of the companies.

In addition, Ms S. Thomas, a former member of the corporation's staff, is also the current chairman of The Customs House Trust Limited. As in the case of each of the other directors of that company, she does not receive remuneration for that position.

The further information requested in relation to each company is as follows:

Customs House Trust Limited

One member of staff appointed as a director from mid-1991 to mid 1993 and from mid 1994 as chair.

One member of staff appointed as director from mid-1994 to 31 March 1998.

Capital costs: design fees (£291.000), building (£2,392 million), legal fees £86,000) and car park and external works (£530,000).

Revenue funding: towards production costs and local arts development to 31 March 1996 is £198,000 including VAT.

Other assistance: The corporation's member of staff provides general advice as part of the role of director.

Jarrow 700 AD Limited

One member of staff appointed as a director form January 1993 to 31 March 1998.

Revenue funding: £40,000 towards education post plus £7,500 for survey of local needs.

Other assistance: The corporation's member of staff provides general advice as part of the role as director.

North Shields Fish Quay Development Company Limited

One member of staff appointed as director from 1992 to 31 March 1998.

Capital costs: £20,000 for setting up costs and £300,000 contribution to the partnership for refurbishment of operational premises at North Shields fish quay.

Other assistance: The corporation's member of staff provides general advice as part of their role as director.

South Tyneside Groundwork Trust Limited

One member of staff as a director from April 1991 to 31 March 1998.

Capital costs: £275,000 general sponsorship and specific project costs.

Other assistance: The corporation's member of staff provides general advice as part of their role of director.

Sunderland Enterprise Park Limited

One member of staff appointed as a director from August 1995 to 31 March 1988.

Capital costs: Assistance towards setting up costs including installation of a sixteen camera closed circuit television network security system £525,000 including VAT up to 1996–97. There is provision for up to a maximum of £400,000 to be received by the corporation before 31 March 1998.

Other assistance: The corporation's member of staff provides general advice as part of the role of director.

Tyneside Enterprise Factory

One member of staff appointed as a director from June 1995 to 31 March 1998.

One member of staff appointed as a director from December 1994 to 31 March 1998.

Capital costs: £120,000 establishment costs.

Other assistance: The corporation's member of staff provides general advice as part of their role as director.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what percentage of bills were paid late by his Department in 1995–96. [26118]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: This information is being collated by the Department of Trade and Industry and will be published by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade before the summer recess.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much was paid late by his Department to the private sector for goods and services in 1995–96. [26152]

Mr. Evans: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

TRANSPORT

Rail Franchise Applicants

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what instructions he has issued to the franchising director on the eligibility to bid for rail franchises of companies that are under investigation by the Serious Fraud Office; and if he will make a statement. [25592]

Mr. Watts: The Railways Act 1993 requires that the franchising director should not invite any person to tender for franchises unless he is satisfied that they are financially robust, managerially competent and otherwise suitable to be a franchisee. In order to prequalify for franchise competitions, potential bidders are required to notify the franchising director of any factors which might affect his assessment of their suitability to be a franchisee. It is therefore unnecessary for my right hon. Friend to issue any instructions to the franchising director on this subject.

Temporary Speed Restrictions (Rail Track)

Ms Short: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the sections of rail track on the (a) west coast, (b) east coast, (c) Midland and (d) Great Western main lines currently subject to temporary speed restrictions due to the poor conditions of the track; and in each case, when it is estimated that these restrictions will be lifted. [25593]

Mr. Watts: The information required in not held centrally. I will write to the hon. Member when the information is available.

Pedestrians and Cyclists

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what estimate he has made of the percentage of passenger kilometres that were (a) walked and (b) cycled in each year in Great Britain since 1979; [25402]

(2) what estimate he has made of the number of miles (a) walked and (b) cycled in each year in Great Britain since 1979. [25401]

Mr. Norris: Figures for cycling based on table 9.1 of the 1995 "Transport Statistics Great Britain" are as follows:

	Distance cycled (billion passenger miles)	Percentage of all passenger miles exc. walking (per cent.)
1979	2.9	1.0
1980	3.2	1.0
1981	3.4	1.1
1982	4.0	1.3
1983	4.0	1.3
1984	4.0	1.2
1985	3.8	1.1
1986	3.4	1.0
1988	3.2	0.8
1989	3.2	0.8
1990	3.3	0.8
1991	3.2	0.8
1992	2.9	0.7
1993	2.8	0.7
1994	2.7	0.6

Figures for walking are less reliable and available only for particular years. They are as follows:

	Distance walked (billion passenger miles)	Percentage of all passenger miles including walking (per cent.)
1975–76	14	5
1985–86	13	4
1989–91	13	3
1992–94	11	3

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much money he estimates (a) has been paid to date and (b) will be paid in the current financial year by the Government or Railtrack for advice and other assistance in connection with the sale of Railtrack to (1) SBC Warburg, (2) Linklaters and Paines, (3) Ernst and Young, (4) Solid Solutions Associates, (5) Freshfields, (6) Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher and Flom, (7) N. M. Rothschild & Sons Ltd., (8) Merrill Lynch International, (9) Simmons and Simmons, (10) Sullivan and Cromwell, (11) Deloitte and Touche, (12) Dewe Rogerson Ltd, and (13) the Royal Bank of Scotland plc (i) separately and (ii) in total. [25869]

Mr. Watts: Information about the payments to individual advisers is commercially confidential. However, as usual for major Government share sales, I expect to make an announcement about the total costs of the Railtrack flotation shortly after this has been completed.

Mr. Gorden Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what amendments were made to the draft prospectus for the privatisation of Railtrack following receipt of the views of the chairman of the British Railways Board. [26418]

Mr. Watts: At the time the chairman of the British Railways Board's views were received the Pathfinder prospectus was still being drafted. A number of changes have been made to the draft since the version on which the chairman was expressing his views to take account of comments received from the British Railways Board and other interested parties.

Nuclear Energy

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many shipments abroad by (a) sea or (b) air of mixed oxide fuel have taken place from the British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. Sellafield MOX plant since it opened; what safety licences are required for such transports; and if these transports are covered by (a) European Union legislation and (b) International Atomic Energy Agency or International Maritime Organisation guidelines. [26241]

Mr. Norris: There have been five such shipments by air, and none by sea.

All package designs for MOX fuel have to be approved to IAEA standards by the competent authority of the country of origin. Such approvals must be validated by the competent authorities of the countries through which the shipments pass.

The shipments complied with all relevant international transport regulations.

A406

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when work is due to be completed on the A406 east of Falloden way. [26315]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to my hon. Friend.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. John Marshall, dated 24 April 1996:

As you know the Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the completion of the A406 London North Circular East of Falloden Way scheme.

Our current best estimate is that these works will be completed at the end of this year.

I shall let you know if that changes.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps the DVLA takes to ensure delivery of drivers' licences to the correct addresses; and what use is made of recorded delivery. [26592]

Mr. Norris: Delivery of driving licences is the responsibility of the Royal Mail. Recorded delivery is not used because it would delay the delivery of licences and increase costs.

Driving Licences (Fraudulent Use)

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many driving licences have been used fraudulently in each of the last five years. [26590]

Mr. Norris: Some 2,000 fraudulent driving licence applications are identified each year, representing 0.1 per cent. of applications.

London Transport

Mr. Tracey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what financial objectives he has set for London Transport. [26918]

Mr. Norris: I have written to Peter Ford, chairman of LT, to set new medium-term financial objectives for LT to achieve in 1998–99. These replace the objectives which came to an end on 31 March 1996. The package of new objectives sets challenging but achievable targets for the continued improvement in LT's financial performance and efficiency. The objectives are as follows:

All figures are at 1995–96 prices	Objective
Cost per train kilometre[1]	Not more than £9.45
LUL gross margin[2]	At least £285 million
Bus subsidy per kilometre[3]	Not more than 6.0 pence
LT Buses gross loss[4]	Not more than £20 million
Group services etc.[5] gross loss	Not more than £21.5 million
Dial-a-Ride costs per trip	Not more than £9.40
Property rental income growth	To be at least as good as the average shown by the IPD index (6) on three-year following basis

[1] Costs per operated train kilometre to exclude depreciation, renewals, restructuring and PFI costs.
[2] LUL gross margin before depreciation, renewals, restructuring and PFI costs.
[3] Net subsidy per operated bus kilometre before depreciation, renewals, restructuring and PFI costs.
[4] LT Buses gross loss before depreciation, renewal, restructuring, and PFI costs.
[5] LT Group Services, plus Victoria coach station, unit for disabled passengers, PASS and LT museum.
[6] IPD is the Investment Property Databank index.

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of bills were paid late by his Department in 1995–96. [26124]

Mr. Norris: This information is being collated by the Department of Trade and Industry and will be published by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade before the summer recess.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much was paid late by his Department to the private sector for goods and services in 1995–96. [26145]

Mr. Norris: The information is not available.

Distress Calls

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) on what dates and at what stations in the last 12 months coastguard operational staff have initially missed distress calls over the emergency 2182 radio frequency; and if he will make a statement; [26643]

(2) pursuant to the answer of 19 February to the hon. Member for Stoke on Trent, North (Ms Walley), Official Report, column 49, for what reasons there are no designated staff from his Department listening for distress calls over the emergency 2182 radio frequency; and if he will make a statement. [26705]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 24 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the 2182KHz Distress Watch.

PQ 1846/95/96

There is no evidence of any Distress and Urgency messages being missed.

PQ1855/95/96

The watchkeeping complement at each Rescue Centre fulfils the requirement to monitor Channel 16, 2182KHz and the reception of 999 calls. There is no requirement to have staff designated to 2182KHz.

Road Building Schemes

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the expected date of completion for each of the schemes for which the Highways Agency has responsibility, now under construction, and for each of those upon which construction is expected to start by 31 March 1997. [25812]

Mr. Watts: I have set out in the table details of all schemes currently under construction, including their expected completion dates, and the anticipated completion dates for those schemes upon which construction is expected to start by 31 March 1997. I have also set out in the final table those schemes which are including within tranches 1 and 1A of design, build, finance and operate projects or DBFOs. It is not possible to indicate completion dates for the schemes contained within those projects.

Vehicles (Illegal Operators)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will publish the final report on the roadside checks of illegal operators undertaken by the Vehicle Inspectorate in October 1995. [26767]

Mr. Norris: The report has been published today. It shows that 1.8 per cent. of miles travelled on roads in Great Britain by goods vehicles are travelled by vehicles that are being operated without an operator's licence. The survey also indicates that vehicles that are being operated illegally are more likely than other vehicles to have roadworthiness defects. I have placed copies of the report in the Library.

TREASURY

Customs and Excise (Redundancies)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what factors underlay the statement by management of Customs and Excise in the recent expenditure review that further redundancies in the number of front line anti-smuggling officers including those specialising in drug offences, would be implemented in accordance with the level of drug seizures. [26523]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The fundamental expenditure review of anti-smuggling recommended that reductions in staffing should take place in two phases and that the effects of the first tranche of reductions should be comprehensively reviewed before any further savings are contemplated. Some 292 posts were withdrawn in the first phase during 1995–96 and the review is taking place throughout this year.

In addition to monitoring drug seizures, the review will evaluate Customs' success in dismantling smuggling organisations, seizing illicit assets and detecting other prohibitions. The drugs risk faced by the United Kingdom, the effectiveness of intelligence in informing targeting, and the effects of changes in tactical deployment are also being closely monitored.

Tax Reliefs

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost of tax relief for (a) enterprise investment schemes, (b) venture capital trusts and (c) enterprise zone trusts in the financial years (i) 1994–95 and (ii) 1995–96. [23975]

Mr. Jack: The available information is in the table.

£ million

	Cost of tax reliefs[1] 1994–95	1995–96[2]
Enterprise Investment Schemes	10	15
Venture Capital Trusts	—	50

[1] Estimated cost of income tax relief and capital gains tax costs of re-investment relief and exempting gains from tax.
[2] Provisional.

The cost of tax relief for enterprise zone trusts is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

I am delighted that the venture capital industry and investors have responded to the challenge and opportunity offered to them by Parliament to invest in small and developing companies through venture capital trusts. The first 12 VCTs have between them raised over £150 million in the first few months of the scheme. This is excellent news for the financing and development of the companies, which are a crucial part of our growing economy. We should also congratulate the British venture capital industry on the energy they have put into raising this new form of capital for their growing business.

Unemployment

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the percentage change in unemployment since 1992 for each county and former metropolitan county area in England in rank order from the greatest increase to the greatest decrease. [26482]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested is available from the Nomis database accessed by the House of Commons Library.

Season Tickets (Tax Relief)

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to introduce tax relief on season tickets. [24727]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 22 April 1996]: Under current law, the cost of a season ticket for home-to-work travel is not tax deductible. There are no plans to change that.

Self-assessment (Investment Income)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the yield in 1997–98 from higher rate income tax charged by direct assessment on investment income received net of lower rate income tax will be higher under the new system of self-assessment; and what estimate he has made of the extent of the difference. [26190]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 22 April 1996]: Self-assessment rationalises the payment dates for income tax, replacing the current plethora of dates and allowing a taxpayer's affairs to be brought together in one place and on one bill. Under self-assessment, payments on account will be required from certain taxpayers on 31 January within the tax year and on the following 31 July—broadly following the existing payment dates for the self-employed. Any balance will then be required at the following 31 January. For those taxpayers not required to make payments on account, the whole amount will be due on the following 31 January.

The transition from the old to the new pattern of payment dates will result in some one-off changes in Exchequer yields in 1997–98. Receipts of higher rate tax on investment income taxed at source will increase by £500 million because in-year payments on account of this tax will be required from some taxpayers from 1997–98, in contrast to the present arrangements whereby most such tax is collected in the following year. There will also be an offsetting reduction of £500 million in 1997–98 receipts of tax on rent and investment income not taxed at source because the bulk of 1997–98 tax will not be collected until the following year, whereas most of this tax is currently collected in-year—and this will also be true for 1996–97 tax. The £50 million shown in table 5.2 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1996–97" as the net yield in 1997–98 from self-assessment reflects both these effects.

The figures in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report" assume that no payments on account would be required in January and July 1998 from those whose tax due in 1996–97 was less than £500 or who paid 80 per cent. or more of their 1996–97 tax liability through pay-as-you-earn or other reduction at source arrangements. These limits will be confirmed when Treasury regulations are laid later this year. Under self-assessment, higher rate taxpayers who do not need to make payments on account will generally pay higher rate tax on their investment income taxed at source later than they do at present.

PRIME MINISTER

Louise Jensen (Killing)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Prime Minister for what reasons a letter of condolence was not sent by a Minister to the family of the Danish tour guide for whose manslaughter three British service men have been convicted. [26301]

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence has written a private letter to Louise Jensen's parents.

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Prime Minister what percentage of bills were paid late by his Department in 1995–96. [26120]

The Prime Minister: This information is being collated by the Department of Trade and Industry and will be published by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade before the summer recess.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Prime Minister how much was paid late by his Department to the private sector for goods and services in 1995–96. [26149]

The Prime Minster: The information is not held in the form requested.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Turkey

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to support moves by the UN Commission on Human Rights to prevent the continuing human rights violations in Turkey. [26441]

Mr. David Davis: We contributed to the Presidency statement at the UN Commission on Human Rights which conveyed to the Turkish Government the depth of our continuing concern about a number of human rights issues in Turkey. We will continue to raise these concerns directly with the Turkish authorities at every opportunity.

China

Mr. Jack Thompson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will raise the subject of the human rights situation in China at the forthcoming United Nations Commission on Human Rights. [26424]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We are tabling a resolution on human rights in China at the United Nations Commission on Human Rights, together with our European partners. We are working for maximum support for it among members of the Commission. The statement to the Commission by the European Union also expressed in detail our specific concerns about human rights in China.

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of bills were paid late by (a) the diplomatic wing and (b) the Overseas Development Administration in 1995–96. [26108]

Mr. Hanley: This information is being collated by the Department of Trade and Industry and will be published by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade before the summer recess.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much was paid late to the private sector for goods and services by (a) the diplomatic wing and (b) the Overseas Development Administration in 1995–96. [26155]

Mr. Hanley: We do not distinguish between payments to the public and private sectors and to analyse invoices paid in 1995–96 on this basis would involve disproportionate cost.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many appointments to the public bodies listed in "Public Bodies" for his Department were made during 1994–95 from names supplied by the public appointments unit; and if he will list them. [25950]

Mr. Hanley [holding answer 22 April 1996]: During 1994–95, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office made five appointments from names supplied by the public appointments unit to public bodies listed in the FCO 1996 departmental report.

They are as follows:

Marshall Aid Commemoration Commission

Dr. Robert Stevens

Commonwealth Development Corporation

Ms Caroline Hayman

Commonwealth Institute

Lord Armstrong

Dr. Ann Robinson

Mr. Algie Cluff

DEFENCE

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of funding to be made available to his Department through the private finance initiative in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26175]

Mr. Soames: Capital expenditure by the private sector on private finance initiative projects within my department is estimated as follows:

1995–96: up to £5 million

1996–97: £30 million

1997–98: £80 million

Peacekeeping Forces (Weapons)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what limitations are placed on Her Majesty's armed forces by the United Nations on the types of weapons that may be used in peacekeeping operations. [26264]

Mr. Soames: The type of weapons that may be used in peacekeeping operations is a matter for discussion between the United Nations and individual troop-contributing nations in the particular circumstances of each operation.

Israel-Lebanon Conflict

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if his recent speeches regarding the present Israeli-Lebanese conflict represent a change in Government policy in respect of territorial integrity between Lebanon and Israel as outlined in Security Council resolution No. 425. [26139]

Mr. Soames: No.

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what percentage of bills were paid late by his Department in 1995–96; [26113]

(2) how much was paid late to the private sector for goods and services by his Department in 1995–96.[26162]

Mr. Soames: This is a matter for the chief executive of the Defence Bills Agency, the Met Office and the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency. I have asked the chief executives to write to the hon. Member.

Information across Government on what percentage of bills were paid late by Departments in 1995–96 is being collated by the Department of Trade and Industry and will be published by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade before the summer recess.

Letter from T. R. Thurgate to Mrs. Barbara Roche, dated 24 April 1996:

You asked the Secretary of State for Defence, what percentage of bills were paid late by his Department in 1995/96, and how much was paid late to the private sector for goods and services by his Department in 1995/96. As this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive of the Defence Bills Agency I have been asked to reply.

We monitor our prompt payment performances closely. Of the 3.1m bills paid by the Defence Bills Agency in 1995/96, less than 0.1% were not paid within thirty days of receipt at Liverpool.

The payment performance statistics which are readily available are held by volume of bills, not value, and are not split between private and public sector, therefore the amount of money paid late to the private sector for goods and services in 1995/96 could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Letter from J. C. R. Hunt to Mrs. Barbara Roche, dated 24 April 1996:

I am replying to your question to the Secretary of State for Defence about late payment of bills by the Meteorological Office as this matter falls within my area of responsibility as Chief Executive.

On 1 April 1995 the Office took over responsibility for paying most of its bills. Since that date we have paid 100% of our bills within the target of settlement no later than 30 days after the invoice has been validated and passed for payment.

Our payment procedures make no distinction between the public and private sectors.

I hope this information is helpful.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mrs. Barbara Roche, dated 24 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Defence has asked me as Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation & Research Agency to reply to your questions about the percentage of bills that were paid late by this Agency in 1995/96 and what percentage of these were paid late to the private sector.

As I said in my letter to you of 1 November 1995, we define late payment as not paying bills within 30 days of receipt of a validated invoice at our bill paying section. On this basis, virtually all DERA's 285,642 bills paid in 1995/96 were paid within the 30 day period. We keep a lot of data on bill paying, as an aid to improving our performance, but I am afraid we do not keep statistics on those very few bills that fell outside of this target.

Nor do we keep our statistics in a way which allows us to differentiate readily between bills paid to the private sector and those paid to other areas. I regret, therefore, that the information to answer your second question is not available without incurring disproportionate costs.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many appointments to the public bodies listed in "Public Bodies" for his Department were made during 1994–95 from names supplied by the public appointments unit; and if he will list them. [25954]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 22 April 1996]: There were no appointments made to my Department's public bodies using names supplied by the public appointments unit during 1994–95.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what estimate he has made of funding to be made available to his Department through the private finance initiative in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26180]

Mr. Willetts: The Cabinet Office—including the Office of Public Service—Her Majesty's Stationery Office and the Central Office of Information have not yet approved any projects under the PFI. The Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency hopes to involve private finance in the provision of the Metropolitan Telecommunications Service. This could involve capital expenditure of some £750,000 in 1996–97 and £1.5 million in 1997–98. Final offers are due at the end of May 1996, and the contract is likely to be awarded in June 1996.

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister how much was paid late to the private sector by his Department for goods and services in 1995–96. [26158]

Mr. Willetts: The information is not held in the form requested.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what percentage of bills were paid late by his Department in 1995–96. [26114]

Mr. Willetts: This information is being collated by the Department of Trade and Industry and will be published by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade before the summer recess.

Small Firms

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many regulations relating to firms with fewer than (a) 100 employees, (b) 50 employees, (c) 20 employees and (d) 10 employees were in force in each of the last 20 years. [26107]

Mr. Freeman: This information is not held in the form requested. To collect such information would involve disproportionate cost.

Civil Service College

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are the Government's proposals for the future of the Civil Service college. [26900]

Mr. Freeman: The Civil Service college has a continuing role in the provision of training and development courses self evidently linked to the civil service. I am also pleased to announce that the college is now developing a number of partnerships with the private sector which will enhance its status in the provision of courses for those in the public and private sectors.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Holloway Prison

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the occasions on which Home Office Ministers have visited Holloway prison in the past two years indicating the Minister who carried out the visit. [25620]

Miss Widdecombe: I have visited Holloway prison twice in the past two years, on 27 July 1995 and on 14 March 1996.

I am the only Home Office Minister to have visited Holloway over that period.

Hillsborough Fund

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the status and future of the Hillsborough fund. [25734]

Mr. Sackville: The disaster appeal had two trusts, the Hillsborough Disaster Appeal Trust, a non-charitable discretionary trust, and the Hillsborough Disaster Charitable Trust, which was registered as a charity with the Charity Commission in April 1989. The appeal trust was closed in June 1992 and its remaining assets transferred to the charitable trust. The charitable trust was removed from the register in November 1995 because the trustees thought that the trust had served its purpose and wound it up after distributing all the funds.

Prisons (Mandatory Drug Testing)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will list the prisons in England and Wales which conduct mandatory drug testing; [26138]

(2) how many prisons in England and Wales pursue a policy of random urine drug testing; and if he will make a statement. [26094]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 24 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions concerning the number of prisons which conduct mandatory drug testing and the number which pursue a policy of random urine drug testing.

All establishments in England and Wales conduct a mandatory drug testing programme and all perform random tests as a part of that programme.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the local authorities which have been granted financial help with the provision of city centre closed circuit television. [26272]

Mr. Maclean: The 106 winners of the first Home Office closed circuit television challenge competition are listed. Additionally, phase 1 of the Home Office safer cities initiative funded some CCTV schemes. These areas are also listed. In both cases, the areas covered are not necessarily town or city centres, and payments were made to local partnerships, not to local authorities.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the amount of money the Government are providing for closed circuit television in town centres in the last year for which information is available; and if he will make a statement. [26267]

Mr. Maclean: In 1995, £5 million was paid to 106 winners in the first closed circuit television challenge competition. Over the next three years, my Department intends to distribute a further £45 million to help establish CCTV schemes in England and Wales.

Mr. O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the maximum amount his Department is able to grant an individual local authority for city centre closed circuit television; and if he will make a statement. [26271]

Mr. Maclean: The bidding guidance for the current closed circuit television challenge competition specifies that no scheme will receive more than £250,000.

Inspectorate of Constabulary (Budget)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the budget allocated to Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary in (a) 1992, (b) 1994, (c) 1995 and (d) 1996; and if he will make a statement. [26003]

Mr. Maclean: Budgets allocated were:

1992–93: 3,723
1993–94: 4,364
1994–95: 4,707
1995–96: 5,154
1996–97: 5,017

Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary has existed since 1856 and is the means by which my right hon. and learned Friend monitors the efficiency and effectiveness of police forces. The budget for 1996–97 will, as have previous budgets, enable Her Majesty's inspectorate to inspect police forces, monitor key police initiatives, advise on policing policy and promote good policing practices.

Police Officers

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were (a) prosecuted and (b) disciplined in each of the last five years arising from cases where awards of damages or out-of-court settlements had been made; and in cases where offices were disciplined, what form the discipline took. [26009]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not held centrally.

Prisoners (Foreign Nationals)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what records are kept by his Department of foreign nationals serving sentences in prisons in England and Wales; and how often these are updated. [26091]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 24 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what records are kept on foreign nationals in prisons in England and Wales.

The information available centrally on individual prisoners is held on the Central System Database. Nationality information is included on that database and foreign nationals can be separately identified. The Central System Database is updated daily from information provided electronically by the individual prisons. Computer extracts are then taken once a month from the Central System Database for analytical purposes. Each prison will hold both manual and computer records for individual prisoners.

Chief Inspector of Prisons (Visits)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many unannounced prison visits have been made by the chief inspector of prisons since 1 January; and to which prisons in England and Wales. [26090]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prisons Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 24 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many unannounced prison visits have been made by the Chief Inspector of Prisons since 1 January; and to which prisons in England and Wales.

Since 1 January HM Chief Inspector of Prisons, or members of HM Inspectorate, have made four announced inspections of Prison Service establishments. The establishments inspected were Sudbury, Preston and Dartmoor prisons and Aylesbury young offender institution.

Boot Camps

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to set up boards of visitors groups for military establishments being used as boot camps for young offenders; and if he will make a statement. [26303]

Miss Widdecombe: On 17 April, I announced our proposal to pilot a demanding new regime for young offenders at a young offender institution which is to be established at the military corrective training centre at Colchester. Her Majesty's young offender institution Colchester will be run under the young offender institution rules and will have a board of visitors appointed by the Home Secretary. There are currently no plans to pilot similar regimes at other military establishments.

Lowdham Grange

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the current and future use of the former borstal establishment and grounds at Lowdham Grange near Nottingham. [26416]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this mater has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. David Hinchliffe, dated 24 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the current and future use of the former Borstal establishment and grounds at Lowdham Grange near Nottingham.

Lowdham Grange has been mothballed since 1989. It is the Prison Service's intention to use the site for a 500 place closed training prison. The new prison will be built, financed and managed using the Private Finance Initiative (PFI). Contract signature is expected in the Autumn of 1996, with the view to opening the prison in December 1997.

Firearms Licences

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many licences for firearms and shotguns were (a) granted, (b) refused, (c) renewed and (d) varied for the last five years in Greater Manchester. [26466]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is published annually in Home Office statistical bulletins "Firearm Certificate Statistics, England and Wales" (tables 2 and 4), copies of which can be found in the Library. The bulletin references are 23/91,19/92, 23/93, 22/94 and 11/95. Statistics for 1995 are not yet available.

Private Sector Contracts

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will place in the Library a summary of the main contracts with the private sector for the provision of prison buildings and services, including information on the duration of contracts, and the terms of any break or review clauses, for each Prison Service establishment. [26038]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Jack Straw, dated 24 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about placing a summary of the main contracts with the private sector for the provision of custodial services in the Library of the House of Commons.

The contracts for the supply of custodial services at the Wolds, Blakenhurst, Doncaster and Buckley Hall prisons have been placed in the Library.

On 3 April, the contracts for the first two design, construct, manage and finance contracts for the provision of prisoner places at Bridgend and Fazakerley under the Government's Private Finance Initiative were also placed in the Library.

The only details not included in those copies is a relatively small amount of commercially sensitive information and, in the case of Bridgend and Fazakerley, an extensive design schedule which is sensitive for security reasons.

The parts dealing with duration and break clauses have been placed in the Library in full.

Firearms Amnesty

Mr. Trend: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he can give further details of the forthcoming firearms amnesty. [26959]

Mr. Howard: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland and I have today announced that a national firearms amnesty will start on 3 June and will run for the rest of that month. It will apply to England and Wales and to Scotland and will enable people to hand in to a police station illegally held weapons without fear of prosecution. It will not, however, give immunity against any offences committed using those weapons. The amnesty will also provide an opportunity for people to hand in unwanted but legally held weapons.

Guidance has been issued to the police to ensure that all appropriate arrangements are made to facilitate the surrender of weapons during the period of the amnesty.

Publicity material will be made available locally to provide people with information as to how they can hand in weapons.

Buckley Hall Prison

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the prisoner demonstration that occurred at Buckley Hall prison on 16 April; how many prisoners took part in a rooftop demonstration; how many were subsequently moved to another prison; and what investigations will be carried out by the Prison Service. [26024]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 23 April 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 24 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking if he will make a statement on the prisoner demonstration that occurred at Buckley hall prison on the 16 April; how many prisoners took part in a rooftop demonstration; how many were subsequently moved to another prison; and what investigations will be carried out by the Prison Service.

On 16 April a minor passive demonstration was made by a group of prisoners who wished to express grievances about tighter control on release on temporary licence. This was resolved by discussion and no disciplinary charges were laid. There was no roof top demonstration. The incident lasted approximately two hours.

Later in the day one prisoner was transferred to another establishment. Normal debriefing arrangements are now in hand with regard to the incident.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what instructions have been given to the local police in dealing with media inquiries in relation to Buckley Hall prison; and in what circumstances they are instructed by his Department to refer media inquiries about Buckley Hall prison to Group 4. [26025]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 23 April 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 24 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what instructions have been given to the local police in dealing with media inquiries in relation to Buckley Hall prison; and in what circumstances they are instructed by his department to refer media inquiries about Buckley Hall prison to Group 4.

There are no instructions given to the local police when dealing with media inquiries in relation to Buckley Hall prison. Media incident inquiries within the Prison Service are normally referred to the Prison Service Press Office.

In addition Buckley Hall also refers inquiries to the Group 4 Press Office.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 3 April, Official Report, column 291, on a full inspection of Buckley Hall prison, on what date, and by whom, the decision was taken that all new prisons should be operational for two years before being fully inspected and what are the implications of this for short, unannounced visits by Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons. [25760]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 23 April 1996]: The decision that new Prison Service establishments should not be inspected until they have been operational for at least two years was taken in 1993 by the then chief inspector. The policy applies to inspections which are included in Her Majesty's inspectorate's annual programme of inspections. In addition, Her Majesty's chief inspector may inspect prisons unannounced, or direct a member of Her Majesty's inspectorate to do so, at any time.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 3 April, Official Report, column 293, on security fencing at Buckley Hall prison, how the design of the initial fencing at the prison differed from other similar category C prisons; and for what reasons the cost of additional fencing and external cameras is being incurred by Group 4. [25761]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 23 April 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 24 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the design of the fencing and the cost of additional fencing and external cameras at Buckley Hall prison.

The prison fence at Buckley Hall is a standard category C prison perimeter and was designed by the Prison Service.

Following the escape, on 19 February, of a prisoner who was serving a sentence of two and a half years for burglary a Prison Service investigation concluded that a number of factors had contributed to the escape.

Although Group 4's record for security at Buckley Hall is similar to that of comparable category C prisons, they were warned that the Prison Service took the view that there had been security failures and intended to impose a remedy. In the event Group 4, having reassessed physical security at Buckley Hall is investing in the provision of additional security measures including fencing and security cameras.

Entry Visas

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his policy in respect of entry visas for business people from Commonwealth countries who need to make urgent visits to this country. [26306]

Mr. Hanley: I have been asked to reply.

Almost all entry clearance sections process straightforward visit or business visa applications worldwide within 24 hours. Frequent visitors to the UK may apply for multiple entry visas which are valid for periods between six months and five years.

HEALTH

International Peto Institute

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the agreement between the United Kingdom and Hungarian Governments on the funding for the International Peto Institute; and what will happen to the money donated by Her Majesty's Government at the expiry of the agreement; [25873]

(2) what progress has been made in the proposal to create an International Peto Institute; [25872]

(3) what is the value at current prices of the donation by Her Majesty's Government towards the appeal fund to create an International Peto Institute in Hungary; when the donation was made; and where the money is now; [25870]

(4) what is the total value of international donations for the International Peto Institute. [25871]

Mr. Bowis: The Government made a contribution in 1991 towards the cost of building a new International Peto Institute in Budapest. These funds are held in trust in a bank account in Budapest and their current value is around £2 million. The Peto Institute has received donations from Hungarian and foreign donors, both private and public. Under the terms of our agreement with the Hungarian Government, the new institute had to be operational by February 1996. As the Hungarians have not brought the new institute into operation, the agreement has expired. Discussions are taking place with the Hungarian Government about the financial implications, including the disposal of money lodged in Hungary and how best to secure benefits for British children, parents and students.

Mental Health

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 18 March, Official Report, column 79, in what ways the crisis accommodation he proposes for mentally ill people will differ from that treatment and care provided in acute wards of psychiatric hospitals; and what guidance is being given to health authorities on the purchase of such accommodation and the provision of 24-hour nursing care in them. [26212]

Mr. Bowis: Acute treatment units provide a protective environment for people who pose a significant risk to themselves or others. They should be used to treat and care for patients who require intensive medical and nursing support for a brief period of time but usually longer than overnight. The needs of patients who do not require such a high level of support, but nevertheless are in a crisis situation, can better be served by providing them with crisis accommodation in a variety of settings and with varying levels of support.

Guidance was issued on 19 February to health and local authorities in health service guidelines LASSL(96)16/HSG(96)6. The guidance and accompanying documents are available in the Library.

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the United Kingdom representatives on the Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products notified his Department that it had discussed the referral made by the United Kingdom on 11 October 1995 in the context of article 12 of directive 75/319/EEC on 27 October; and if he will make a statement. [26165]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 8 February at columns 343–44.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) pursuant to his answer of 25 March, Official Report, column 428, if licensing action has started with respect to oral contraceptives containing desogestrel and gestodene; [26250]

(2) what plans the Medicines Control Agency has to vary the product licences of third generation oral contraceptives. [26574]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 19 December 1995 at column 1149.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 14 March, Official Report, column 752, if at the meeting on 3 October 1995 he and the chairman of the Committee on Safety of Medicines discussed issues relating to the safety of desogestrel and gestodene. [26255]

Mr. Malone: No.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column

184, if the Jick manuscript faxed to the Medicines Control Agency after dispatch of papers to the Committee on Safety of Medicines on 11 October was made available to the committee on 13 October. [26251]

Mr. Malone: No. A near final version of the manuscript from the Jick study was included with the papers despatched to committee members prior to the meeting. There was no substantive change to the analysis in the final version.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he took prior to authorising the issuing of the "Dear Doctor" letter of 18 October 1995 to establish that the Committee on Safety of Medicines had based its advice on all available relevant evidence; and if he will make a statement. [26292]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 19 December 1995 at column 1152.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 8 February, Official Report, columns 344-45, which pharmaceutical companies were contacted by the Medicines Control Agency prior to the meeting of the Committee on Safety of Medicines of 13 October 1995 with a view to establishing continuity of supply of combined oral contraceptives. [26253]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 2 April at column 185.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Medicines Control Agency received unpublished data from the study of oral contraceptives by Professor Richard Farmer and colleagues prior to the meeting of the Committee of Safety of Medicines on 13 October 1995. [26252]

Mr. Malone: No.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the safety of third generation oral contraceptives following the recent announcement from the committee for proprietary medicinal products. [26601]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the statement that my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State made to the House on 23 October 1995, Official Report, columns 701–2. Since that time further evidence has become available which strengthens the basis for the Committee on Safety of Medicine's advice. The justification for that advice is not altered in the light of the recent position statement issued by the Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to alter the procedures for dealing with future marketing authorisation applications for third generation oral contraceptives. [26573]

Mr. Malone: None. Future applications for marketing authorisations for third generation oral contraceptives will be assessed according to existing procedures.

Safety of Medicines

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what mechanisms are in place for the communication of fatal adverse drug reactions from the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys to the Medicines Control Agency and the Committee on Safety of Medicines. [26290]

Mr. Malone: Statistical analyses and death certificate reports are available to the Medicines Control Agency from the Office for National Statistics—the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys became part of the office for National Statistics on 1 April 1996—for use in drug safety monitoring.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the outside experts who attended the meeting of the Committee on Safety of Medicines on 13 October 1995 were appointed members for the day; and on what basis they were present at the meeting. [26246]

Mr. Malone: Yes, and I refer the hon. Member to the replies that I gave him on 11 December 1995 at column 522 and on 7 March at column 322.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 11 December, Official Report, column 522, on what basis members may be appointed members for the day to the Committee on Safety of Medicines; and if those members are legally liable for the advice emanating from the Committee on Safety of Medicines on that day. [26254]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the replies that I gave him on 11 December at col 522 and on 7 March at col 322, which also apply to members appointed to the Committee on Safety of Medicines for the day.

All members of the committee, including those appointed for the day, may be liable in law if incorrect advice is given.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health from what date Professor Klim McPherson was appointed as a member of the pharmacovigilance sub-committee of the Committee on Safety of Medicines. [26249]

Mr. Malone: From 1 January 1996.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 7 March, Official Report, column 322, if the experts on the Committee on Safety of Medicines who assessed the tables provided by Professor Spitzer on 9 October 1995 recognised arithmetical errors in those tables; and if they asked Professor Spitzer for clarification of the results of the transnational study. [26572]

Mr. Malone: The proceedings of meetings of the Committee are confidential.

Clinical Waste

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidelines are in place covering the disposal of clinical waste. [25939]

Mr. Horam: There is much guidance on waste management and waste disposal produced by many organisations. Main general sources of published advice from Government bodies on best practice in waste management and disposal of clinical waste in particular are as follows:

(i) The Safe Disposal of Clinical Waste (Health and Safety Executive 1992);

(ii) Waste Management Paper No. 25 (Department of the Environment 1983; Revised in preparation);

(iii) Strategic Guide for Waste Management (Department of Health 1991);

(iv) A Strategic Guide to Clinical Waste Management (Department of Health 1994);

(v) Waste Management—The Duty of Care: A Code of Practice (Department of the Environment 1991).

Copies of the guidance will be placed in the Library shortly.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what quantity of clinical waste has been disposed of in each of the past five years. [25937]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if hospital trusts have a statutory duty to ensure the appropriate disposal of clinical waste. [25938]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Don Valley (Mr. Redmond) on 21 March at columns 319–20.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the safeguards in place to prevent the dumping of clinical waste classified for incineration. [25940]

Mr. Horam: The Environmental Protection Act 1990 includes a duty to prevent the unlawful depositing, handling and disposal of clinical waste, and is enforced by county council waste regulation units. Any body which produces controlled waste, including clinical waste, is responsible for any pollution caused to the environment or any harm to health from clinical waste while in their control and has a duty to transfer it only to an authorised person. Authorised persons must hold a waste management licence or be carriers registered with the Environment Agency. Breach of the duty of care is an offence, where conviction on indictment can lead to unlimited fines. In estates policy letter (95)33, issued in December 1995 by the National Health Service Estates Agency, trusts were reminded of their legal obligations in respect of the safe disposal of clinical waste and were asked to review their current arrangements to ensure that the necessary safeguards were in place.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions NHS estates has issued memoranda concerning the trusts' responsibilities regarding the disposal of clinical waste. [25942]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Fife, Central (Mr. McLeish) on 14 March at columns 753–54, which listed all letters and guidance issued by National Health Service Estates to NHS hospital trusts about medical waste management. Copies of the guidance are available in the Library.

Hospital Incinerators

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital incinerators were in operation in each year since 1989; and what agency is responsible for the inspection of hospital incinerators. [25935]

Mr. Horam: The number of hospital incinerators in operation in each year since 1989 is not available centrally.

The inspection of hospital incinerators with a capacity of more than 1 tonne per hour is the responsibility of the Environment Agency—previously Her Majesty's inspectors of pollution. The inspection of incineration plant with a capacity of less than 1 tonne per hour is the responsibility of the local authority's environmental department.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospital trusts have built incinerators in the past five years. [25936]

Mr. Horam: Six hospital trusts have built incinerators in the last five years. An additional thirteen incinerators have been built on hospital sites as the result of joint ventures between the national health service and private companies.

Supplies Authority

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on (i) the savings per annum and (ii) the severance costs of the staffing review of the NHS supplies authority. [26319]

Mr. Horam: The review is still in progress, so it is not yet possible to estimate the total annual savings to be achieved, nor the aggregate costs of severance payments. The changes are designed to improve the service to customers and to give better value for money by simplifying the structure and removing unnecessary duplication of effort.

Medical Devices Agency

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the key business targets for the Medical Devices Agency for 1996–97. [26746]

Mr. Horam: I have today placed in the Library a copy of the 1996–97 key business targets for the Medical Devices Agency.

Care of the Elderly

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects to publish his consultative document on care of the elderly; and if he will make a statement. [25308]

Mr. Bowis: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply that I gave him on 23 April.

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of bills were paid late by his Department in 1995–96. [26116]

Mr. Horam: The information is being collected by the Department of Trade and Industry and will be published by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade before the summer recess.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was paid late to the private sector by his Department for goods and services in 1995–96. [26154]

Mr. Horam: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Paracetamol and Methionine

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the licensed preparations which contain paracetamol and, for each preparation, whether the preparation is prescription-only medicine, pharmacy or general sale list, the year when the product was first marketed and if the product contains methionine or similar compounds. [26248]

Mr. Malone: A list of the 378 currently licensed preparations, which includes whether each is prescription-only medicine, pharmacy or general sale list, will be placed in the Library. It will state the year when the licence was granted, but not when each was first marketed as this is a matter for the licence holder, not the licensing authority. There are two licensed preparations containing methionine: Pameton caplets and Paradote, both of which are pharmacy products.

Cortico-steroid Drugs

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on research evaluated by his Department relating to the harmful side effects of cortico-steroid drugs; [26595]

(2) if he will institute a national programme to monitor the prescription of cortico-steroid drugs in the United Kingdom and the extent and nature of side effects on patients; [26597]

(3) what is the most recent research evaluated by his Department on the suitability of prescribed cortico-steroid drugs; and what plans he has to promote further research; [26596]

(4) if he will make a statement on the provision of compensation for patients who have suffered long-term damage as a result of prescribed cortico-steroid drugs in cases where no warning had been given of such risks. [26598]

Mr. Malone: Corticosteroids are effective in the treatment of many serious and life-threatening disorders and have been used for many years. All medicines have side- effects. Those for corticosteroids are well documented in the product information which is produced by the manufacturer and authorised by the licensing authority and in the British National Formulary which the Department sends free of charge to all doctors.

A national programme for monitoring the side-effects of medicines already exists. The Medicines Control Agency continuously monitors and assesses the safety of all licensed human medicinal products including corticosteroids. This includes evaluating research obtained from various sources. In 1994, the Committee on Safety of Medicines evaluated the association of corticosteroids and severe chickenpox, as a result of which the product information of corticosteroids was revised.

I have no plans to monitor the prescribing of corticosteroids. It is for the prescribing doctor to decide on the suitability of treating a patient with corticosteroids using their clinical judgement and knowledge of the patient involved. Nor are there plans to commission research in this area at present.

The Government believe that any claims for compensation as a result of suspected reactions in association with prescribed medicines is a matter for individuals to pursue with the person or company involved, if necessary through the courts.

WALES

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many representations he has had concerning the nursery voucher scheme; and if he will make a statement. [25588]

Mr. Richards: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Ceredigion and Pembroke, North (Mr. Dafis) on 15 January 1996, Official Report, column 379. Some 3,000 separate representations have now been received, the vast majority continuing to consist of petitions, printed pro forma letters and postcards, many organised by primary schools.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of funding to be made available to his Department through the private finance initiative in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26181]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Estimated capital expenditure by the private sector on Welsh Office private finance initiative projects in 1996–97 is £60 million and for 1997–98, £150 million. No capital expenditure was recorded for 1995–96.

Beef and Suckler Cow Premiums

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he plans to announce payment of beef and suckler cow premiums. [26183]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I announced on 4 April that the vast majority of claimants should receive their payments by the end of April. We are on target to achieve that objective.

Paramedics

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many qualified paramedics there are per head of population in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [26000]

Mr. Richards: These figures are not routinely collected. An informal survey showed that there were 434 paramedics in Wales at 31 March 1995—1.49 per 10,000 population.

Welsh Language

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the bodies and organisations which he has been informed (a) are and (b) are not preparing language schemes in accordance with the Welsh Language Act 1993, indicating for (a) where possible the dates on which those schemes will be received by the Welsh Language Board; and if he will make a statement. [25764]

Mr. Richards: This is an operational matter for the Welsh Language Board. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member and I will arrange for a copy of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

School Admissions

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 16 April, Official Report, column 426, in respect of which schools he has received information on their approved admissions number. [26289]

Mr. Richards: Details of approved admission numbers are contained in the formal proposals for grant-maintained status that schools have to publish following a successful ballot and on which my decision as to whether they become grant-maintained is based. These details were provided in my reply of 16 April to the hon. Member.

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of bills were paid late by his Department in 1995–96. [26126]

Mr. Hague: This information is being collated by the Department of Trade and Industry and will be published by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade before the summer recess.

Public Bodies

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the public bodies to which he appoints members ranked in order of their current level of spending and indicating (i) in total and (ii) for each body (a) the number of members and the percentage appointed by him and (b) the budget for the last available two years expressed in constant 1996 prices, and with the annual percentage change. [26030]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: As the answer to the hon. Members question is detailed, I have made arrangements to place a copy of the reply in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was paid late to the private sector by his Department for goods and services in 1995–96. [26143]

Mr. Hague: The information is not available in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Fluorescent Lighting

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the average amount of mercury in a fluorescent lighting tube. [25748]

Mr. Page: Fluorescent lighting tubes currently produced are estimated to contain on average 10mg of mercury.

Beaufort's Dyke

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what reports he has evaluated of explosions in the immediate vicinity of Beaufort's dyke which were related to pipelaying activities undertaken by British Transco. [25721]

Mr. Eggar: The Department of Trade and Industry did not receive any reports directly but, during our regular contacts with The Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department we were informed of the British Geological Survey's findings. The DTI liaised with Premier Transco Ltd. in its contacts with BGS where information on explosions used during construction of the pipeline, particularly on the landfall sections, were made available, and efforts made to reconcile the data. It was concluded that the hitherto unexplained explosions, highlighted in the BGS survey, were the result of either military activity or preparatory work relating to the construction of the Scotland to Northern Ireland pipeline.

Employment Costs

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what non-wage employment costs are faced by businesses in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) France and (c) Germany. [25108]

Mr. John M. Taylor: In the UK, for every £100 paid in wages, employers on average have to find an additional £18 in non-wage labour costs. In France, they must find another £41; and in Germany, £32.

Wages

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent representations he has received about levels of wages in industries formerly covered by the wages councils. [25113]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Between April 1994 and April 1995, average earnings of full-time workers covered by the main wages councils prior to their abolition in August 1993 rose at a comparable rate to that of workers employed in all industries. I have received few representations on this matter in recent months.

Loan Guarantee Scheme

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many firms in city challenge and inner city task force areas received loan guarantees under the small firms loan guarantee scheme in 1995–96; what was the total amount guaranteed to these firms; and what was the total amount guaranteed to these firms because they were in these geographical areas. [26039]

Mr. Page: The estimated number of loans guaranteed to firms in city challenge or inner city task force areas in 1995–96 is around 160 at a value of £3.98 million. Final statistical details are not yet available.

Around 30 of the loans, at a value of around £80,000, would have fully benefited from trading from an address within the specific inner-city areas; around 125, at a value of £3.6 million, would have received partial benefits. The remainder did not benefit from their location.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many firms which received loan guarantees under the loan guarantee scheme in the last year will be ineligible to apply for loans because of new exclusions coming into force on 1 September. [26041]

Mr. Page: The estimated number of loans guaranteed under the scheme in 1995–96, for business activities that will be excluded from 1 September, is around 700. Final statistical details are not yet available.

Business Links

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which business links are charging for services; what is the charging structure for each such business link; and what date will mark the end of the three-year pump-priming period for each business link. [26034]

Mr. Page: All business links are charging for at least some of their services. Business links are private sector companies, not Government bodies, and each has its own charging structure. A list of the dates when three-year pump-priming will end, or has ended for all business links with an offer, is given in the table. The final payment of DTI grant will be made up to four months after the dates shown.

Working Week

Ms Quin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent representations he has received regarding the maximum length of the working week. [25081]

Mr. John M. Taylor: During the past 12 months, 26 letters have been received by the Department of Trade and Industry and the former Employment Department about the length of the working week. They expressed views both in support of the imposition of restrictions on the number of hours which can be worked in a week, and opposing such restrictions.

NORTHERN IRELAND

"The Nemesis File"

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Torbay (Mr. Allason) on 14 December, Official Report, column 801, if he will make a statement on the progress of the Royal Ulster Constabulary investigation into the claims made in the book, "The Nemesis File". [25578]

Sir John Wheeler: The position remains the same as in my written reply of 14 December 1995 to the hon. Member for Torbay. The RUC investigations into the allegations contained in this book continue.

St. Patrick's Training School

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many residents at the Rathgael centre in Bangor in 1995 were brought there because St. Patrick's training school was unable to provide a place; if these inmates had higher levels of absconding; and if he will make a statement. [25755]

Sir John Wheeler: During 1995 a total of 14 boys were referred to Rathgael because they could not be accommodated at St. Patrick's training school. Of these boys, 11 or 79 per cent. were responsible for absconding on a total of 17 occasions—an average of 1.2 abscondings per pupil. Of the remaining throughput of 271 during 1995, 133 or 49 per cent. absconded on a total of 764 occasions—an average of 2.8 times per pupil.

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much was paid late to the private sector for goods and services by his Department in 1995–96.[26150]

Sir John Wheeler: The information is not readily available in the format requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of bills were paid late by his Department in 1995–96. [26119]

Sir John Wheeler: Information available relates to calendar years rather than financial years. In 1995 the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments paid 96.6 per cent. of their bills in accordance with agreed contractual conditions or, where no such contractual conditions existed, within 30 days of receipt of goods and services or the presentation of a valid invoice.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of funding to be made available to his Department through the private finance initiative in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26172]

Sir John Wheeler: It is estimated that the following amounts, rounded to the nearest £10 million, will be levered in through the private finance initiative:

1995–96: £60 million

1996–97: £50 million

1997–98: £80 million.

The information for 1996–97 onwards is also published in the Financial Statement and Budget Report 1996–97.

Disabled People (Benefits and Allowances)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people in each Northern Ireland constituency are currently in receipt of (a) disability living allowance, (b) incapacity benefit, (c) attendance allowance, (d) invalid care allowance and (e) severe disablement allowance. [25758]

Mr. Moss: The information is not available at present for either attendance allowance or invalid care allowance. The information for disability living allowance, incapacity benefit and severe disablement allowance is given in the following table:

Parliamentary constituencies	Disability living allowance 30 November 1995[1]	Incapacity benefit[2] 30 November 1995[1]	Severe disablement allowance[2] 30 November 1995[1]

[1] This is the most recent date for which information is available for all three benefits.

[2] Figures do not include clerical cases which are not held on the system. The number of clerical cases is, at present, unknown, but is estimated to form only a small proportion of the total cases.

[3] A number of cases cannot be allocated to constituencies as their postcodes have not been provided. These cases may not be evenly distributed across constituencies.

Paramedics

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many qualified paramedics there are per head of population in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [26002]

Mr. Moss: In Northern Ireland there are 1.26 qualified paramedics per 10,000 population.

Farmers' Incomes

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the average incomes of farmers in Northern Ireland in each year since 1979. [26198]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 April 1996]: Total income from farming divided by the total number of active farms in Northern Ireland is as follows:

Total income from farming per farm 1979–1995

Year	Income per farm £
1979	1,374
1980	1,014
1981	2,277

Intensive Farming

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provisions are in place in the Department of Agriculture to (a) control and (b) restrict over-intensive farming in Northern Ireland with particular reference to the use of fertilisers and pesticides. [26197]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The control of pesticides and fertilisers is subject to statutory provisions which apply uniformly throughout the UK.

Provisions exists under five environmentally sensitive areas schemes and the habitat improvement scheme to restrict over-intensive use of fertilisers and pesticides. These schemes form part of the Northern Ireland agri-environment programme.

Department of Economic Development (Energy Efficiency Unit)

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will give a breakdown of expenditure in the energy efficiency, mineral, gas and electric unit in the Department of Economic Development in each of the years 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96. [26204]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The information requested is as follows:

Budget	Amount 1993–94	1994–95	1995–96

[1] Residual payments: scheme replaced by energy management assistance scheme.
[2] Residual payments: scheme replaced by domestic energy efficiency scheme.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many appointments to the public bodies listed in "Public Bodies" for his Department were made during 1994–95 from names supplied by the public appointments unit; and if he will list them. [25959]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 22 April 1996]: None of the individuals appointed to public bodies in Northern Ireland during 1994–95 were from names supplied by the public appointments unit.

Unfair Dismissal (Women)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of unfair dismissal of women have been recorded in Northern Ireland during the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [25212]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 23 April 1996]: The number of unfair dismissal cases brought by women and registered by the industrial tribunals for 1993, 1994 and 1995 are as follows:

Cases of unfair dismissal brought by women in Northern Ireland

Year	Total registered
1993	592
1994	354

SCOTLAND

Algrade Trust

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a further statement on the progress of the investigation of the affairs of the Algrade Trust by the Scottish Charities Office; and if evidence has been requested from the BBC. [25711]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The further inquiries referred to in my written answer of 27 February 1996, Official Report, column 530, are continuing and are not likely to be concluded before the end of June. The BBC programme has been viewed by the investigators and the matter is being pursued with the corporation.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the progress of investigations by the police and the procurator fiscal into the former Algrade Trust house at Humbie. [25712]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The police investigation is continuing. A man by name of Robert Herriot appeared on petition on 22 January 1996 at Haddington sheriff court charged with crimes involving indecent conduct. The case is being precognosced by the procurator fiscal and will be reported to Crown counsel for instructions on criminal proceedings.

Marine Laboratory, Aberdeen

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when that new survey by the Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department marine laboratory in Aberdeen will commence; how long it is expected to last; which commercial companies are also involved; what arrangements are being made for representatives of the press and hon. Members to observe the survey; and if he will make a statement. [25772]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The further survey work will be undertaken between the dates of 26 April–17 May and 19–29 July inclusive following some recently completed preparatory work. Underwater Engineering Ltd., Aberdeen is providing support equipment for the side-scan sonar studies and Oceanscan Ltd., Aberdeen is providing the pulse induction equipment. A further contract for the provision of equipment for the July survey is under consideration. Because of the tight survey schedule, no provision has been made for press or hon. Members' involvement. The results of this further survey will be published.

Private Prisons

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) how many representations he has received concerning the proposed private prison at Bishopbriggs; and how many were (a) for and (b) against the proposal; [25911]

(2) when he expects to make an announcement concerning the siting of the new private prison. [25913]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Three petitions and 56 individual letters have been received objecting to the proposal. One letter has been received which supports the proposal. An announcement about the location for the new prison is expected before the end of June this year.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of funding to be made available to his Department through the private finance initiative in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26179]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: For the three years in question, the estimated capital expenditure under the private finance initiative on programmes within my responsibility is (a) £22 million, (b) £139 million and (c) £362 million.

Further Education

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the effect of employing less experienced staff on the student unit of measurement in further education colleges. [25981]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: None. There is no evidence that colleges are employing less experienced staff.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will explain the formula used for the student unit of measurement in further education. [25982]

Mr. Robertson: My right hon. Friend has placed the document "Funding Methodology for Scottish Further Education Colleges" in the Library of the House.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of whether those areas of Scotland with a historically good record of financial support for further education are relatively disadvantaged under the new system of funding. [25998]

Mr. Robertson: The purpose of the new system of funding for colleges is to create a more equitable and transparent system of funding for colleges throughout Scotland. In changes to the level of grant allocated to colleges in 1996–97 there is no discernible geographical pattern.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what restrictions there are on Scottish further education colleges taking extra higher national certificate and higher national diploma students; and for what reasons there are such restrictions. [25984]

Mr. Robertson: When grant allocations to colleges for 1996–97 were made, it was a condition of grant that they held the number of new entrants to full-time higher education courses at their 1994–95 academic year levels. This was due as part of the Government's policy of consolidating the number of students following higher education courses, on the grounds of affordability and following a period of rapid expansion.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland for what reasons he has withdrawn the premium in grant given to further education colleges for advanced courses that allowed them to achieve equity with such courses in higher education colleges. [25983]

Mr. Robertson: My right hon. Friend is not aware of any premium in grant given to further education colleges for advanced courses.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland in what way financial allowance is made for courses that are more expensive to run in his calculation of a college's entitlement to funding. [25985]

Mr. Robertson: To reflect the costs of different subjects a set of weightings is applied to the funding of student activity at colleges.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the effect of the current year's system of funding further education colleges on the likelihood of courses being run for the construction industry; and what is the basis for this assessment. [25986]

Mr. Robertson: The approach to funding for further education colleges is designed to encourage colleges to provide courses and training to meet local and national labour market needs. My right hon. Friend has no evidence to suggest there is a shortage of courses relevant to the construction industry.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if funding for advanced courses in further education contains funding for five units of support studies; [25987]

(2) if funding for non-advanced studies in further education colleges contains funding for five units of support studies. [25988]

Mr. Robertson: No. Neither the academic content of courses nor the form of learning activity undertaken by students is specified by my right hon. Friend.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if expenditure on senior management affects the calculation of student units of measurement for further education colleges; and how. [26031]

Mr. Robertson: A fixed element is allocated to each college by applying an additional weighting to the first 5,500 student units of measurement. This element acknowledges that certain fixed costs are incurred irrespective of the size of the college. These costs include the principalship, administration—including computer equipment—and student support.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had with representatives of further education in Scotland about the future of the sector; and if he will make a statement about projected expenditure. [26033]

Mr. Robertson: My right hon. Friend met the current chairman of the Association of Scottish Colleges last year to discuss further education issues.

Details of projected expenditure figures for further education colleges in Scotland are contained in "Serving Scotland's Needs—The Government Expenditure Plans 1996/97–1998/99", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what effect he plans his funding policy for further education colleges to have on the number of high-level courses offered by colleges. [25989]

Mr. Robertson: The funding methodology for further education colleges is neutral in terms of level of course or mode of attendance. However, when grant allocation to colleges for 1996–97 were made, it was a condition of grant that they held the number of new entrants to full-time higher education courses at their 1994–95 academic year levels.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland which specific areas of skill shortage in Scotland he is seeking to remedy through his funding policy for further education colleges. [25990]

Mr. Robertson: The approach to funding for further education colleges is designed to encourage colleges to provide courses and training to meet local and national labour market needs.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much finance would have been needed, in constant price terms, to provide the same level of service in 1996–97 by further education colleges as in 1995–96; and how much has been provided by him. [25991]

Mr. Robertson: The amount of recurrent grant allocated to further education colleges in 1995–96 was £229.631 million. Assuming efficiency gains of 4 per cent. and inflation at 2.75 per cent. the amount of recurrent grant required to maintain the same level of service in 1996–97 would have been £226.508 million. The actual amount of recurrent grant allocated for 1996–97 is £231.160 million.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what grounds the grants for (a) Glasgow college of food technology, (b) Glasgow school of nautical studies and (c) Glasgow college of building and printing were reduced in the current year. [25992]

Mr. Robertson: Grant levels of these colleges were reduced as a result of the implementation of a new funding formula which rewards colleges which have been most successful in reducing unit costs and attracting and retaining students. These three colleges continue to have unit costs higher than the national average.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland on what basis he intends to allocate funds for bursaries for further education colleges. [25993]

Mr. Robertson: Funds for bursaries have been allocated to each further education college in line with the historical bursary levels provided by the former regional councils.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland pursuant to his answer of 3 April, Official Report, column 273, if he will make a statement on the numbers of staff and job designations now employed at senior management level in Scottish further education colleges. [26032]

Mr. Robertson: The information requested is not held centrally. It is for individual college boards of management to determine the numbers and job designations of staff at senior management level.

Bursaries

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has reserved sufficient resources to fund this year's bursaries at the same level as those funded by the former regional councils. [25997]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Yes. Sufficient bursary funds have been allocated to further education colleges for 1996–97 to reflect historical bursary expenditure incurred by the former regional councils.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if money for bursaries for further education colleges will take into account levels of poverty in an area. [25994]

Mr. Robertson: Yes. The money for bursaries allocated to further education colleges reflects historical bursary expenditure patterns at each college and the bursary scheme has regard to each student's financial status.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if students already receiving bursaries for courses this year will automatically receive bursaries at the same level in the next academic year. [25995]

Mr. Robertson: Very few bursary eligible courses cover two academic years. However, it will be for individual boards of management of further education colleges to determine precise bursary levels and qualifying criteria within a national bursary policy.

Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will take into account existing levels of bursaries in allocating funds to further education colleges. [25996]

Mr. Robertson: Yes. Existing levels of bursary provision have been taken into account in allocating funds to each further education college.

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was paid late to the private sector for goods and services by his Department in 1995–96. [26148]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information on the percentage of bills paid late is currently in the process of being collected and collated for publication by the Department of Trade and Industry. The form in which statistical information is collected within The Scottish Office for this purpose does not allow an accurate assessment of the annual value of late payment, and such a figure could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what percentage of bills were paid late by his Department in 1995–96. [26121]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This information is being collated by the Department of Trade and Industry and will be published by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade before the summer recess.

Monofilament Nets

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what information he has evaluated on the incidence of bycatch of harbour porpoises in large mesh monofilament gill nets in reaching his decision on the use of such nets. [26485]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The likely impacts of various types of synthetic net were evaluated in reaching a decision on this matter.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many harbour porpoises have been killed in large mesh monofilament gill net fisheries (a) in the North sea and (b) in the Celtic sea in each of the last five years. [26486]

Mr. Robertson: Information is not available on which to estimate these numbers.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what advice he has received from (a) the Joint Nature Conservation Committee and (b) Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on the risk to harbour porpoises from large mesh bottom set monofilament gill nets. [26487]

Mr. Robertson: The JNCC expressed concern that the change might lead to an increase in the incidental capture of harbour porpoises. MAFF did not raise this matter.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the impact of his decision on the use of large mesh monofilament gill nets on the achievement the United Kingdom Government's commitment under the agreement on the conservation of small cetaceans of the Baltic and North seas to reduce the number of harbour porpoises caught in fishing nets. [26488]

Mr. Robertson: These nets should not pose any greater threat to cetaceans than other synthetic nets. This measure should not affect our obligations under that agreement.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Argyll and Bute (Mrs. Michie) on 6 March, Official Report, column 267, what are the arrangements for monitoring bycatches of marine mammals; and what assessment he has made of their effectiveness at (a) assessing the level of bycatches and (b) reducing bycatches where necessary. [26489]

Mr. Robertson: There are national arrangements for monitoring any bycatches involving fishermen reporting incidents on a voluntary basis. The effectiveness of the scheme is kept under review and additional scientific research has been commissioned to aid that process.

Beef (Safety)

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment his Department's medical advisers have made on the safety of British beef; if he will give guidance to local authorities on the suitability of British beef for catering in schools and other institutions; and if he will make a statement. [26286]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The Chief Medical Officer at the Scottish Office accepts the advice of the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee that, with the effective enforcement of current controls and the new measures now being introduced, any BSE-related risk from eating beef is likely to be extremely small, and that children are at no greater risk than adults. In a letter to doctors on 20 March, the Chief Medical Officer made clear his view that there is no reason why people should not continue to eat beef. The Scottish Office Education and Industry Department also wrote on 27 March to chief executives of local authorities, to directors of education and to other interested parties, including independent schools, conveying the advisory committee's advice and stressing the Government's view that there was no reason to advise that beef should be withdrawn from school meal menus.

Ambulance Service

Mr. McAllion: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make it his policy that the Scottish ambulance service shall continue to be run as an integrated and comprehensive service providing all patient services to all NHS trusts in Scotland. [26019]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The Scottish Ambulance Service NHS Trust will continue to provide accident and emergency ambulance services under contract to Health Boards in Scotland. Where an NHS trust decides to invite competitive tenders for the provision of non-emergency patient transport services, the Scottish Ambulance Service NHS Trust shall continue to run that service if it can demonstrate through the tendering process that it can deliver the standard demanded and offer the best value for money.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of bills were paid late by his Department in 1995–96. [26122]

Mr. Burt: This information is being collated by the Department of Trade and Industry and will be published by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade before the summer recess.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much was paid late to the private sector for goods and services by his Department in 1995–96. [26147]

Mr. Burt: The information is not held in the format requested.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, (1) what percentage of bills were paid late by the Church Commissioners in 1995–96; [26112]

(2) how much was paid late to the private sector by the Church Commissioners for goods and services in 1995–96. [26159]

Mr. Alison: It is the commissioners' policy to pay their suppliers within the agreed credit terms.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

School Testing

15. Mr. Lidington: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received about the programme of testing in schools. [25093]

Mr. Robin Squire: There has been an extremely high response to the Government's recent consultation paper on the future of national curriculum assessment and testing with over 2,000 responses received from schools and other organisations. We are currently analysing the replies before considering the next steps.

School Discipline

16. Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what measures she is taking to help schools enforce firm discipline. [25094]

Mr. Robin Squire: We are taking forward the package of measures which my right hon. Friend announced last September, through a programme of developmental projects, worth about £18 million over three years, to identify and promote best practice in managing pupil behaviour and through consideration of legislation to help bolster schools' authority.

Research Assessment Exercises

17. Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the effects of the most recent research assessment exercise. [25095]

Mr. Forth: An independent study for the higher education funding bodies is assessing the effect of recent research assessment exercises and will inform the process in future. We believe that competition for research funds and their selective allocation remains the best way of ensuring the most effective use of public money.

Student Finance

18. Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent discussions she has had with the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals regarding student finance. [25096]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend met representatives of the CVCP on 6 February to discuss a number of issues, including student finance.

School Standards

19. Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she last met representatives of the Office for Standards in Education to discuss standards in schools. [25097]

Mr. Robin Squire: Ministers and officials meet regularly with Her Majesty's Chief Inspector and Ofsted officials to discuss issues related to education standards in schools.

Female Employment

20. Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps she is taking with regard to the employment of women. [25098]

Mrs. Gillan: Our policies encourage economic growth, create jobs and provide opportunities for all in the labour market; there is a full range of measures to enhance the quality and quantity of women's participation in the work force.

Expelled Pupils

21. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children were expelled from maintained schools in 1995. [25099]

26. Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children at present she estimates are excluded from maintained schools. [25104]

Mr. Robin Squire: This information is not available centrally. The Department is collecting figures on permanent exclusion in the school year 1994–95, through the annual census returns sent to all schools in January. Data should be available by the early autumn.

University Funding

22. Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement about the level of funding for universities. [25100]

Mr. Forth: Total public expenditure on higher education in the UK is over £7 billion, some 20 per cent. of total education expenditure. The November 1995 Budget settlement confirmed the 1994 plans for higher education recurrent expenditure. Planned capital expenditure was reduced in line with capital provision in most other public expenditure programmes, reflecting the policy that capital should, wherever possible, be financed through private finance schemes.

Economic Activity

23. Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals she has for increasing economic activity rates among males of working age. [25101]

Mr. Forth: We will continue with the policies which have seen the economy grow for over three years, the number of men in jobs rise by over 100,000 over the last year and unemployment among men fall by over 600,000 since recovery began.

Special Needs

24. Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of the education budget is spent on pupils with special needs; and if she will make a statement. [25102]

Mrs. Gillan: It is not possible to disaggregate expenditure on all pupils with special needs. Expenditure on pupils with statements of special educational need by local education authorities in England was 6.5 per cent. of their total net recurrent expenditure on education, excluding mandatory awards, in 1994–95, the latest year for which figures are available.

31. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of the training budget is notionally allocated for special needs training. [25110]

Mrs. Gillan: The 1996–97 training for work budget for England includes funding for residential training centres and pre-vocational pilots, both of which are for special needs training. These elements represent, respectively, 4 per cent. and 5 per cent. of the total training for work budget. In addition, the funding arrangements of both youth training and training for work are designed to ensure that special needs are supported through the mainstream programmes.

Rural Training and Job Opportunities

25. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what recent evaluation her Department has made of the training and job opportunities available for young people in rural areas; and if she will make a statement. [25103]

Mr. Paice: Our training and job opportunities are evaluated as a matter of course. Unemployed young people in rural areas, as elsewhere, have available to them the full range of the Department's training and job opportunities.

Employment Creation

27. Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in which member states of the European Union more jobs have been created than in the United Kingdom since 1990. [25105]

Mr. Forth: There has been a widespread fall in the number of jobs in European Union countries since 1990. Only Belgium, Greece, Ireland, Luxembourg, the Netherlands and Austria have seen net increases over that period. In the UK, employment fell in the early 1990s but has since recovered quickly, and over the last three years more jobs have been created in the UK than in all other major European countries put together.

33. Mr. Butler: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the effectiveness of policies in creating jobs in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) other EU countries. [25112]

Mr. Forth: The UK, which has the most flexible and deregulated labour market in Europe, also has a higher proportion of the adult population in work, and a lower unemployment rate, than any other major EU country. Between 1983 and 1992, the UK created over 2 million jobs, more than France and Italy combined.

State Education

28. Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what further action she intends to take to improve the quality and standard of state education. [25106]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Government's plans further to improve the quality and standard of state education include publishing primary school tables based on the national curriculum assessment results of 11-year-olds; funding 13 literacy and 12 numeracy centres in local education authorities, starting in September 1996; and working closely with the Teacher Training Agency, in co-operation with the Office for Standards in Education, to review the current arrangements for teacher appraisal.

Unemployment

29. Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received on unemployment in Maryport in the last month. [25107]

34. Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Educationa and Employment what recent representations she has received on the level of unemployment in the Nottingham, East constituency. [25114]

Mr. Forth: None.

Construction Industry

30. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when he next expects to meet chairmen of training and enterprise councils and local enterprise companies to discuss training in the construction industry. [25109]

Mr. Paice: My right hon. Friend and I regularly meet training and enterprise council representatives to discuss a wide range of topics, including training across different sectors.

International Labour Standards

32. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she next plans to meet her European counterparts to discuss international labour standards. [25111]

Mr. Forth: International labour standards formed part of discussions at the recent Group of Seven jobs conference at Lille on 1 and 2 April 1996. My right hon. Friend has no immediate plans for further discussions on this issue.

Youth Training

35. Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proposals she has to extend training opportunities for unemployed 18 to 25-year-olds. [25115]

Mr. Paice: The Department will continue to offer and support a wide range of opportunities for unemployed 18 to 25-year-olds.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many trainees left the youth training scheme for employment in the last year for which figures are available. [25076]

Mr. Paice: In 1994–95, the latest year for which figures are available, 72 per cent. of those completing youth training were in employment six months later.

Access to Work Scheme

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if self-employed people will be required to make a personal contribution toward the funding of personal support they receive through the access to work programme. [25779]

Mr. Paice: As my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State said in her announcement on 26 March, Official Report, columns 489–91, we are considering this issue further.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will publish a comprehensive report on the nursery voucher trials in the four areas concerned. [26421]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department will make available its evaluation of the operational arrangements for the first phase of the nursery education voucher scheme, in time to make any necessary changes before the implementation of phase 2 in April 1997, and is considering plans for further evaluation of the first phase. Inspections of private and voluntary sector providers are expected to begin in the autumn, leading to an accumulating body of published inspection evidence.

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the cost of funding nursery vouchers in the trial areas of Wandsworth, Westminster, Kensington and Chelsea; and how many places have been offered in those local education authorities for (a) three-and-a-half-year-old and (b) four-year-old children. [26443]

Mr. Squire: The estimated cost of providing a nursery education voucher worth £1,100 for every four-year-old in the London local education authorities participating in phase 1 of the scheme is £7.5 million.

In January 1995 an estimated 4,500 four-year-olds were being educated in the maintained sector in those LEAs. Information on the number of places offered to three-and-a-half-year-olds is not held centrally.

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the impact of the nursery voucher scheme on the calculation of the standard spending assessment for Solihull council. [26420]

Mr. Squire: The nursery education voucher scheme has no impact on the calculation of Solihull's standard spending assessments in 1996–97. In calculating SSAs for 1997–98 it is proposed to reduce each LEA's SSA by the product of the voucher value and the number of four-year-olds in maintained provision in 1995–96, allowing for termly variations in attendance. This implies that each LEA, taking into account both SSA and grant paid under the voucher scheme, will have the same funding as they would have received had the scheme not been introduced, provided the schools they maintain continue to recruit four-year-olds at present levels. The views of local government as a whole on the funding methodology for 1997–98 will be taken into account in the usual way.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the impact of the nursery voucher scheme on the nursery places provided by local authorities in the pilot areas; and if she will make a statement. [25309]

Mr. Squire: The impact of the nursery education voucher scheme on the provision of places will become clear once the vouchers returned from providers have been analysed.

I have every confidence that, over time, expansion will take place across all sectors.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if, for each of the education authority areas operating the scheme for vouchers for pre-school education, she will state, (a) the number of pupils eligible for vouchers (i) in nursery classes in primary schools and (ii) all others, (b) the number of voucher holders issued with vouchers and (c) the total number of places available and those in (1) nursery classes in primary schools, (2) nursery schools maintained by local education authorities, (3) provision by voluntary organisations and (4) private fee-paying provision. [25518]

Mr. Squire: Estimates of the four-year-old population and the number of four-year-olds in maintained provision in January 1995 in the four local education authorities participating in phase 1 of the nursery education voucher scheme are given in the following table. These estimates are, however, less reliable when broken down by both year group and local education authority area. The table also shows the number of vouchers issued in each area accounting, overall, for over 80 per cent. of the estimated population.

Estimates are not held centrally for four-year-old pupils by type of maintained provision, nor for places in the private and voluntary sectors.

LEA	Total four-year-olds in January 1995	Four-year-olds in maintained provision at January 1995	Number of vouchers issued
Kensington and Chelsea	1,650	800	938
Wandsworth	3,300	2,600	2,831
Westminster	1,900	1,110	1,170
Norfolk	9,300	6,300	8,507

School Maintenance

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many school inspection reports since 1993 have drawn attention to inadequate maintenance. [26310]

Mr. Robin Squire: This is a matter for Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools, who heads the Office for Standards in Education. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

Education and Training

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the value of (a) education for life and (b) training for employment. [25351]

Mr. Robin Squire: General education and job-related skills are valuable both to individuals and to our international competitiveness. They are both essential if individuals are to take full advantage of their opportunities in life, and not least to be able to earn a living. Research has shown that educational qualifications reduce the likelihood of unemployment and are associated with increased earnings.

Opportunity 2000

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list those companies and Government Departments that are members of Opportunity 2000. [26467]

Mrs. Gillan: Opportunity 2000 is an independent, employer-led body. The following Government Departments and agencies are members: the Benefits Agency, Cabinet Office, Charity Commission, Civil Service College, Contributions Agency, Crown Prosecution Service, Department for Education and Employment, Department for National Savings, Department of the Environment, Department of Health, Department of Social Security, Department of Trade and Industry, Department of Transport, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, HM Customs and Excise, HM Prison Service, HM Treasury, Home Office, Inland Revenue, Lord Chancellor's Department, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, Ministry of Defence, Northern Ireland civil service, Overseas Development Administration, Patent Office, Scottish Office, Serious Fraud Office and Welsh Office. A full list of members can be obtained from Opportunity 2000, 44 Baker street, London W1M 1DH.

Investors in People

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many firms with fewer than (a) 100 employees, (b) 50 employees, (c) 20 employees, and (d) 10 employees and (e) in total (i) achieved and (ii) participated in Investors in People in each year since the scheme began. [26106]

Mr. Paice: At 29 February 1996, a total of 18,191 employers in the UK were committed to achieving the Investors in People standard and 3,305 are recognised as having achieved the standard.

A statistical breakdown is provided in the following table:

Investors in People commitments and recognitions

Number of employees	<100	<50	<20	<10	Total
December 1991
Commitments	91	63	41	19	199

Recognitions	1,978	1,422	779	365	3,194

1. The 'total' figure relates to employers of all sizes.
2. All figures are cumulative.

Careers Service Companies and TECs

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if (i) careers service companies and (ii) training and enterprise councils are subject to (a) investigation by the Parliamentary Commissioner, (b) scrutiny by the Audit Commission, (c) scrutiny by the National Audit Office, (d) statutory provisions for open government, (e) performance indicators and (f) provisions under the citizens charter. [25971]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 22 April 1996]: Careers service companies and training and enterprise councils are private companies and are not subject to investigation by the Parliamentary Commissioner.

Careers service companies and TECs are not subject to scrutiny by the Audit Commission. This function is carried out by the National Audit Office, which has access to careers service companies and TECs for the purpose of any examination of the economy, efficiency and effectiveness with which Government Departments have used resources.

Government contracts with careers service companies and TECs require them to comply with the Government's code of practice on open government. The Department publishes a series of indicators annually for each TEC, the inter-TEC comparison tables, covering performance in the main programme activities under contract with TECs. Performance indicators also form part of the criteria for TECs achieving a three-year licence. It is our intention to publish performance indicators for careers service companies in autumn 1997.

Government's contracts with careers service companies and TECs, and the TEC National Council's framework for local accountability set out principles for openness, integrity and accountability which are features of the citizens charter. TECs and careers service companies can apply for the charter mark award if they wish.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what (a) annual reports, (b) annual accounts, (c) minutes of meetings, (d) agendas of meetings and (e) registers of members' interests are published by training and enterprise councils; and if in each case this is under statutory requirement. [25967]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 22 April 1996]: Training and enterprise councils are private companies and are required by the Companies Act to produce annual accounts which are lodged with Companies House. The Government contract with TECs requires that they publish an annual report and audited statement of accounts. The contract also requires TECs to pay due regard to the TEC National Council's framework of local accountability, which expects TECs to make their register of interests available for public inspection,. The publication of board papers is a matter for each company.

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of bills were paid late by her Department in 1995–96. [26128]

Mr. Robin Squire: This information is being collated by the Department of Trade and Industry and will be published by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade before the summer recess.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much was paid late to the private sector by her Department for goods and services in 1995–96. [26157]

Mr. Squire: The information required could be provided only at disproportionate cost to the Department. The Department does not maintain this information in the form requested.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many appointments to the public bodies listed in "Public Bodies" for her Department were made during 1994–95 from names supplied by the public appointments unit; and if she will list them. [25955]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 22 April 1996]: There were 70 such appointments or reappointments. However, no central record was maintained of the sources of names of appointees. In some cases they may have been nominated from more than one source, including the public appointments unit.

Science and Mathematics Graduates

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students graduating in physics, chemistry and mathematics have applied for courses leading to a teaching qualification during 1996–97; and what were the equivalent figures in (a) 1994–95 and (b) 1995–96. [25077]

Mrs. Gillian Shephard: The total number of applications received for post-graduate certificate of education courses in mathematics, physics, chemistry and combined science starting in 1995 was around 4,600; about 5,000 applications were received for courses starting in 1994. Applications are still being received for courses starting in 1996, with around 2,400 applications received up to 3 April.

Educational Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what (a) was the gross public spending for each year since 1990–91, in 1995–96 prices and (b) is the projected expenditure for each year to 1997–98, in 1995–96 prices, of (i) grant-maintained schools, (ii) city training colleges, (iii) further education corporations, (iv) higher education corporations, (v) careers service companies and (vi) training and enterprise councils. [25978]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The figures requested are set out in the following table:

Figures at 1995–96 £ million

	1990–91 Outturn	1991–92 Outturn	1992–93 Outturn	1993–94 Outturn	1994–95 Outturn	1995–96 estimated Outturn	1996–97 Outturn	1997–98 Plans

[2] Provision for 1992–93 included grants by the council to institutions in connection with their preparation for independent status.

[3] Figures for 1993–94 onwards are for funding for the Higher Education Funding Council for England (HEFCE). Figures for 1990–91 to 1992–93 are for funding of the universities and the polytechnics and colleges funding councils: these figures include Scottish and Welsh universities, but exclude the Open university, Cranfield institution of technology and Royal College of Art which became the responsibility of the HEFCE from 1993–94. Figures exclude income from tuition fees and student support.

[4] From 1994–95 figures show direct expenditure by the Department. Until 1994, the careers service was funded by local authorities.

[5] The TEC network was established nationally in 1991–92. The figures cover the Department's programmes which TECs deliver currently and include the TEC management fee. TECs also deliver Department of Trade and Industry and Department of the Environment initiatives. Expenditure figures exclude programmes transferred to the DTI, e.g. the small firms budgets, and to the DOE, e.g. the single regeneration budget. They also exclude further education funds transferred from TECs to FEFC. Figures exclude payments not channelled through TECs, e.g. allowances for trainees on training for work.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what (a) annual reports, (b) annual accounts, (c) minutes of meetings, (d) agendas of meetings and (e) registers of members' interests are published by (i) city technology colleges, (ii) further education corporations, (iii) higher education corporations and (iv) grant-maintained schools; and in each case if it is a statutory requirement. [25965]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The information requested is shown in the following table:

[9] Per financial memorandum.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if (i) grant-maintained schools, (ii) city technology colleges, (iii) further education corporations and (iv) higher education corporations are subject to (a) investigation by the Parliamentary Commissioner, (b) scrutiny by the Audit Commission, (c) scrutiny by the National Audit Office, (d) statutory provisions for open government, (e) performance indicators and (9) provisions under the citizen's charter. [25972]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 22 April 1996]: the information requested is shown in the following table:

	Investigation by the Parliamentary Commissioner (a)	Scrutiny by the Audit Commission (b)	Scrutiny by the National Audit Office (c)	Statutory provisions for open government. (d)	Performance indicators (e)	Provisions under the Citizen's Charter (f)

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. Spink: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the slaughterhouse support measures announced on 16 April, Official Report, columns 513–29, include assistance for cutting, boning, defatting and packing operations; and if he will make a statement. [25724]

Mrs. Browning: Wholesale businesses involved in cutting, boning, defatting and packing meat are licensed as cutting premises under the Fresh Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) Regulations 1995 as amended. Under the emergency aid scheme for the slaughtering industry announced by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 16 April, Official Report, columns 513–29, the Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce will purchase stocks of unsaleable beef from licensed cuttings premises at 65 per cent. of their pre-crisis market price, and will arrange for their secure disposal.

Dr. Spink: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the objectives of the Coopers and Lybrand phase 2 study into beef production, processing and distribution; if that study will address whether assistance should be made available for the processing and distribution industries and for those who hold processed frozen-down beef stocks; and if he will make a statement. [25723]

Mrs. Browning: Coopers and Lybrand has been commissioned to report to the Agriculture Departments on how much unsaleable beef from UK herds slaughtered in the UK—over and above that identified in the slaughtering and cutting plant stock survey of 9 April 1996—is still in the supply chain. It is asked to:

identify the volume and location of such beef;

identify any financial, operational, legal and tax issues which may cause complications in the removal of unsaleable beef from the supply chain;

in consultation with Government Departments, and taking account of measures already announced, develop a scheme for the removal and disposal of such unsaleable stock.

In his statement of 16 April my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food noted that the support announced for the slaughtering sector was based on the particular circumstances and role of that sector. The Government therefore did not consider that equivalent assistance should be paid to other sectors.

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the operators of abattoirs and meat processing plants, hauliers and others associated with the beef trade will be granted compensation in proportion to lost income resulting from recent developments in relation to BSE. [25606]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to the statement made by my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 16 April, Official Report, columns 513–29, in which he outlined a comprehensive system of support for the essential links in the beef supply chain, in particular the rendering and slaughtering sectors. The purpose of the temporary financial aid for these sectors is to provide a breathing space during which companies can adjust to the changed market circumstances, not to provide compensation for loss of income.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of BSE have been recorded in the Dexter breed. [25943]

Mrs. Browning: None.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to extend the 30 months age limit for entry into the food chain to 36 months in respect of extensively produced beef. [26136]

Mrs. Browning: Officials are working on a scheme under which animals which can safely be identified as low risk my be sold for human consumption. Such a scheme could operate irrespective of the age of the animal. We will consult the industry on a scheme shortly.

Miss Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what financial assistance will be made available to those in the animal feed industry for local authority charges incurred in the disposal of meat and bone meal products. [26135]

Mrs. Browning: Residual feedingstuffs may be disposed of either by incineration or by landfill at a suitable site. Only limited resources are available to deal with the very wide ranging consequences of the measures that have been introduced to prevent the continued transmission of BSE. I do not, therefore, propose offering financial assistance for local authority charges incurred by those in the animal feed industry in disposing of meat and bone meal products.

Mr. Gale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce a ban on the importing of beef and veal from (a) EU and (b) other countries in which there has been a reported case of BSE; and if he will make a statement. [26589]

Mrs. Browning: The prohibition on meat from animals aged over 30 months of age applies equally to imports as well as domestic consumption. The only exception to this is meat from a named list of third countries which have never had a case of BSE. Third countries which have had cases of BSE and all member states are covered by the 30-month rule.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research is being funded by his Department into a live test for BSE based on DNA within cattle; and if he will make a statement. [23370]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: No such research is under way, as BSE is not a genetically inherited disease, nor are changes to the DNA structure and sequence known to be associated with the development of the disease.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department carried out into Professor Harash Narang's test for BSE in live cattle; and what were the results. [23228]

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what conclusion was reached by his Department on the efficacy of the live test for BSE in cattle developed by Harash Narang; when the test was evaluated; and if he will make a statement. [23354]

Mrs. Browning [holding answers 28 and 29 March 1996]: MAFF is aware of reports in the media that Dr. Narang is working to develop a test to detect BSE in live cattle. No details of such a test have been published in an independent, peer reviewed scientific journal, the usual way for validating such claims. The Department has also asked Dr. Narang for details of his test so that its efficacy and usefulness can be evaluated; he has so far refused to provide any details.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what changes took place, and when, to enable cattle feed containing animal offal to be fed to cattle; when the manufacturers were allowed to lower the temperature at which cattle feed was processed; when Ministers banned beef offal from (a) animal feed and (b) the human food chain, and what were the reasons for the difference in time between (a) and (b); and which Ministers were responsible for decisions relating to these changes. [23434]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 1 April 1996]: The processing of offals, and the subsequent use of one by product, meat and bone meal has evolved over a period of many years. It had been a standard practice within the industry to feed bovine animals with feed supplements containing meat and bonemeal derived from ruminants. The contamination of ruminant feed in the early 1980s which led to the BSE epidemic was not the result of any regulatory changes introduced by the Government. A number of changes to the rendering process were introduced for commercial reasons. These changes included a reduction in the time/temperature combination of rendering and also the elimination of an organic extraction step. This last measure was removed primarily for health and safety reasons. There were no changes to the regulations governing these aspects of rendering at that time.

The feeding of ruminant protein to ruminants was prohibited on 18 July 1988.

The Bovine Offals (Prohibition) Regulations, which forbade the use of certain specified bovine offals or anything prepared from them in human food, came into force in November 1989. In September 1990, following the experimental transmission of BSE by intracerebral injection to pigs, the prohibition was widened to prevent the use of SBOs, or protein derived from them, in food for any animal.

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, the Under-Secretary of State for Wales and the Under-Secretary of State for Scotland were responsible for the implementation and subsequent amendment of the controls on specified bovine offals.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the dates of birth, by month and year, of the 10 youngest cattle to have been confirmed as BSE sufferers. [26333]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer on 23 April 1996]: The dates of birth of the 10 youngest cattle, including estimated ages, to have been confirmed as BSE sufferers are as follows:

Autumn 1986

January 1987

November 1987

Autumn 1987 (3 cases)

May 1988

November 1988

June 1989

October 1990.

Horticultural Research

Mrs. Golding: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much his Department has spent on research in horticulture in each year since 1986. [26211]

Mr. Boswell: The Department's expenditure on research in horticulture for each financial year from 1987–88 is:

1987–88: £17.2 million

1988–89: £17.9 million

1989–90: £17.5 million

1990–91: £13.3 million

1991–92: £10.5[1] million

1992–93: £11.1[1] million

1993–94: £11.4[1] million

1994–95: £13.4 million

1995–96: £13.6 million.

[1] Excludes some work on pesticides for horticultural crops.

A figure for 1986–87 is not available.

Food Additives

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the mutagenic and carcinogenic qualities of (i) E233 Thiabendazol, (ii) E231, (iii) E904 and (iv) E914. [26164]

Mrs. Browning: My Department has not funded any research on mutagenicity and carcinogenicity in relation to these substances.

However, each of them has been evaluated by the Department of Health Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, Consumer Products and the Environment, and the EU Scientific Committee for Food and classified as safe for use in food.

Small Farmers (Financial Assistance)

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions are being held with the Department of Social Security to provide assistance for small farmers whose sole source of income is from sales of cattle at local markets and who are ineligible for family credit, unemployment benefit and income support. [26130]

Mrs. Browning: No formal discussions have taken place between MAFF and DSS on the payment of benefits to small farmers whose income is dependent on the sale of cattle. A range of in work benefits is available to people, including small farmers, on low incomes. Eligibility will be dependent on the individual's specific circumstances. Farmers who think they might qualify should make inquiries at their local Benefits Agency office and apply in the usual way.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of funding to be made available to his Department through the private finance initiative in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26178]

Mr. Boswell: The estimate of funding to be made available through the private finance initiative is currently:

1995–96: nil

1996–97: £10 million

1997–98: £20 million.

Meat and Livestock Imports

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what import restrictions he plans to (a) introduce and (b) maintain on (i) live imports and (ii) meat products entering the United Kingdom to ensure that they are subject to the same regulations as United Kingdom animals. [26132]

Mrs. Browning: The importation of live animals into the United Kingdom is subject to rules laid down in existing statutory instruments. Additional control measures are added periodically to the Animals and Animal Products (Import and Export) Regulations 1995 and the Animals and Animal Products (Import and Export) Regulations (Northern Ireland) 1995 to implement new harmonised EC legislation. There are no plans for the United Kingdom to introduce any unilateral import restrictions.

As regards meat products, the Beef (Emergency Control) Order 1996, as amended, which came into force on 29 March, prohibits the sale of all bovine meat derived from bovines which, at the time of slaughter, showed more than one pair of permanent incisors unless it can be shown by reference to a national administrative document—in effect, a cattle identification document—that the animal was no more than 30 months old. This new measure, applies to all bovines slaughtered after the commencement of the order, other than those slaughtered in third countries listed in the schedule to the No. 2 amendment order where the Government are satisfied that we can import beef without risk.

These controls are being kept under review in the light of further progress with the package of measures currently under discussion by the Council of Agriculture Ministers.

Protection of Animals at Slaughter

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when Her Majesty's Government plans to ratify the European convention for the protection of animals at slaughter; and if he will make a statement. [26240]

Mrs. Browning: Council directive 93/119/EC on the protection of animals at the time of slaughter or killing takes account of the European convention for the protection of animals at slaughter. The Welfare of Animals (Slaughter or Killing) Regulations 1995, which apply in Great Britain, implement that Community directive.

Parallel legislation is being prepared in Northern Ireland and should be implemented during this year. When this legislation is in place, it is the Government's intention to ratify the European convention on behalf of the United Kingdom.

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what percentage of bills were paid late by his Department in 1995–96. [26109]

Mr. Boswell: This information is being collated by the Department of Trade and Industry and will be published by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade before the summer recess.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much was paid late to the private sector by his Department for goods and services in 1995–96. [26161]

Mr. Boswell: The information requested is not readily available and could not be produced without disproportionate cost. MAFF aims to pay all invoices within 30 days of the receipt or in accordance with terms agreed with suppliers.

Cats and Dogs

Mr. Key: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the special provisions for the United Kingdom and Ireland in the Balai directive regarding the import of traded cats and dogs were based on the recommendations of the Scientific Veterinary Committee in paper VI/1533/92-EN-REI-1.; and if he will make a statement. [26337]

Mrs. Browning: The rabies provisions of the Balai directive—EC directive 92/65—including those provisions for the movement of traded dogs and cats into the UK and Ireland from other member states, we agreed taking into account the Scientific Veterinary Committee report VI/1533/92-EN-Rev.1. Although not identical to the recommendations in this report, these provisions represent the safeguards the Council of Ministers agreed were necessary to reduce the risks that it identified.

Mink Farms

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many licensed mink farms there are currently in the United Kingdom. [26468]

Mrs. Browning: At 31 March 1996 there were 12 licensed mink farms in England. This Department is not responsible for mink farm licensing in the other parts of the United Kingdom.

Chocolate Directive

Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress the Commission has made in formulating proposals to amend the 1973 chocolate directive; and if he will make a statement. [27010]

Mrs. Browning: I understand the Commission has agreed proposals to amend the 1973 chocolate directive. These would allow all countries to authorise the addition of small amounts of vegetable fat, should they wish to do so, require the use of such fats to be separately labelled, allow the continued manufacture of a high milk formulation of milk chocolate in the UK and Ireland, but require designation of such chocolate as "household milk chocolate" when marketed in other member states.

The Government welcomes the emphasis given in these proposals to subsidiarity and coherence of the single market but are disappointed by the proposals for double labelling of vegetable fats and the continued pejorative description of some types of high quality milk chocolate. We shall seek changes in those parts of the proposal which seek to discriminate against British products, stifle innovation, limit consumer choice or impose undue regulatory burdens on industry.

EU Fisheries Council

Mr. Duncan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Fisheries Council held in Brussels on Monday 22 April; and if he will make a statement. [26748]

Mr. Baldry: I represented the United Kingdom at the meeting of the Fisheries Council in Brussels on 22 April, together with the Under-Secretary of State for Scotland, my hon. Friend the Member for Aberdeen, South (Mr. Robertson).

I emphasised the importance of securing a satisfactory solution to the problem of quota hoppers. In many cases, these vessels have very little economic link with the UK and other countries where they are found. I explained that this is a problem which must be solved as a priority.

I explained the United Kingdom's ideas for the creation of regional consultative committees. These would increase the regional input into the common fisheries policy by bringing together fisherman and officials from member states active in particular fisheries. They would provide a forum to discuss any issue of regional relevance—for example, technical conservation measures or the state of the stocks. In response, the Commissioner emphasised her concern to secure greater regional inputs from the fishing industry. She undertook to build on these and to establish a pilot committee to test the idea.

I drew attention to the magnitude of the industrial fisheries in the North sea urging a cautious approach to their management. In particular, I called for the introduction of a precautionary total allowable catch for sand eels and for a greater collaborative research effort on the multi-species interactions connected with industrial fisheries to increase our understanding of their impact on other species.

The Council unanimously agreed new measures to introduce greater flexibility in quota management and more systematic penalties for quota overshoots. The flexibility provisions have been limited to take account of concerns expressed both by fishermen and environmental organisations. They are optional at member state level. The Council and Commission agreed a UK suggestion that data on landings must be collected and presented on a consistent basis throughout the Community before the new penalties for overfishing apply.

The Council agreed by qualified majority, with Belgium, France and Ireland voting against, a compromise on the opening of certain autonomous tariff quotas for the import of fish and fishery products balancing the interests of processors with those of the catching sector.

The Council unanimously agreed a 1996 total allowable catch of 150,000 tonnes for the expanding Atlanto-Scandian herring stock in waters north of Shetland. This provides a welcome additional fishing opportunity for the UK fleet.

The Commission gave a progress report on its preparatory work for the next series of multi-annual guidance programmes. Scientific advice demonstrated a clear case for further measures to reduce overfishing, but an extensive consultation exercise with fishing interests throughout the Community confirmed the underlying economic difficulties which the sector continued to face. The Council will take up these issues in more detail at its next meeting in June.

I welcomed a report by the Commission on enforcement activity by member states and called for early action to achieve more consistent standards of enforcement.

My hon. Friend the Under-Secretary reported to the Council on the outcome of bilateral discussions with Norway about the continued weakness in the European farmed salmon market and stressed the need for the Commission to keep the position under close review.

Poultry

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many broiler chickens slaughtered in the United Kingdom were rejected in the last six months of 1995 and to date in 1996 as being unfit for human consumption; what were the public health considerations leading to such rejections; and if he will make a statement; [26102]

(2) how many chickens were dead on arrival at United Kingdom poultry slaughterhouses in the first six months of 1995 and to date in 1996; and if he will make a statement; [26103]

(3) when the national Meat Hygiene Service commissioned a welfare audit in 1995; what were the results of that audit; and if he will make a statement.[26104]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 23 April 1996]: I have asked the chief executive of the Meat Hygiene Service to reply to the hon. Member direct.

Letter from Johnston McNeill to Mr. Elliot Morley, dated 24 April 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) your questions concerning the number of broiler chickens rejected at slaughter, the number of chickens dead on arrival at slaughterhouses and the results of the MHS's welfare audit have been passed for me for reply [26102, 26103 & 26104].

The Meat Hygiene Service was launched on 1 April 1995 as an Executive Agency of MAFF. It took over from some 300 local authorities responsibility for enforcement of the hygiene and welfare at slaughter legislation in licensed meat premises in England, Scotland and Wales.

According to MHS data, 5,855,611 broiler chickens slaughtered in Great Britain in the last six months of 1995 and to date in 1996 were rejected as being unfit of human consumption. Considering a total throughput of broiler chickens of around 483 million for the same period, this represents 1.2% thereof. Poultry meat may not be sold for human consumption unless it meets the conditions laid down in the Poultry Meat, Farmed Game Bird Meat and Rabbit Meat (Hygiene and Inspection) Regulations 1995. These Regulations require, notably, fresh poultry meat to have been obtained from a licensed premise, been subject to pre-slaughter and post-mortem health inspections and show no sign of disease.

The number of chickens (broilers and hens) which were dead on arrival at slaughterhouses in Great Britain in the last six months of 1995 and to date in 1996 is 1,227,284.

The report of the animal welfare audit carried out by the MHS has now been finalised. A copy has been placed in the Library today.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in what circumstances ensiled poultry litter can be fed to (a) poultry and (b) other farm animals; and if he will make a statement. [26105]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 23 April 1996]: It is illegal under regulation 15(11) of the Feedingstuffs Regulations 1995 to sell or use as a compound feed any material which contains faeces or urine, irrespective of any form of treatment or admixture.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Kenya

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what discussions he has had with the Kenyan Government on refugees now living in that country; and what assistance is being made available for the welfare and health care of such refugees. [26308]

Mr. Hanley: Such topics are part of our normal ongoing bilateral discussions with the Government of Kenya. Our 1995–96 assistance to refugees in Kenya included £500,000 via the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees and nearly £83,000 through Christian Aid and CARE.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 25 April. [25311]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has received regarding the manner in which the licensing authority handled the matter relating to oral contraceptives containing desogestrel or gestodene. [26577]

The Prime Minister: I have received a small number of letters from doctors and members of the public in relation to this matter.

SCOTLAND

Sustainable Development

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to publish the reports of his advisory group on sustainable development. [25839]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 23 April 1996]: My right hon. Friend expects to publish a report on progress in sustainable development in Scotland later this year which will include an outline of the activities of his advisory group on sustainable development. He has no plans to publish the advice he receives from the group.

Forest Enterprise Agency

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he has taken to ensure that the environmental targets established for the Forest Enterprise agency will not be compromised by actions taken to meet financial objectives and targets; and if he will make a statement. [26208]

Mr. Kynoch: The framework document for the Forest Enterprise agency sets out its environmental, financial and other objectives. Progress will be monitored against the performance measures which are also listed in the framework document.

Woodlands

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has for encouraging the improvement of Britain's woodlands. [27106]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I am pleased to announce that the Forestry Commission will be giving support, under the woodland improvement grant, to two further projects aimed at improving Britain's woodlands.

The woodland improvement grant was launched in 1995 as part of the woodland grant scheme. That first project is helping to provide for public access to woodlands and will run for a further two years. The woodland improvement grant will now also be available to improve the management of poor-quality woods and for work to enhance the biodiversity of woodlands.

In the rural White Papers, we recognised the importance of bringing woods back into productive management. Now we can support landowners who wish to do restorative work in poor quality woodlands to return these areas to sustainable management. Many aspects of work will receive funding, including uneconomic felling, respacing, rhododendron control and protective work.

Woodland improvement grant funds will also be available to help Britain's ancient semi-natural woodlands and to support work in woodlands to conserve rare species such as red squirrel, dormouse, capercaillie and various bats and butterflies. These are some of the most important habitats and threatened species identified in "Biodiversity, the UK Action Plan" which the Government published following on from the Rio and Helsinki conferences. We expect woodland improvement grant to grant aid work identified in agreed management plans, for example coppice management for rare butterflies and dormice, fence removal for capercaillie and the conservation of native woodlands in national parks and priority areas in Scotland.

Within these two umbrella projects, we expect to see local partnerships develop which not only means that resources are used more effectively but allows such groups to come together and work towards one cause. Woodland improvement grant will normally fund around half the cost of the work but, subject to approval by the European Commission, we expect a number of local projects to be run as challenge funding where owners have the opportunity to compete for the available funds.

Further information for those wishing to apply for these new grants is available from the Forestry Commission.

Fisheries Protection Agency

Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about performance targets for the Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency for 1996–97. [27108]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: For the financial year 1996–97 I have set the following targets:

Aerial surveillance—per cent. of hours flown on task: 85 per cent.

Aerial surveillance—cost per aircraft sighting: £88

Marine surveillance—number of boardings at sea: 2,600

Marine surveillance—cost per boarding: £2,590

—utilisation of effective patrol days: 96 per cent.

Sea Fisheries Inspectorate—cost per logsheet check: £64

75 per cent. of cases for prosecution to be reported within six weeks of offence being detected and 90 per cent. within eight weeks

Number of cases where court proceedings are taken as percentage of offences reported to prosecuting authorities: 75 per cent.

In order to ensure that the Scottish Fisheries Protection Agency uses its resources efficiently, I have set it a target to achieve cash releasing efficiency gains of 2 per cent. during 1996–97.

The chief executive will be directly accountable to me for the achievement of these targets, which will be reported in the agency's annual report.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Royal Observatories

Mr. Waterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has received the report of the review of the Royal Observatories; and if he will make a statement. [26724]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I have received the report of the review steering committee chaired by Professor Ian Halliday of the university of Wales, Swansea. Its central recommendation is that the management of United Kingdom telescopes and the delivery of the instrumentation programme currently provided by the Royal Observatories should be subject to competitive tendering by all competent suppliers. I have accepted in full the review's conclusions and recommendations, which have been endorsed by the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council. I have asked PPARC to take forward implementation of the recommendations. I have today published the review steering committee's advice to me and have placed a copy in the Library of the House.

Manufacturing Industry

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the United Kingdom share of world trade in manufacturing exports for each year since 1979 (a) by volume and (b) by value. [24781]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 16 April 1996]: The data requested is set out in the table, based on estimates derived from OECD data.

UK value and volume shares of world exports of manufactured goods 1979–94

Year	Volume share Per cent.	Value share Per cent.
1979	6.9	6.7
1980	6.7	7.1
1981	6.1	6.2
1982	6.2	6.1
1983	5.9	5.6
1984	5.8	5.3
1985	5.9	5.5
1986	5.9	5.4
1987	6.0	5.6
1988	5.8	5.7
1989	5.8	5.6
1990	6.0	5.9
1991	5.8	5.8
1992	5.7	5.6
1993	5.5	5.3
1994	5.5	5.4

Departmental Code of Practice

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what codes of practice operate in his Department to ensure that (a) individuals advising on financial assistance to companies and (b) those assenting to company applications on the DTI board do not themselves financially benefit from their decisions as, or subsequently to become, (i) directors and (ii) trading partners of the beneficiary companies; and if he will make a statement. [25301]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 18 April 1996]: The civil service code states that civil servants should not misuse their official position or information acquired in the course of their official duties to further their private interests or those of others. This general principle applies to full, part-time or fee-paid employment in business or other bodies outside the civil service or the establishment of a consultancy within two years of leaving crown employment. With regard to external advisers to the Department, I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 3 April 1996, Official Report, columns 313-14. Appointments to the Industrial Development Advisory Board and the regional industrial development boards are made in accordance with the Cabinet Office's guide to public appointments procedures which covers potential conflicts of interest. Registers of members' interests are also held. In this connection also, the Department is implementing the recommendations on regional industrial development boards referred to in its note on the collapse of ROM-Data, laid before Parliament in February.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the President of the Boards of Trade how many appointments to the public bodies listed in "Public Bodies" for his Department were made during 1994–95 from names supplied by the public appointments unit; and if he will list them. [25952]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 22 April 1996]: From 1 January 1994 to 31 December 1995, departmental records show that 13 appointments to nine separate public bodies were made from names supplied by the public appointments unit. A list of the appointments is as follows.

Nickel Dust

Mr. Hardy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what level of nickel dust will be released by combustion for the purposes of electricity generation; and if the figure exceeds the action levels determined by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution in 1995. [25627]

Mr. Page [holding answer 23 April 1996]: The vast majority of UK electricity generation arising from fossil fuels is based on coal or natural gas combustion. Nickel features as a trace element in coal, with a typical concentration of 20 ppm covering a range from 0.5 to 50 ppm, and is also present in fuel oil.

Nickel compounds, along with other trace elements which are released to air during electricity production, are generally associated with particulates. These are captured by particulate removal devices which, in large coal-fired generating plants, exhibit a typical removal efficiency greater than 99 per cent. Emission levels of nickel compounds arising from the combustion of fuel in power stations are not identified separately. Controls on these substances are applied indirectly through the regulation of particulate releases and there is little routine monitoring of such trace elements or reliable estimates of their release in the UK.

Preliminary estimates provided by the power generators to the Environment Agency indicate that release rates are in the range $9x10^{-3}$ to $4x10^{-2}$ grams per second—g/s—for coal-fired stations and to 3 to 5 g/s for oil–fired stations. These levels are greater than the "significant release rate" of $8x10^{-3}$ g/s proposed by Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Pollution in 1995. The "significant release rate" provides guidance to operators on the level of release above which the substance should be considered in any environmental assessment submitted as part of an application for authorisation under integrated pollution control. The "significant release rate" supersedes but performs the same function as the "Action Level" proposed by HMIP in a consultation guidance document on best practical environmental option—BPEO—assessment procedures in April 1994. Under typical operating conditions, releases of this magnitude might be expected to result in ambient air concentrations which are less than 2 per cent. of the environmental assessment level for nickel as an annual average.

In view of the preliminary nature of these estimates, the Environment Agency has asked the major operators to provide a written response by 1 October 1996 to demonstrate how reliable annual estimates are to be provided for a number of trace substances, including nickel compounds.

Inward Investment (Merseyside)

Mrs. Jane Kennedy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 5 March, Official Report, column 137, how many inward investment strategies for Merseyside have been produced by his Department since 1985. [26504]

Mr. John M. Taylor: No inward investment strategies for Merseyside have been developed since 1985, although a strategy is currently being developed with local partners.

Mrs. Kennedy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 5 March, Official Report, column 137, when he expects an inward investment strategy for Merseyside to be completed; and if he will publish that strategy. [26505]

Mr. Taylor: An outline strategy has been prepared involving all the relevant local agencies on Merseyside. It is set within the framework for inward investment support provided by the objective 1 single programming document. A decision on whether and when to publish the strategy will be taken by local partners in due course.

Patent Office

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the objectives of process re-engineering as applied to the Patent Office; and if he will make a statement. [26616]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The objective of process re-engineering is the more effective delivery of services. That is also the criterion by which any specific proposals are judged.

Single Market Programme

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many pieces of legislation have been enacted to implement the single market programme (a) in the United Kingdom as a whole, (b) in the United Kingdom affecting firms with fewer than 100 employees and (c) in each other EU country (i) as a whole and (ii) affecting firms with fewer than 100 employees. [26040]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 24 April 1996]: A table showing the number of measures in the Commission's 1985 White Paper on the single market transposed into national law by each member state as at December 1995 follows. The Department does not monitor the number of pieces of national legislation necessary to transpose the directives. The measures contained in the White Paper aim to benefit business generally and apply to all companies.

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of bills were paid late by his Department in 1995–96. [26110]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 24 April 1996]: This information is being collated by the Department and will be published by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade before the summer recess.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much was paid late to the private sector for goods and services by his Department in 1995–96.[26146]

Mr. Taylor [holding answer 24 April 1996]: This information is not held in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Coalfield Communities (Recreational Sites)

Mr. Hardy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he expects the discussions between his Department and British Coal in regard to the retention and safeguarding of recreational sites in coalfield communities to be included; and if he will make it his policy that the future of these sites be safeguarded. [26354]

Mr. Page: The Government's objective remains that British Coal land in active use for sport and recreation will be retained for those purposes. Discussions continue with British Coal and the Coal Industry Social Welfare Organisation as to how this can best be achieved. Those discussions will be concluded as soon as possible.

DEFENCE

Works of Art

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what was the cost to public funds of the three paintings depicting the Army in Bosnia; [20840]

(2) if he will make a statement on the procedures used within his Department to authorise the purchase of works of art with public funds; [20839]

(3) for what purposes his Department buy works of art; [20841]

(4) how many works of art have been purchased by his Department since 1979 using public funds. [20838]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Works of art are purchased to enhance the working environment or to represent an aspect of the history of the Department. The three paintings representing events in Bosnia were purchased for the departmental art collection in January 1995 at a cost of £6,556.50, including VAT. The purchase was made because it was considered that the collection should include paintings depicting the Army's important contribution in Bosnia.

Approval was given in the normal way within the civilian management area which is responsible for works of art. It complied with normal budgetary and accounting procedures.

Type 23 Frigates

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is his Department's estimate of the value of the equipment to be placed on the new type 23 frigates. [25780]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The estimated value of the major combat systems, including the command system, for the new type 23 frigates is about £115 million.

Married Quarters Estate

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many married quarters his Department currently possesses; how many of these are currently up for sale; and how many are currently unoccupied. [25778]

Mr. Arbuthnot: As at 31 December 1995—the latest date for which figures are available—the married quarters stock of the Ministry of Defence numbered 71,016. Of these, 14,396 were unoccupied. Those currently available for sale include 58,371 in England and Wales offered in the sale of the married quarters estate and approximately 4,000 other surplus properties being disposed of by the MOD directly.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many bids for the married quarters estate are (a) for the whole estate and (b) for selected parts. [25918]

Mr. Arbuthnot: All the indicative bids for the married quarters estate are for the whole of the estate for sale.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many units of housing (a) are currently being sold from the married quarters estate and (b) are the subject of sale negotiations. [25919]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We intend to transfer ownership of the majority of the married quarters estate in England and Wales to the private sector. In addition, 3,322 quarters are currently in the process of disposal, separately from the overall sale of the estate.

Admiralty Arch Residence

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he moved into a residence in Admiralty Arch; for how long he plans to retain the residence; how many rooms it possesses; if he is paying rent on it; and if he will make a statement. [25777]

Mr. Portillo: Like a number of my predecessors as Secretary of State for Defence, I obtained the Prime Minister's permission to use one of the three flats in Admiralty house which are within his gift. I have used the flat since August 1995, including for overnight accommodation between October 1995 and March 1996. In accordance with long-standing practice, the ministry of Defence makes a payment to the landlord—since 1 April 1996, the Cabinet Office—for its rent and maintenance costs. Council tax on the flat is paid direct to the City of Westminster. The flat has up to three bedrooms.

Defence Estates Organisation

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on Defence agency for the Defence Estates Organisation. [27292]

Mr. Soames: The Defence Estate Organisation was formed on 1 April 1995 from the Defence works service, Defence lands service and a central secretariat branch. The DEO provides a strategic overview of the defence estate and professional support to MOD budget holders and United States visiting forces for the management of the estate, including the contract provision of works services, maintenance of the rural estate, advice on planning issues and the disposal of surplus property. The organisation will now be considered for Defence agency status under the next steps procedures. The first stage of this process is a "prior options" study. This study will consider whether the work that the DEO does should be abolished, privatised or contractorised. An entry inviting comments from interested parties will appear tomorrow in the May 1996 edition of the "Government Opportunities Bulletin".

Copyright

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress his Department has made towards obtaining a photocopying licence from the Copyright Licensing Agency to ensure compliance with copyright law. [26721]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department is currently considering a licence with the Copyright Licensing Agency. We are awaiting a reply to correspondence sent to the agency.

Phoenix Aircraft

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning current progress on the Phoenix unmanned surveillance aircraft; when he plans to make an announcement concerning its future; and what is the current estimated cost of the project. [25799]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Phoenix prime contractor, GEC-Marconi Avionics, has recently completed, at its own expense, the agreed programme of work described by my predecessor on 5 April 1995—Official Report, columns 1139-40. The results are now being assessed, and I hope to make an announcement about the future of the project before the summer recess. The estimated cost of procuring the system is £227 million at 1994–95 price levels.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Pupil Assessments

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 25 March, Official Report, columns 434–35, what evidence she has evaluated which shows that performance of a school pupil in respect of subjects and grades achieved in any public examination at the age of 16-plus years can be predicted on the basis of assessment made at the age of 11-plus years. [25852]

Mr. Paice: The school year 1999–2000 will be the first year when it will be possible to compare pupils' 1995 key stage 2 national curriculum assessment results at age 11 with the same pupils' public examination results at age 16.

The majority of existing local schemes that I am aware of use GCSE examination results in any measurement of value added at secondary level. Measurement with other results, such as vocational qualifications, is made more difficult because the nature of the qualifications aimed for are often not directly comparable with the previous academic attainments of the pupils concerned.

Teaching Agencies

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she published draft codes of conduct to regulate the activities of agencies supplying teachers for schools; and when she intends to publish a definitive code. [26768]

Mr. Robin Squire: A draft circular giving advice to schools on the recruitment of supply teachers, and guidance notes for employment agencies, were sent to consultees on 17 November 1995. A wide range of comments has been received and is still under consideration. We plan to issue the final guidance later this term.

Incapacity for Work

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many people who have been found incapable of work since April 1995 have signed on as unemployed and receive (a) income support, (b) unemployment benefit, (c) both unemployment benefit and income support and (d) credits only; and how many people have joined the unemployment register as a result of being found capable of work or disallowed incapacity benefit, income support or severe disablement allowance. [26819]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert Horne to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 25 April 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me, in the absence of the Chief Executive, to reply to your question about how many people who have been found incapable of work since April 1995 have signed on as unemployed and what benefits they have received; and how many people have joined the unemployment register as a result of being found capable of work or disallowed Incapacity Benefit, Income Support or Severe Disablement Allowance.

In answer to the first part of your question, people found incapable of work following the All Work Test can continue to receive Incapacity Benefit (IB) and would not therefore need to claim unemployment benefits.

You also ask how many people have joined the unemployment register as a result of being found capable of work or disallowed IB. In the period April 1995 to March 1996 40,257 people disallowed IB following the All Work Test made a claim for unemployment benefits and thereby registered for employment. No figures are held for those who have joined the unemployment register, who previously claimed Income Support or Severe Disablement Allowance.

I hope this is helpful.

Copyright

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what progress her Department has made towards obtaining a photocopying licence from the Copyright Licensing Agency to ensure compliance with copyright law. [26720]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department has been in correspondence with the Copyright Licensing Agency Ltd. and is awaiting a proposal directed at the Department for Education and Employment.

Jobcentres

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what assessments she has made of the performance of jobcentres in (a) Doncaster and (b) Mexborough measured against charter standards in the last 12 months; [26611]

(2) how many complaints were received about the services provided by jobcentres in (a) Doncaster and (b) Mexborough during the last 12 months; and what were the equivalent figures for the previous (i) 12, (ii) 24 and (iii) 36 months. [26612]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 25 April 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions about the performance of Jobcentres in Doncaster and Mexborough in the last 12 months measured against Charter standards, and about the number of complaints received about the services provided by the above Jobcentres.

Jobseeker's Charter standards are monitored throughout the Employment Service. The standards are agreed by the Citizens Charter Unit and Number 10 Policy Unit. The following standards can be expected by jobseekers under the Jobseeker's Charter:

jobseekers should be seen on time if they have an appointment, if not they should be seen within 10 minutes of offered an appointment;

telephone calls should be answered within 30 seconds;

letters should be responded to within five days, jobseekers's questions should be answered in clear, plain language;

vacancies on display should be up to date and available; and benefit payments should be for the right amount of money and on time.

Table 1 and 2 attached show the standards achieved for the periods you requested in the Employment Service (ES) Districts in which Doncaster and Mexborough are located. Analysis would indicate that the standards, particularly on client waiting times, are lower in the Doncaster ES District compared to Barnsley and the Dearne. The main factor affecting the service to the public during the period was the introduction of a pilot system known as the Labour Market System (LMS). LMS is a computer based system designed to support the ES frontline, job-broking and client advisory processes. As with any major innovation of this size there have been a number of system and organisational problems to resolve. I am pleased to report that the majority of teething problems have been overcome and we are now starting to see real improvements for our clients. You will be interested to note that following the successful pilot of LMS in the Doncaster ES District a decision was taken to rollout LMS in all Jobcentre locations.

As part of the Jobseeker's Charter we obtain feedback from our clients on the quality of our services. A formal suggestions and complaints system is in place at Jobseekers to monitor this. Table 3 shows the volume of complaints received by Doncaster and Mexborough offices. Suggestions by clients and employers are regularly monitored and where possible improvements are made to our services. For example, improved Back To Work Teams (BTWTs) are currently being introduced into Jobcentres following the 1995 local customer satisfaction surveys. BTWTs are groups of ES people who provide the full range of ES programmes and services to specific groups of clients. The teams can offer a continuity of service to clients, as well as ensuring all eligibility conditions for receipt of benefit are satisfied.

In addition to the above quarterly monitoring of standards, information is gathered via local and national customer satisfaction surveys. The last local customer satisfaction survey in Mexborough was carried out in the two weeks commencing 18 March 1995 (published July 1995). Offices within the Doncaster ES District were excluded from the 1995 survey because of the LMS pilot. You will be interested to note that a survey of customer satisfaction within the Doncaster Jobcentres took place two weeks ago although the results are yet to be published and analysed.

Should you require any further information please do not hesitate to contact my District Managers. Terry Allen is District Manager for Doncaster District and he can be contacted on Tel: (01302) 552101, and Paul Armstrong is District Manager for Barnsley and the Dearne—which covers Mexborough—and can be contacted on Tel: (01226) 263000.

I hope this is helpful.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Bankruptcy

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what arrangements he has made to ensure that disabled people who wish to defend themselves without drawing upon the services of a solicitor and barrister, are able to do so in bankruptcy proceedings before the High Court; and if he will make a statement. [26801]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The question concerns as specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Harry Barnes, dated 25 April 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary of the Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the ability of disabled people to defend bankruptcy proceedings in person.

Under the Rules of the Supreme Court, any person under a mental disability may not defend proceedings themselves but must act through a next friend or guardian ad litem. The Rules also provide that a next friend must act by a solicitor. Physically disabled people are, of course, free to defend themselves in all proceedings, including bankruptcy.

The Royal Courts of Justice has made a number of improvements to disabled access to its buildings over the last four years. Bankruptcy proceedings normally take place in the Thomas More Building. This is the most modern part of the complex and there is wheelchair access to all floors. Facilities are also available for the hard of hearing to have access to a hearing enhancement system. Blind court users are assisted through Braille indicators at strategic locations in the building, such as next to lift buttons, and space is also provided in courts and chambers should they wish to use Braille machines for transcription.

There is also a Customer Service Officer in the Royal Courts of Justice who is permanently on hand to help with any problems that a disabled person may have.

Legal Aid

Mr. Cox: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the magistrates courts covering the Greater London area. [25577]

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Bahrain

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Government of Bahrain about human rights in that country; and if he will make a statement. [25836]

Mr. Hanley [holding reply 23 April 1996]: Bahrain is a friend and ally. We have followed recent developments there closely and have been concerned at the recent violence. We are aware of allegations of human rights abuses, and will speak to the Bahraini Government about them.

Immigration

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when Mr. Ghafoor Ahmed, born 1 January 1972 is to be interviewed at the post in Islamabad in connection with his application to join his wife in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement; [26805]

(2) when the explanatory statement into the refusal to grant entry clearance to Mr. Sajid Mahmood, (Ref. IMM/B9871) is to be (a) completed at the post in Islamabad and (b) despatched to the immigration appellate authorities in London; and if he will make a statement; [26803]

(3) when the explanatory statement into the refusal to grant entry clearance to Mr. Mohammed Usman, (Ref. IMM/C6876) is to be (a) completed at the post in Islamabad and (b) despatched to the immigration appellate authorities in London; and if he will make a statement; [26804]

(4) when a decision is to be taken on the application by Mrs. Salim Bibi (Ref: LBA/1081/95 and B548471) made to the United Kingdom post in Islamabad to join her husband in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [26777]

Mr. Hanley: I have asked the high commission at Islamabad for details and will arrange for the hon. Member to receive a substantive reply from the migration and visa correspondence unit as soon as possible.

Copyright

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what progress his Department has made towards obtaining a photocopying licence from the copyright licensing agency to ensure compliance with copyright law. [26715]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Discussions between ourselves and the Copyright Licensing Agency are continuing. An issue of particular concern which remains to be resolved is whether CLA's jurisdiction extends to posts overseas. An agreement with CLA is not necessary to comply with United Kingdom copyright legislation.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Copyright

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what progress his Department has made towards obtaining a photocopying licence from Copyright Licensing Agency Ltd. to ensure compliance with copyright law. [26713]

Mr. Freeman: My Department has been approached by Copyright Licensing Agency Ltd. and is considering the terms of the photocopying licence proposed by the agency.

PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMISSION

National Audit Office

Mr. Forman: To ask the Chairman of the Public Accounts Commission if the Commission has appointed new auditors for the National Audit Office. [27162]

Sir Peter Hordern: Yes. The Commission has appointed the firm of Robson Rhodes. The appointment will be for a fixed term of three years from 1 April 1996. The appointment is renewable for a further two years at the discretion of the Commission.

TREASURY

Capital Gains and Transfer Taxes

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what have been the total receipts form (a) capital gains tax and (b) capital transfer tax for the last five financial years for which figures are available. [22992]

Mr. Michael Jack: The information requested is given in the table which follows. Inheritance tax replaced capital transfer tax in 1996.

£ million

	Capital gains tax[1]	Inheritance tax
1990–91	1,852	1,262
1991–92	1,140	1,299
1992–93	982	1,211
1993–94	710	1,333
1994–95	925	1,411
1995–96 (provisional estimate)	800	1,550

[1] Capital gains made by companies, including the gains of insurance companies attributable to policy holders, are chargeable to corporation tax and excluded from, the figures above.

Self-assessment (Self-employed)

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the change in the income tax yield form the self-employed for (a) 1996–97, (b) 1997–98 and (c) 1998–99 which will result from the change in the basis period of account under self-assessment. [26189]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 22 April 1996]: As I explained in my reply to the hon. Member for Oxford, East (Mr. Smith) on 9 February, Official Report, column 388, just over £700 million of the yield in 1998–99 from self-assessment, as shown in the table 5.2 of the "Financial Statement and Budget Report 1996–97", relates to income tax and class 4 national insurance contributions on the profits of trades, professions and vocations. The equivalent figures for 1996–97 and 1997–98 are a yield of about £50 million and a cost of about £100 million respectively.

These estimates are particularly sensitive to assumptions about growth in income from these sources.

Tax Reliefs

Mr. Pearson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what would be the full-year yield of restricting income tax relief at each marginal rate; [24926]

(2) if he will estimate the full-year yield from limiting (a) all tax reliefs claimed at the marginal rate and (b) the personal allowance to relief at (1) the basic rate and (2) the 20 per cent. rage giving in each case the number of taxpayers affected; [24934]

(3) what was the cost of tax relief for the most recent year available for deductions and reliefs listed under each of the reference numbers 303 to 317 on form X of the Inland Revenue survey of personal incomes. [24931]

Mr. Jack: Estimated full year yields at 1996–97 income levels for personal allowances, pension contribution and other reliefs are as follows. These are based on readily available information from a projection of the 1993–94 survey of personal incomes and other survey data projected in line with assumptions in the Budget forecast. The figures do not take account of any behavioural effects which might result from the introduction of such changes. If all allowances and reliefs were restricted the total yield would be greater than the sum of the individual figures.

n/a—not available.

Latest estimates of the costs of deductions and reliefs from information collected in the SPI are included in tables 1.6 and B1 of "Inland Revenue Statistics 1995". In some cases the SPI, which is based on administrative date, provides only some of the required information about a relief and other data sources are also used.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many appointments to the public bodies listed in "Public Bodies" for his Department were made during 1994–95 from names supplied by the public appointments unit; and if he will list them. [25953]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 22 April 1996]: During 1994–95, there were 14 appointments from names supplied by the public appointments unit to bodies listed under HM Treasury in "Public Bodies":

Name	Public body
Mr. W. D. Walker, OBE	Financial Services Tribunal
Mr. I. L. Rushton	Financial Services Tribunal

Mrs. Rosemary Day	Senior Salaries Review Body

Conceptions (Doncaster)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many conceptions occurred in each of the last five years for which figures are available in the Doncaster health authority. [26644]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The figures requested are shown in the table. They cover conceptions which led to maternities or to abortion under the 1967 Abortions Act. No information is available centrally about conceptions terminated by spontaneous miscarriages or illegal abortions.

ENVIRONMENT

Human Organs (Disposal)

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column 169, if human organs subsequent to pathological examination should be classified as waste, and upon disposal require the completion of waste transfer notes under the duty of care regulations. [25776]

Mr. Clappison: The issues which need to be addressed in the circumstances described by the hon. Member are those which I set out in my answer of 2 April 1996, Official Report, column 169.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what organs or body parts of (i) Ronnie Kray and (ii) Frederick West (a) should have been, according to his Department's guidance, and (b) were recorded on a duty of care waste transfer note; and if he will make a statement. [25853]

Mr. Clappison: It is the responsibility of the producer or the person in possession of a substance to decide whether it is waste and, if so, to take the necessary action in relation to that waste. It is the responsibility of the person transferring controlled waste, and the person to whom such waste is being transferred, to take the action in relation to transfer notes which is required by the Environmental Protection (Duty of Care) Regulations 1991. The Department does not have a right of access to records kept under the 1991 regulations.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if human corpses are classified as waste; and if human corpses are subject to duty of care work transfer notes as controlled waste. [25775]

Mr. Clappison: The burial and cremation of human corpses are outside the scope of legislation on waste.

Battle of Trafalgar Bicentenary

Mr. Spellar: To the Secretary of State for the Environment what preparations his Department is making for the commemoration of the bicentenary of the battle of Trafalgar and the death of Nelson.

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department will consider any plans for commemorating this event in October 2005 a little nearer the time.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of funding to be made available to his Department through the private finance initiative in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [16170]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department of the Environment and its sponsored bodies attracted over £4.5 billion in private investment in support of its programmes in 1994–95 and anticipates a similar outturn in 1995–96. Forecasts for 1996–97 and 1997–98 are for about £6 billion in private investment to be generated. The level of capital expenditure by the private sector on the Department's recently announced private finance initiative projects is forecast to be £0 million in 1995–96, £25 million 1996–97 and £47 million 1997–98.

Cement Kilns

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the results of the National Physical Laboratory monitoring of plume grounding at Castle Cement were sent to Lancashire county council; and for what reasons no request was made for observations or comments. [26007]

Mr. Clappison: A copy of the National Physical Laboratory monitoring report was sent as received, for information, to the chief executive of Lancashire county council on the 23 January 1996.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the date when the Government will publish their response to the second report of the Environment Committee on "The Burning of Secondary Liquid Fuel in Cement Kilns", HC 497 of Session 1994–95. [26099]

Mr. Clappison: Our current estimate is that the response will be published by the end of May 1996.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of potential conflicts of interest arising from the appointment of a director of Ready Mix Concrete as a director of the Environment Agency in respect of decisions on the circumstances in which cement companies should be permitted to burn hazardous waste in cement kilns. [26100]

Mr. Clappison: Careful consideration was given to potential conflicts of interest presented by appointments to the agency board, including the appointment of a director of Ready Mixed Concrete. Appropriate arrangements exist for such conflicts to the be declared, and for board members to withdraw from discussions or decisions likely to affect those interests.

These arrangements are set out in schedule 1 to the Environment Act 1995, and in the Environment Agency's own internal guidance for board members. The latter requires details of interests to be held on a register which will be available for public inspection.

Appointees to boards, such as the Environment Agency, are people with a track record of success in their chosen fields, who are likely to have a variety of outside commitments and interests. It would be wrong to exclude such people from public appointments as their skills and experience are essential to the board's success.

Regional Offices

Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list his Department's responsibilities on which the integrated regional offices are required to advise him on the allocation of resources. [25934]

Mr. Curry: The Government offices for the regions are required to provide advice to the Secretary of State for the Environment on the allocation of resources for the housing investment programme, housing partnership fund, flats over shops programme, cash incentive scheme, the single regeneration budget challenge fund and the European regional development fund.

Sir Fergus Montgomery: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the annual expenditure for each integrated regional office on each programme in each of the last three years. [25933]

Mr. Curry: The information requested is as follows:

1. The tables identify the former Employment Department and DFEE programmes in whose administration and delivery Government Offices are involved. The programmes are mainly delivered through Training and Enterprise Councils, Local Education Authorities and Careers Services, under contract to the Department.

2. The table for 1993–94 refers to programme expenditure by Employment Department Regional Offices, whose boundaries are in some instances different from those of Government Offices for the Regions, which were formed in April 1994. Breakdowns of all programme spend for 1993–94 are not available. However, spend on the two largest programmes run by the Department is given. The spend in the table may not align precisely with the outturn published in the Appropriation Accounts at national level.

3. Final outturn for 1994–95, as published in the Appropriation Accounts, is available at national level only. The spend in the table for 1994–95 may not align precisely with outturn published in the Appropriation Accounts.

4. Spend for 1995–96 is still provisional. Final outturn will not be available until the Appropriation Accounts are published in the Autumn and is available at national level only. The spend in the table therefore represents the most up to date information available but may not align precisely with spend to be published in the Appropriation Accounts.

5. Training for Work spend excludes Allowances, not available at Government Office level.

Whitley Incinerator, Coventry (Fire)

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what conclusions have been reached by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution's investigation into the fire at Whitley incinerator, Coventry, on 8 March; and if he will make a statement. [25922]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The investigations into the incident at the Coventry and Solihull Waste Disposal Co. Ltd. incinerator on 8 March are still in progress. A detailed report from the operator is expected shortly, together with a report from Coventry Environmental Services, which has been investigating the health effects. These reports will be considered in order to determine whether there are any actions required to prevent or minimise similar incidents in the future. The investigation is likely to be complete by the end of May.

Shopping Development

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the response he has received to his draft planning guidance on out-of-town shopping development. [26530]

Sir Paul Beresford: Over 500 responses were received.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to issue revised guidance on planning permission for out-of-town shopping development. [26529]

Sir Paul Beresford: We hope to do so before the summer recess.

Satellite Dishes

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment in which local authority districts in the south-west a satellite dish size of 90 cm is currently permitted without planning permission. [26339]

Sir Paul Beresford: A general planning permission, without the need for a planning application to the local planning authority, is granted by the Town and County Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995 for the installation of satellite antennas, subject to certain restrictions including size limits. In the south-west of England, the size limit for installation on dwellinghouses and other buildings under 15 m high is 90 cm in Devon and Cornwall. The size is necessary for good reception in those counties. Elsewhere in the south west the permitted limit is 70 cm. Our recent consultation paper, "Planning and Telecommunications", proposes that satellite antennas of up to 90 cm should be permitted throughout England.

Orimulsion

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if orimulsion will be included in the hazardous waste list. [25507]

Mr. Clappison: The list of hazardous waste was established by European Council Decision 94/904/EC. In the United Kingdom it is reproduced in the list set out in part I of schedule 2 to the Special Waste Regulations 1996 laid before Parliament on 1 April 1996. In my Department's view, orimulsion is not included in the list.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the functions of the toxic metals contained in orimulsion. [25508]

Mr. Clappison: Toxic metals contained in orimulsion have no function and are present as impurities.

Local Government Finance

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list each local authority's capital allocation, credit approvals and capital grants by (a) protective services, (b) single regeneration budget, (c) fire service, (d) Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, (e) European regional development fund, (f) personal social services, (g) education, (h) housing, (i) transport, (j) other services and (k) total for the years 1996–97, 1995–96, 1994–95, 1993–94, plus the bids made by local authorities for 1996–97. [26778]

Sir Paul Beresford: A list has been placed in the Library of the House, giving annual capital guidelines and basic credit approvals for each local authority for the years 1993–94 to 1996–97, and total supplementary credit approvals and capital grants for each local authority for the years 1993–94 and 1994–95. The rest of the information requested is not available centrally; to collate it would be possible only at disproportionate cost.

Copyright

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress his Department has made towards obtaining a photocopying licence from the Copyright Licensing Agency to ensure compliance with copyright law. [26716]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department is undertaking a review to ensure compliance with copyright law. If necessary, a photocopying licence will then be sought.

Council Tax

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will split band G of the council tax into narrower bands. [26781]

Sir Paul Beresford: My right hon. Friend has no plans to do so.

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the council tax payable by a band D household for each local authority area in Essex, excluding parish council precepts. [26877]

Sir Paul Beresford: The council tax payable by a band D household for each local authority area in Essex, excluding parish precepts is as listed.

	1996–97 £
Basildon	651.96
Braintree	588.33
Brentwood	583.38
Castle Point	636.84
Chelmsford	591.70
Colchester	607.61

Council Housing Transfers

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce additions to the programme for housing transfers by councils in 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [27241]

Mr. Curry: I am pleased to announce that Cotswold district council has gained a place on the 1996 housing transfer programme. The authority aims, subject to the approval of its tenants, to transfer its stock of over 4,300 homes to Fosseway housing association by the end of March 1997.

The Government are committed to a continuing programme of transfers as a means of generating private finance to repair and improve the condition of social housing and to increase diversity and choice for tenants.

The inclusion of Cotswold raises the number of authorities on the 1996 programme to six, giving a revised programme of approximately 25,000 dwellings, valued at £223.6 million.

The 1995 transfer programme has been completed. Eleven authorities transferred almost 45,000 homes to housing associations, raising a total of £963 million in private sector funds.

TRANSPORT

Young Drivers (Accidents)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many fatal accidents occurred during (a) 1993, (b) 1994 and (c) 1995 involving drivers under 20 years of age; and if he will make a statement. [25159]

Mr. Norris: There were 428 fatal accidents in 1993 involving drivers under 20 years of age, and 426 in 1994. Information for 1995 will be available in July.

Rail Investment

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what major investment schemes which have been assessed as not meeting the commercial criteria but having wider benefits to the north-west are included in Railtrack's network management statement; and if he will make a statement. [26417]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack's network management statement sets out an illustrative list of investment schemes which include infrastructure renewal works in the Manchester area and the west coast main line route modernisation scheme. As the statement explains, in the restructured railway, it is for the Franchising Director, in consultation with train operating companies and Railtrack, to assess whether an infrastructure investment scheme meets the service standards and other criteria to enable Railtrack to take the project forward.

Union Railways

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list total payments to date made by Union Railways to (a) consultants, (b) outside organisations and (c) individuals, indicating the name of the body involved and the services provided. [22238]

Mr. Watts [holding answer 22 March 1996]: This information is not available in the form requested. The following is a list of consultants who have either undertaken studies on behalf of Union Railways, or seconded persons to work in house with UR on the development of the CTRL project. The list excludes agencies that provided temporary secretaries, draughtmens and general office staff.

Weighbridges

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many weighbridges in the United Kingdom are run by (a) his Department and (b) local authorities. [26772]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Vehicle Inspectorate executive agency to write to the hon. member.

Letter from Ron Oliver to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 25 April 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question on the number of weighbridges run by a) the Department, and b) local authorities.

The Vehicle Inspectorate is responsible for the maintenance and operation of 72 weighbridges throughout the UK. We do not have information on the number of weighbridges under local authority control.

Car Accidents

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish figures relating to car accidents involving (a) private cars, (b) company cars and (c) rental cars by (i) vehicles and (ii) mileage travelled. [26773]

Mr. Norris: Some of the information requested is published in the report "Cars: Make and Model: The Risk of Driver Injury and Car Accident Rates in Great Britain: 1994".

The following table shows a summary of the available data which are contained in this report. Rental cars are included in the category of company-owned cars and it is not possible to identify rented vehicles from the available accident record.

Injury accident involvement per 10,000 licensed vehicles in each group

	Privately owned		Company owned
	Fatal or serious	All	Fatal or serious	All
Registered on or since 1 January 1992
Standard performance	23	144	30	198
High performance	27	143	32	216
Registered before 1 January 1992
Standard performance	23	150	25	156
High performance	31	176	27	157

Corresponding estimates of mileage travelled are not available. However, the following annual average mileage estimates have been drawn from the 1992–94 national travel survey and are included in the report.

Estimated annual average mileage by age and ownership of car

Age of vehicle	Privately owned	Company owned
Up to 1 year old	10,200	22,000
Over 1 and up to 2 years old	10,000	23,000

Serco Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what contracts his Department and his agencies have with Serco Ltd.; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [26688]

Mr. Norris: My Department has the following contracts with Serco Ltd.:

Description	Termination date
Software Services Agreement	31 July 1996
Maintenance of radar (call-off)	31 March 1997
Maintenance of Vessel tracking systems (call-off)	31 March 1997

The total cost of the contracts is £123,000. Individual contract costs are not provided as this information is commercial confidential.

The cost to the Department of early termination of these contracts would be negotiable and depend on the individual circumstances and loss suffered by the contractor. In any case, this amount, when taken together with any payments already made, should not exceed the total contract price.

London Taxi Fares

Mr. Bendall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about London taxi fares and fees. [27293]

Mr. Norris: The Secretary of State has made an order increasing London taxi fares by about 4.59 per cent. on average with effect from Saturday 27 April 1996. The new tariff will incorporate a minimum charge of £1.40—including a hire charge of £1—for the first 513 m—561.22 yds—or 111 seconds. The rate will then be 20p for every 256.5 m —280.61 yds— or 55.5 seconds up to six miles and 20p for each 171 m—187.07 yds—or 37 seconds thereafter. The charge for each additional passenger will be 40p.

The Secretary of State has decided that there will be no increase this year in the fees for London taxi driver and vehicle licences, currently £87 and £78 respectively.

Croydon Tramlink

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the latest position on Croydon Tramlink; and if he will make a statement. [27147]

Mr. Norris: I am glad to say that, following analysis of bids from four consortiums, London Transport has identified Tramtrack Croydon Ltd. as the preferred bidder for the concession to build and operate Croydon Tramlink. London Transport will therefore be taking forward discussion with Tramtrack Croydon Ltd., with the aim of completing the concession agreement with it. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will need to be satisfied with the final proposals before making grant available, but I welcome that further step forward for this private finance initiative scheme.

This important public transport scheme should be seen alongside other projects. I know that many Croydon residents are keen that the Coulsdon inner relief road on the A23 should go ahead; and I am glad to be able to confirm that, despite the substantial reductions in roads spending announced in the last Budget, that particular scheme remains in the trunk road programme.

National Transport Debate

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he intends to publish the Government's response to the national debate on transport. [27107]

Sir George Young: I am publishing today a Green Paper, providing the Government's response to the transport debate and setting out our vision for the future of transport policy. The Green Paper, "Transport: the Way Forward" draws together for the first time in nearly 20 years most of the key issues affecting transport policy.

The Government issued last October a statement on transport priorities in Northern Ireland. The Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales intend to publish transport policy statements later.

Mobile Homes

Mr. Day: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will introduce regulations granting residents of mobile homes at Chesters croft, Cheadle Hulme, rights of compensation under the provisions of the Planning and Compensation Act 1991. [26737]

Mr. Watts: I hope to introduce them as soon as practicable.

Motorway Repairs (Lighting)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the effects on accident levels of inappropriately sited (a) security lights and (b) lights used on motorways to illuminate repair work. [26779]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Paul Flynn, dated 25 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to write to you in reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the assessment of the effects on accident levels of inappropriately sited security lighting and lighting used on motorways to illuminate repair works.

I am not aware of any studies into the relationship between security lighting and road accidents. The Highways Agency has carried out a number of accident studies at roadworks over the years and the illumination of repair works has not been identified as causing a safety problem.

Copyright

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress his Department has made towards obtaining a photocopying licence from the Copyright Licensing Agency to ensure compliance with copyright law. [26709]

Mr. Norris: My Department is revising the matter. Staff are told to comply with copyright provisions and checks are made to reduce the risk of infringement when photocopies are made.

Driving Licences

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the implementation of the second EC directive on driving licences. [26859]

Sir George Young: The changes being introduced as a result of the second directive are very complex. Some aspects have required clarification or negotiation with the commission, and some information from the commission is still awaited. We understand that a number of other member states do not expect to be in a position to implement the directive fully for some time.

We now intend to implement the directive in two stages. The theory test for cars and motorcycles will be introduced as planned on 1 July 1996. However, other changes to the legislation will be introduced on 1 January 1997. They include the introduction of theory tests for other vehicles; the introduction of new categories of driving licence—in particular for new applicants for entitlement to drive minibus and light good vehicles—and changes to eyesight requirements for driving of lorries and buses.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

National Lottery Charities Board

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) if she will make a statement on her policy with regard to councillors serving on National Lottery Charities Board panels; [26313]

(2) how many councillors have applied to serve on National Lottery Charities Board panels; [26311]

(3) what measures she has taken to ensure that appointments procedures for National Lottery Charities Board panels are transparent and democratic. [26314]

Mr. Sackville: I have been asked to reply.

Responsibility for the appointment of members to the National Lottery Charities Board currently lies with my right hon. and learned Friend, although responsibility is soon to pass to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for National Heritage.

The board itself is responsible for appointing members of its non-executive regional advisory panels. I have asked the chief executive of the board to write to the hon. Member on the points raised.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the total expenditure of his Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies on publicity for each of the years (a) 1979–80, (b) 1989–90, (c) 1991–92, (d) 1993–94, (e) 1994–95 and (f) 1995–96 (i) to date and (ii) as estimated for the whole year; what estimate he has made of such expenditure for 1996–97; and if he will break these figures down to indicate expenditure on (1) advertising and (2) press and public relations. [11392]

Mr. Burt [holding answer 25 January 1996]: The total publicity expenditure incurred by this Department, its agencies and non-departmental bodies, is as follows:-

1989–90: £15,598,464

1991–92: £17,546,566

1993–94: £18,333,603

1994–95: £20,654,914

1995–96: £22,917,173[1]

Of these figures, the amounts spend on advertising are as follows:

1989–90: £5,343,986

1991–92: £4,834,813

1993–94: £5,964,988

1994–95: £3,597,308

1995–96: £6,383,467[1]

[1] Estimated figure to end of year.

1. Detailed plans for 1996–97 expenditure are yet to be finalised.

2. Information is not available prior to 1989–90. This Department was not in existence before 1988 and information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

3. The above figures are for publicity only. Press does not form part of publicity spending.

4. This Department does not incur expense on Public Relations.

Allowance Claimants

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants were in receipt of reduced earnings allowance and special hardship allowance at the end of February; and what was the average payment under each scheme. [25854]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

	Reduced earnings allowance	Frozen or restricted reduced earnings allowance
Allowances current	107,213	35,583
Average weekly payment	£36.05	£24.64

1. Special Hardship Allowance was replaced by Reduced Earnings Allowance from October 1986.

2. Figures shown are at 2 April 1994.

3. Based on a 10 per cent. sample with an allowance for late returns.

Income Support

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many persons were receiving income support on medical grounds at 31 March 1995. [25790]

Mr. Roger Evans: As of February 1995, 787,000 people were receiving income support because of disability or incapacity.

Notes:

1. Data are not available for March 1995.

2. Figure has been rounded to the nearest thousand.

3. The above figure includes those persons in receipt of the disability-premium and those receiving short term incapacity benefit, but excludes persons aged 60 and over, and those persons who would qualify for a lone parent and/or carer premium.

4. Sample Size: 1 in 20.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many persons are currently receiving income support on medical grounds. [25791]

Mr. Evans: As of May 1995, the latest date for which information is available, 807,000 people were receiving income support because of disability or incapacity.

Notes:

1. Figures has been rounded to the nearest thousand.

2. The above figure includes those persons in receipt of the disability premium and those receiving Short Term Incapacity Benefit, but excludes persons aged 60 and over, and those persons who would qualify for a lone parent and/or carer premium.

Occupational Asthma

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what was the average level of award paid to sufferers of occupational asthma, from whom benefit was recovered by the compensation recovery unit in each of the last three financial years; [25784]

(2) how much was recovered from payments to sufferers of occupational asthma by the compensation recovery unit in each of the last three financial years; [25782]

(3) from how many occupational asthma sufferers benefit was recovered by the compensation recovery unit in each of the three financial years. [25783]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ursula Brennan to Mr. Ian McCartney, dated 24 April 1996:

As Peter Mathison is away from the office an annual leave at the moment, the Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking what was the average level of award paid to sufferers of occupational asthma, from whom benefit was recovered by the Compensation Recovery Unit (CRU); how much was recovered from payments and from how many occupational asthma sufferers benefit was recovered by the CRU; for each of the last three financial years.

The information requested is not available in the format requested. The average level of award paid to sufferers of occupational asthma is not available. Under the recoupment provisions, compensators are only required to notify CRU of a compensation claim if the award exceeds the Small Payment Limit of £2,500. Compensators are not required to provide information about either the level or composition of the award.

Prior to May 1994 information about recovery from payments to occupational asthma sufferers is not available, as the data held on the CRU computer system did not specifically identify such cases. Information from May 1994 is provided in the table below:—

Period	Number of cases	Total amount recovered[1]
May 1994–March 1995	3	£7,161.06
April 1995–March 1996	27	£211,510.18

[1] These figures include money recovered from both final and interim payments.

Figures are provisional and subject to change.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Retirement Allowance

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if claimants over retirement age but not yet 70 years of age and not in full-time employment who are in receipt of invalidity benefit as well as reduce earnings allowance will be transferred to retirement allowance. [25856]

Mr. Roger Evans: Yes. The Social Security (Industrial Injuries) (Regular Employment) Regulations 1990, as amended by the Social Security (Industrial Injuries and Diseases) (Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 1996 with affect from 24 March 1996, provide for reduced earnings allowance recipients who are over pension age and in receipt of incapacity benefit, which replaced invalidity benefit, to be transferred to retirement allowance.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claimants over retirement age and not in full-time employment who receive reduced earnings allowance will be transferred to retirement allowance from April; and what will be the estimated average change in weekly income resulting from the change over. [25855]

Mr. Evans: The information requested is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

The Benefits Agency has identified about 20,000 reduced earnings allowance recipients over pension age, who are not being paid at a frozen or restricted rate. Of these, any not in regular employment will be transferred to retirement allowance under the amended legislation which came into force on 24 March. The average difference between reduced earnings allowance and retirement allowance is estimated to be around £29 a week. This may be offset by additional income related benefit entitlement for some retirement allowance recipients.

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if a claimant who is transferred from reduced earnings allowance to retirement allowance and is disadvantaged through his lost occupational pension entitlement will be compensated by extra retirement allowance. [25857]

Mr. Evans: Retirement allowance is paid in recognition that a reduction in earnings, due to an industrial accident or disease, during a person's working life could result in reduced pension entitlement. The rate payable can be no more than 25 per cent. of the rate of reduced earnings allowance.

Small Farmers

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to set up emergency procedures for income support for financially vulnerable small farmers by exempting them from the actively seeking work criteria. [26131]

Mr. Roger Evans: Any claims from unemployed farmers would be subject to the normal benefit rules, including the actively seeking work rule. Farmers who continue to work may be entitled to in-work benefits depending upon their income and family circumstances.

Disability Pension

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of (a) the cost and (b) the numbers benefiting financially if the housing benefit taper for people receiving a disability premium were reduced to 50 per cent. [26343]

Mr. Roger Evans: The estimated cost of reducing the housing benefit taper to 50 per cent. for claimants with a disability premium is £70 million; 245,000 existing claimants would gain, while a further 15,000 would be newly entitled to receive housing benefit.

Notes:

1. Estimates are based on the family expenditure surveys of 1991, 1992 and 1993, uprated to 1996–97 prices and benefit levels.

2. Expenditure estimates are rounded to the nearest £5 million, and caseloads to the nearest 5,000.

Social Fund

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are his Department's plans for the future funding of (a) social fund money advice and (b) the Benefits Agency out-of-hours service, with particular reference to that provided by the London emergency office. [25630]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 24 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary question asking what are his Department's plans for the future funding of (a) Social Fund money advice and (b) the Benefits Agency (BA) Out of Hours Service, with particular reference to that provided by the London Emergency Office.

I recently outlined the BA's plans for the future delivery of social security benefits based on the BA vision of "right benefit money to the right person at the right time every time".

The Agency will carry out a wide-ranging review of its activities as part of the Departmental Change Programme. Such a programme of change will cover all fundamental areas of the organisation's business and we are committed to achieve a 25% improvement in our productivity by 1998/99. In the first year it has been necessary to identify efficiencies and economies in excess of £200 million. All efficiencies and economies have been considered alongside the expenditure priorities the Agency has been set.

It is against this background that the Agency decided to review the need for the Out Of Hours Service and the London Emergency Office which both provide a service to customers at night and weekends, and also the provision of Social Fund Money Advice.

It was decided to end the funding for Social Fund Money Advice from 1 April 1996 because it was found that the service that could be provided by Social Fund Officers was very limited, there was a very low customer take up, and other outside bodies such as the Citizens Advice Bureaux were able to provide a comprehensive service.

The need for and the level of service provided by the Out of Hours Service and the London Emergency Office is currently being examined and a decision on it viability is expected later this year.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what performance targets apply for the operation of the Child Support Agency's computer system. [25629]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 24 April 1996.

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency Computer System (CSCS) performance targets.

The performance targets for CSCS are set out in a Service Level Agreement between the Child Support Agency (CSA) and the Information Technology Services Agency (ITSA).

The service level targets are as follows:

Availability

The target is for ITSA to provide the computer service to all CSA locations 95% of the planned service hours as laid down in the agreement.

Response Times

There are two targets for the time it takes the computer to respond and display information to the user these are:

an average response time of 5 seconds and for

95% of all responses to be within 7 seconds

Output Handling

The target is for ITSA to accurately handle and despatch 95% of all computer outputs within one working day.

Service Support

The target is for ITSA to clear 95% of all incidents (problems) within agreed clearance times as laid down in the agreement.

I am pleased to be able to tell you that all performance targets for CSCS have been consistently exceeded in 1995/96.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what have been the annual running costs of the agency and the total to date. [26570]

Mr. Mitchel: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Frank Field, dated 24 April 1996:

I am replying to your parliamentary question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency running costs.

The running costs of the Agency for its first two years were published in our relevant Annual Reports and Accounts. The details for 1995–96 are not quite finalised yet. The most up to date figures therefore are:

	£ million
1993–94	139
1994–95	192
1995–96	[1]197
Total	528

[1] Forecast figure subject to end of year adjustment. I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give a breakdown of full assessments by the Child Support Agency by amount and as a proportion of cases cleared from 1 April 1995 to the present time in the same format as his answer of 25 October 1995, Official Report, column 802. [25765]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 24 April 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency assessments.

Data is currently available to 30 November 1995. A breakdown of the full maintenance assessments by amount and as a proportion of cases cleared from 1 April 1995 to 30 November 1995 is attached. Work is currently in progress to update this information and details should be available in July 1996.

I hope this is helpful.

Full assessment by amount and as a proportion of cases cleared: 1 April 1995 to 30 November 1995

Weekly maintenance	Full assessments (000s)	Percentage as a proportion of cases cleared

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much benefit savings have been achieved each year since April 1993; broken down into (a) maintenance collected, (b) maintenance arranged, (c) non-maintenance cessations and (d) in total for each of (a) to (c) since April 1993. [26569]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Frank Field, dated 24 April 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency benefit savings.

The attached table shows the yearly breakdown of benefit savings achieved by the Agency since April 1993. Up to February 1996 the Agency has firmly recorded a total of £1,351 million in benefit savings. The figures for March have yet to be finalised. They will include the annual reconciliation of components like family credit and housing benefit. This will certainly mean that the forecast of £510 million for 1995/96 will be achieved. It may even be an underestimate. On this basis the estimated forecast for the first three years is £1,407 million.

I hope this is helpful.

Benefit Savings Achieved

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security which Child Support Agency documents are available under the terms of the open government code. [25628]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 24 April 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency documents which are available under the Open Government Code.

The attached list shows the principal Agency documents which are available to the public.

This list is not exhaustive; each request under the Open Government Code is dealt with individually, and wherever it is possible to do so the information or documents requested are made available.

I hope this is helpful.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what number and proportion of persons who have failed the all work test for incapacity benefit have registered for employment; [25807]

(2) how many and what proportion of persons who have failed the all work test for incapacity benefit have subsequently become entitled to unemployed benefit. [25808]

Mr. Forth: I have been asked to reply.

Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert Horne to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 25 April 1996.

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me, in the absence of the Chief Executive, to reply to your questions about the number and proportion of persons who have failed the All Work Test have registered for employment and subsequently been entitled to unemployment benefit.

In the period April 1995 to February 1996, 84,518 people have been disallowed Incapacity Benefit (IB) following the All Work Test. In the same period, 33,454 (43%) disallowed IB following the All Work Test made a claim for unemployment benefits and thereby registered for employment. No figures are available as to whether these people proved to be entitled to unemployment benefit or whether they received Income Support instead.

I hope this is helpful.

Overpayments

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much is owed to his Department in overpayment of benefits; and how much his Department has had to write off in each of the last five years. [26799]

Mr. Roger Evans: The amount owed to the Department due to the overpayment of benefits, as at the end of March 1996, is £462 million.

The amounts written off in each of the last five years are set out in the list:

1990–91: £51,573,000

1991–92: £63,404,000

1992–93: £77,914,000

1993–94: £92,743,000

1994–95: £107,887,000.

Copyright

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what progress his Department has made towards obtaining a photocopying licence from the Copyright Licensing Agency to ensure compliance with copyright law. [26717]

Mr. Burt: This Department is currently considering an approach from the copyright licensing agency to decide whether it is necessary to obtain a photocopying licence, and, if so, the basis for determining the fee payable.

Capacity for Work Test

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people found capable of work have subsequently signed on as unemployed for (a) February and (b) March 1996. [26367]

Mr. Forth: I have been asked to reply.

Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert Horne to Mr. Keith Bradley, dated 25 April 1996.

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me, in the absence of the Chief Executive, to reply to your question about the number of people found capable of work under the All Work Test, who have subsequently signed on as unemployed in February and March 1996.

In the months of February and March 1996, 5,735 and 6,803 people respectively made a claim for unemployment benefits, having been disallowed Incapacity Benefit (IB) following the All Work Test.

I hope this is helpful.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Operations Bumblebee and Eagle Eye

14. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about Operation Bumblebee and Operation Eagle Eye. [25050]

Mr. Maclean: Both operations are proving their worth. The commissioner tells me that the clear-up rate for domestic burglary has doubled and street robbery has fallen to 2,587, a drop of over 27 per cent.

Sentencing (Consistency)

15. Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has undertaken into the consistency of sentencing across different courts. [25052]

Mr. Maclean: No specific research project has been undertaken on this topic. However, information on sentencing variations between courts is published annually and a new publication has recently been issued showing the variations graphically between magistrates' courts.

Crime Prevention

16. Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the partnership approach to crime prevention. [25053]

Mr. Maclean: Partnership in all its forms has made a significant contribution to the fight against crime in recent years. We remain firmly committed to the concept and will continue to do all we can to encourage it.

Sentencing (Persistent Criminals)

17. Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he intends to take to ensure that sentences passed on persistent criminals more accurately reflect the time actually served in prison. [25054]

Mr. Maclean: I believe that there should be greater honesty in sentencing. Accordingly, I propose that the present parole and early release arrangements should be abolished and the term served would match more closely the term of imprisonment imposed by the court.

Fire Authorities (Budgets)

18. Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received from fire authorities during the past two months on their budgets for 1996–97; and if he will make a statement. [25055]

Mr. Sackville: There has been a number of such representations. Responsibility for deciding what level of financial provision should be made available to fire brigades rests with the local fire authorities. They are obliged to set budgets which will enable them to comply with their statutory duties under the Fire Services Act 1947.

Asylum and Immigration Bill

19 Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on the impact of the measures contained in the Asylum and Immigration Bill on charities dealing with the destitute and homeless. [25056]

Miss Widdecombe: We have received a number of representations expressing concern about the impact of the Bill's housing provisions. The Government consider it wrong that people who are present without valid leave or have been admitted on the basis that they will have no recourse to public funds should be able to claim housing assistance form local authorities. Clause 9 will enable that anomaly to be removed.

Mr. Loyden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the impact on the employment of members of ethnic minorities of the Asylum and Immigration Bill. [25059]

Miss Widdecombe: We believe that the Asylum and Immigration Bill will improve the employment position of members of the ethnic minorities lawfully resident in the United Kingdom and entitled to work here. Illegal working damages them just as it does everyone else who is entitled to work here.

Closed Circuit Television

21. Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what research he has evaluated as to the effectiveness of CCTV in combating crime. [25058]

Mr. Maclean: My Department has published a number of research papers looking at various aspects of CCTV effectiveness as part of its series of crime prevention unit papers and the successor series of crime detection and prevention papers. The most recent of these—published on 29 December 1995—is paper number 68—"CCTV in Town Centres: Three Case Studies". Copies of all these papers are held in the Library.

Robberies (Cambridgeshire)

23. Mrs. Anne Campbell: To ask the Secrtary of State for the Home Department how many robberies were recorded in Cambridgeshire (a) in 1979 and (b) in 1995. [25061]

Mr. Maclean: There were 46 offences of robbery recorded in Cambridgeshire in 1979 and 352 offences recorded in 1995.

Recorded Crime

24. Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the trend in the incidence of recorded crime since 1993. [25062]

Mr. Maclean: Recorded crime in England and Wales has been falling since 1993, with recorded crime in 1995 down 468,000 offences on 1992 levels. The recent falls have been nationwide, with 35 out of 43 police forces recording falls in 1995. This demonstrates that the police, along with law-abiding members of the community, can make a real difference in helping to prevent crime.

Policing (East Anglia)

25. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he next expects to meet chief constables from East Anglia to discuss policing in rural areas. [25063]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend has no plans to do so at present.

Illegal Immigration (Profit)

26. Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action his Department is taking to curb the activities of those bringing illegal immigrants into the United Kingdom for profit. [25064]

Miss Widdecombe: The Immigration Service works closely with the police and other agencies in this country and abroad to gather, evaluate and disseminate intelligence about those engaged in facilitating illegal entry to this country; suspected areas of abuse are investigated and the Crown Prosecution Service instigates prosecutions in appropriate cases.

The Immigration (Carriers' Liability) Act 1987 requires all air and sea carriers to ensure that they do not carry inadequately documented passengers. In addition, the Asylum and Immigration Bill seeks to create the new offences of facilitating for reward the entry of an asylum seeker and assisting a person to obtain leave to remain to which they have no entitlement.

Police Forces (Revenue Finance)

27. Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department by how much he plans to increase the revenue finance for police forces in England and Wales in each of the next three years in order to increase by 5,000 the number of police officers. [25065]

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given earlier to the hon. Member for Bootle, (Mr. Benton).

Persistent Burglars and Drug Dealers

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures he proposes to take to deal with persistent burglars and drug dealers; and if he will make a statement. [25057]

Mr. Maclean: I propose that the courts should be required to impose stiff minimum prison sentences on persistent burglars and drug dealers. Full details of my proposals are set out in the White Paper "Protecting the Public: the Government's strategy on crime in England and Wales", a copy of which is in the Library.

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the (a) strength and (b) cost of the Metropolitan police force (i) in 1979 and (ii) currently; and if he will make a statement. [25310]

Mr. Maclean: At the end of March, Metropolitan police strength, excluding officers seconded from the Metropolitan police, for example to regional crime squads and central service, was 27,342. I understand that the latest estimate for net revenue expenditure for 1995–96 is £1,688.493 million. These figures compare with police strength of 22,168 as at 31 March 1979 and net revenue expenditure of £381.673 million in 1979–80.

Criminal and Terrorist Activity

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the relationship with the Republic of Ireland (a) as a common migration zone and (b) regarding criminal and terrorist activity. [25352]

Mr. Howard: The United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland, along with the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man, form the common travel area. The CTA reflects the fact that, with the exception of a short period around the second world war, British and Irish nationals have always been free to reside in either country. Journeys within the CTA are normally exempt from, immigration, control, although journeys which start from, or extend beyond, it are still liable to border controls.

Practical co-operation between the Royal Ulster Constabulary, the Metropolitan police and the Garda continues at all levels. Security co-operation with the Irish Government, and between our respective security forces, remains of vital importance.

Mrs. Audrey Grant

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) when Mrs. Audrey Grant of Birmingham is to be deported to Jamaica; and what are the reasons for the deportation; [26844]

(2) what plans he has to review the case of Mrs. Audrey Grant and the deportation order served against her; and how many representations he has had from people concerned about the deportation. [26846]

Mr. Kirkhope: Mrs. Grant is not the subject of a deportation order. She has been given leave to move by the High Court for a judicial review of the decision to remove her to Jamaica as an illegal entrant. No action will be taken pending a decision by the court.

We have received recent representations about the case from nine members of Parliament and from 11 members of the public or organisations.

Deportees

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many deportees, over the last 12 months, have parents and children living legally in Britain. [26845]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information requested is not available.

KPMG

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total value of contracts awarded to KPMG in each of the last three years for which information is available. [26283]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 22 April 1996]: Individual contract values cannot be given for reasons of commercial confidentiality. The number of contracts awarded to KPMG in each of the last three years and their total value is as follows:

	Number of contracts	£
1993–94	3	153,000
1994–95	2	60,000
1995–96	3	117,000

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consultancies have been let to KPMG by (a) the Forensic Science Service, (b) the probation training unit and (c) C6 division of the Home Office in the last three years. [25560]

Mr. Howard: Only one such contract has been awarded, by the probation training unit.

Prison Escapes

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are the procedures for informing (a) his Department and (b) the public when an escape has taken place from a prison. [26336]

Miss Widdecome [holding answer 24 April 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Doug Hoyle dated 25 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what are the procedures for informing (a) his Department and (b) the public when an escape has taken place from a prison.

The procedures for informing Ministers are set in the Prison Service's Framework Document, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. The Framework Document specifies that the Home Secretary will receive reports from the Director General on the escape of a category A prisoner. In addition to the stipulation contained in the Framework Document the Home Secretary receives reports on multiple escapes and escapes of notorious prisoners. Prison Service headquarters is informed immediately of any escape.

There are no national arrangements for the notification of the general public of an escape from prison.

Legal Actions (Costs)

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the total cost to public funds of all the legal actions he has (a) lost and (b) settled since his appointment. [26012]

Mr. Howard: Records are not kept centrally in the form requested.

Prisoners (Drug Use)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what records are available to his Department in respect of prisoners in England and Wales who are registered drug users. [26543]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 25 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what records are available to the Department in respect of prisoners in England and Wales who are registered drug users.

The Home Office Addicts Index maintains records of notified drug misusers. Because of the confidential nature of the data, the only prison staff allowed access are Medical Officers, who also have access to the medical records of individual prisoners.

British Steel

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total value of commercial orders placed by his Department with British Steel plc in each year from 1988 to 1995. [25816]

Mr. Howard: Information about the value of commercial orders placed with British Steel plc is not available before April 1993. The value of commercial orders placed since then is approximately £750, in financial year 1995–96.

Training Prisons

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many empty places for inmates serving life sentences there were at training prisons in England and Wales on 15 April. [26305]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 25 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking how many empty places for inmates serving life sentences there were at training prisons in England and Wales on 15 April.

There are currently 48 prisons with regime arrangements for life sentence prisoners. However, only Kingston prison, at Portsmouth, is an all-lifer prison. Lifer places in training prisons are not reserved and therefore the question of empty places for such prisoners does not arise.

Police Finance Services

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are his proposals for bringing competition to bear on police finance services. [27163]

Mr. Maclean: It is the Government's intention that compulsory competitive tendering should be introduced to police white collar support services as part of a rolling programme. Detailed consultation proposals for police finance services were issued on 27 July 1995. The Government have now considered the responses received from the police service, local authority associations and other interested bodies.

The Government have decided that police authorities will be subject to the same CCT regime for finance services as other authorities defined under the Local Government Act 1988, except for a number of specific exemptions, and a reduction in the overall competition requirement. The exemptions take account of the specialist nature of police work, and focus on the financial advice given in support of operational aspects of crime investigation.

Racial Incidents (South Wales)

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the statistics for the number of reported racial incidents in south Wales since 1988, indicating the annual percentage changes; and if he will make a statement about Government policy on this matter. [26368]

Mr. Maclean: Figures for the total number of racially motivated incidents recorded by South Wales police since 1988 are shown in the table.

A further report from the inter-department racial attack group is expected to be available by the summer.

Racially motivated incidents[1] recorded by South Wales police since 1988

Year	Number of incidents recorded	Percentage change
1988	103	—
1989	93	–9.3
1990[2]	308	+231
1991	385	+25
1992	311	–19.3
1993	401	+28.9
1994	501	+24.9
1995	472	–5.8

[1] A racial incident is defined by the Association of Chief Police Officers as any incident in which it appears to the reporting or investigating officer that the complaint involves an element of racial motivation, or any incident in which an allegation of racial motivation is made by any person.

[2] Changes in monitoring and recording practices of racially motivated incidents were introduced in 1990 together with a campaign of awareness raising within ethnic minority communities in South Wales.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Race Relations Legislation

Ms Mowlam: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he plans to implement race relations legislation in Northern Ireland. [25462]

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend expects to issue a draft legislative proposal for an Order in Council later this year.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of CAP fraud were reported in Northern Ireland in each year since 1993. [26220]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 April 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him by my right hon. Friend the Minister of State, Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 22 April, Official Report, columns 50–51. It is not possible to give a full breakdown of these figures in respect of Northern Ireland because market-based irregularities are compiled by the Intervention Board on a UK-wide basis. The figures for Northern Ireland for farm-based irregularities reported are:

1993: 2

1994: 5

1995: 1

Fair Employment

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what percentage of complaints taken up by the Fair Employment Tribunal in Northern Ireland since the implementation of the Fair Employment Act 1989 have concluded in a pre-trial settlement. [26234]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 April 1996]: This information is not available as applicants to the Fair Employment Tribunal are not legally obliged to state the reasons for the withdrawal of a complaint.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many sites of special scientific interest there are in Northern Ireland. [26195]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 22 April 1996]: Responsibility or this matter has been delegated to the Environment and Heritage Service under the chief executive, Robert C. Martin. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert C. Martin to Mr. Eric Illsley, dated 24 April 1996:

Mr Moss has asked me to reply to your parliamentary question about the number of areas of special scientific interest (ASSI) in Northern Ireland.

There are now 92 such areas covering approximately 75,800 hectares involving 2,787 landowners/occupiers.

Copyright

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress his Department has made towards obtaining a photocopying licence from the Copyright Licensing Agency to ensure compliance with copyright law. [26718]

Sir John Wheeler: Negotiations have not yet taken place with the Copyright Licensing Agency to determine the photocopying licence requirements of the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments.

WALES

Methane Gas

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy guideline in respect of methane gas drilling and extraction near residential communities. [26518]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Government policy on planning control over oil and gas operations is set out in Welsh Office circular 3/85—copies of which will be placed in the Library of the House—the annex to which makes clear that commercial and economic considerations are subject to the environmental acceptability of specific projects, as determined by the land use planning system and by other environmental controls.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will take action to halt methane gas extraction at Cimla in Neath; and if he will make a statement. [26520]

Mr. Jones: No.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received on drilling for methane gas near Resolven, Neath; and if he will make a statement. [26519]

Mr. Jones: None.

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what environmental constraints he has placed upon Enron Oil in relation to its proposals to extract methane gas in neath. [26521]

Mr. Jones: The two appeals by Enron Oil determined in January 1996 were allowed with conditions. These conditions are intended to protect the environment and the amenity of residents. Copies of the decision letter, which sets out the conditions on which permission was given will be placed in the Library of the House. Enron Oil must also obtain a licence from the National Rivers Authority in respect of the disposal of water from its drilling operations.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what response he has made to the Society of Chief Officers of Welsh Community Health Councils following its criticisms of the relevant consultations carried out by his Department about the transitional arrangements for community health councils consequent upon the changes in health authorities and local government. [26769]

Mr. Richards: Officials wrote to the secretary of the society of chief officers on 22 April. A copy of the reply has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many members he will appoint to each of the Welsh community health councils; how many he appointed before 1 April; and how many he has appointed to date. [26800]

Mr. Richards: Community health councils in Wales have between 16 and 20 members. My right hon. Friend is responsible for appointing two members to each council; none of these has yet been appointed. The balance of the appointments are filled by representatives of the voluntary sector and nominees of unitary authorities. Most of these members are in place.

Radar Transmitter (Milford Haven)

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the occasions in the last two years on which the radar transmitter on St. Ann's Head in Milford Haven was not operating effectively. [25766]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend to the hon. Member for Nottingham, North (Mr. Allen) on 13 March 1996, columns 607–08.

Sea Empress Incident

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the wild bird species affected by the Sea Empress disaster in south-west Wales indicating (a) total populations estimated in the area in 1995, (b) his latest estimate of casualties caused by the spillage and (c) the number of estimated casualties as a percentage of the 1995 populations; and if he will make a statement. [25767]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The latest estimated figures of wild bird species affected are shown in the following table. Only the largest colonies have been counted annually, and most of the breeding total figures were collated during the period 1987–95. The Countryside Council for Wales will be conducting surveys of breeding colonies this summer in order to assess the level of mortalities caused by the spill.

Compulsory Competitive Tendering

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many complaints his Department received alleging anti-competitive behaviour by local authorities in Wales under the terms of the Local Government (Planning and Land) Act 1980 in each financial year from 1990–91 to 1994–95; and how many local authorities were subsequently issued with a section 19a notice or 19b direction; [25895]

(2) how many complaints his Department received alleging anti-competitive behaviour by local authorities in Wales under the terms of the Local Government Act 1988 for each financial year from 1990–91 to 1994–95; and how many local authorities were subsequently issued with a section 19a notice or 19b direction as a result. [25901]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Welsh Office received the following number of complaints alleging anti-competitive behaviour under the terms of the Local Government (Planning and Land) Act 1980 and the Local Government Act 1988:

1990–91: 6

1991–92: 8

1992–93: 19

1993–94: 11

1994–95: 4.

Our records for 1990–91 and 1991–92 are incomplete. Consequently the figures for these years could be understated. The following numbers of notices and directions were issued in respect of apparent anti-competitive behaviour.

1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
—	—	1 section 19A notice	6 section 13 notices	1 section 13 notices
—	—	—	2 section 14 directions	2 section 14 directions
—	—	—	1 section 19B direction	—

Section 19a notices and section 19b directions relate to the Local Government (Planning and Land) Act 1980. Section 13 notices and section 14 directions relate to the Local Government Act 1988.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what were the running costs borne by his Department for the financial years 1991–92 and 1993–94 of the local government compulsory competitive tendering enforcement team. [25896]

Mr. Jones: The approximate running costs borne by the Department for the years in question are as follows:

1991–92: £41,689

1993–94: £53,070

Costs are not available on a consistent basis over the period in question. The main distortion was caused by the introduction of superannuation charges in 1993–94.

Local Authority DLOs

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how may local authority direct labour and service organisations in Wales, operating contracts under the terms of (a) the Local Government (Planning and Land) Act 1980 and (b) the Local Government Act 1980 have achieved the required rate of return for the financial years (i) 1992–93, (ii) 1993–94 and (iii) 1994–95. [25897]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The required rate of return was achieved by 241 local authority direct labour and service organisations in 1992–93 and by 260 in 1993–94. The information requested for 1994–95 is not yet available as the Welsh Office has not yet completed its analysis of the reports submitted by local authorities for that year.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by service the local authorities in Wales that have been challenged by his Department under regulations under section 9 of the Local Government Act 1992 in relation to their internal arrangements for establishing client/contractor splits. [25898]

Mr. Jones: None.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list by authority the surplus achieved on trading accounts for the financial years (a) 1992–93, (b) 1993–94 and (c) 1994–95 for (i) general highways work, (ii) construction and maintenance of sewers, (iii) works of new construction and (iv) maintenance work, delivered by local authorities direct labour or services organisations in Wales under the terms of (1) Local Government (Planning and Land) Act 1980, and (2) the Local Government Act 1988; [25899]

(2) if he will list by authority and service area, the recorded deficits made by local authority direct labour or services organisations in Wales that have failed to meet the rate of return requirements operating contracts under the terms of the Local Government (Planning and Land) Act 1980 and the Local Government Act 1988 for each financial year from 1990–91 to 1994–95 in (i) cash and (ii) constant prices. [25900]

Mr. Jones: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Read Codes (NHS)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what pilot work has been carried out in Wales on the application of Read codes in the NHS; what independent evaluation has been carried out in the Read code's applicability; and by whom; [26840]

(2) what pilot schemes have been carried out work on applying Read codes in the NHS; and what independent evaluation he proposes to carry out on the investment so far and by which body is it to be carried out. [26839]

Mr. Hague: Pilot work to test the utility and usability of Read codes is being undertaken at Withybush hospital, Haverfordwest. Further, independent evaluation of this particular work is still under consideration. Separately, the school of postgraduate studies in medical and health care at Morriston is undertaking a technical evaluation of the feasibility of incorporating Read codes into an operational clinical information system. Issues concerning pilot schemes and evaluations in England are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what public expenditure has been spent on the development of Read codes for application in the NHS in Wales; when the expenditure was commenced; if expenditure was committed outside the main Loughborough development centre; if he has proposals to continue part-funding the centre; and if he will make a statement. [26841]

Mr. Hague: The costs of pilot work at Withybush hospital, Haverfordwest, and the technical evaluation at the school of postgraduate studies in medical and health care at Morriston, have been shared equally between the Welsh Office and the centre for coding and classification at the Department of Health. Costs to date to the Welsh Office, all incurred in 1994–1995 and 1995–96, amount to £69,000. The Welsh Office makes no contribution to the funding of the centre.

Welsh Health Common Services Authority

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority to secure an independent evaluation of the bidding procedure for the materials management contract of the authority under market testing. [26837]

Mr. Hague: I have had no consultations with the chairman about the market testing exercise which is being carried out in line with established procedures.

Copyright

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what progress his Department has made towards obtaining a photocopying licence from the Copyright Licensing Agency to ensure compliance with copyright law. [26712]

Mr. Hague: None.

General Practice Beds

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 22 April, Official Report, columns 39–40 to the hon. Member for Cardiff, West on general practice beds, what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Llandough Hospitals trust, and the Bro Taf health authority and GP fundholding practices in the Vale of Glamorgan concerning the supervision of the GP beds at the Barry community hospital. [26838]

Mr. Hague: None. This is a matter for the Bro Taf health authority and the local NHS trusts.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department (a) hold public meetings, (b) conduct public consultation exercises, (c) conduct consultation exercises with outside commercial interests, (d) publish a register of members' interests, (e) publish agendas for meetings and (f) publish the minutes of meetings (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20117]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 12 March 1996]: The information is as follows:

(a) None

(b) The Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes

The Farm Animal Welfare Council

The Food Advisory Committee

(c) The Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes

The Farm Animal Welfare Council

The Food Advisory Committee

(d) The Consumer Panel and the Veterinary Products Committee publish a register of members' interests.

The Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes, the Advisory Committee on Pesticides and the Food Advisory Committee state members' interests in their annual reports.

The interests of the members of the Spongiform Encephalopathy Committee are made available each year via an arranged PQ.

(e) The Consumer Panel, the Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes and the Food Advisory Committee publish agendas for its meetings.

(f) The Consumer Panel publishes the minutes of its meetings.

There is no statutory requirement for any of the above.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which of the advisory non-departmental public bodies sponsored by his Department have a statutory base, and which (a) publish their advice to Government, (b) publish an annual report and (c) lay an annual report before Parliament (i) under a statutory requirement and (ii) voluntarily. [20104]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 12 March 1996]: The following advisory non-departmental public bodies have a statutory basis:

The Advisory Committee on Pesticides

The Agricultural Dwelling House Advisory Committees

The Consumers' Committee for Great Britain

The Committee of Investigation for Great Britain

The Committee on Agriculture Valuation

The Hill Farming Advisory Committee

The Veterinary Products Committee

(a) Advice to Government is published by:

The Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes

The Consumer Panel

The Farm Animal Welfare Council (majority of reports)

The Food Advisory Committee

Publication is carried out on a voluntary basis by these bodies:

(b) Annual reports are published by:

The Veterinary Products Committee under a statutory requirement; and on a voluntary basis by:

The Advisory Committee on Novel Foods and Processes

The Advisory Committee on Pesticides

The Consumer Panel

The Food Advisory Committee

(c) An annual report is laid before Parliament by the Veterinary Products Committee under a statutory requirement.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what are the penalties for contravening the regulations preventing specified bovine offal entering the food chain; and how many prosecutions there have been to date. [22942]

Mrs. Browning: The penalties which would apply on summary conviction for a contravention of the controls in the Specified Bovine Offal Order 1995, as amended, which prevent SBO entering the food chain, are a fine of up to £5,000 and where appropriate a further fine of up to £1,000 for each 508 kg of SBO, beyond the initial 508 kg of SBO, in respect of which the offence is committed. Furthermore, a person who has been convicted for contravening the provisions of the SBO Order is liable in the court's discretion on a further conviction for a second or subsequent offence against the order to imprisonment for a term of up to one month in lieu of the applicable fine.

To date, there is one case before the court. A number of other cases are under investigation.

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will introduce an eradication scheme for BSE. [23382]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: This Department has been taking steps to eradicate BSE since July 1988, when the ruminant feed ban was introduced. This has resulted in a substantial decline in the number of cases, which is now less than one third of the rate at the height of the epidemic.

Sir Wyn Roberts: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the measures necessary to eradicate BSE. [23383]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: BSE is believed to have been caused by cattle consuming contaminated feed containing infected bovine or ovine material. Preventing the recycling of such material in feed should prevent cattle being exposed to the BSE agent and so becoming infected. A ban on the feeding of ruminant protein to ruminants was introduced in 1988. Unfortunately, some leakage in this ban has occurred and a number of measures have been taken over the past few years to strengthen the controls. The total prohibition on the inclusion of mammalian meat and bonemeal in all feed for farm animals and fertiliser for use on farms, which has just been introduced, should prevent any further infection of cattle by BSE material in feed, and eradicate BSE from the national herd.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he intends to make to the European Commission and the Council of Ministers on measures to improve the methods used by other member states to detect BSE in their cattle herds. [23149]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: BSE is notifiable in all member states. Suspect cases are examined by a state veterinarian for clinical signs of the disease, and slaughtered and destroyed if BSE is believed to exist. The diagnosis is confirmed by examination of brain tissue after death, using protocols which are internationally agreed and validated.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects the research commissioned by his Department into (a) maternal and (b) lateral transmission of BSE to be reported. [23201]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: The detailed cohort study into the possibility of maternal transmission of BSE will not be complete until early 1997. Some information about this experiment has been published in the progress report on BSE laid in the Library of the House in November 1995, but the result cannot be interpreted until it is complete. A report of earlier experiments on maternal and lateral transmission of BSE was published in the "Veterinary Record", volume 136, pages 312–318 of 1 April 1995, details of which were given in the progress report laid in the Library of the House in May 1995.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the incidence if BSE in England and Wales by (a) type of herd, (b) age of herd and (c) region. [23363]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: As at 22 April 1996, 64.61 per cent. of all dairy herds had had at least one case of BSE and 15.95 per cent. of all beef herds.

As at 22 April 1996, the proportion of herds in each region in England and Wales which had had at least one case of BSE was:

	Per cent.
East Anglia	40.3
East midlands	35.3
North	31.48
North-west	48.16
South-east	44.59
South-west	48.8
West midlands	40.74
Yorks/Humberside	35.99
Wales	30.06

The information is not recorded by age of herd.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the relationship of feed from scrapie sheep and BSE. [23367]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: The relevant research projects are:

Project code	Project title	Status
OC8964	BSE Deactivation Studies	Commissioned/evaluated
SE0201	BSE: Epidemiological Studies	Commissioned/evaluated
SE0209	BSE: Epidemiological Studies	Commissioned
SE1404	Susceptibility of BSE and Scrapie isolates	Commissioned/evaluated
SE1405	Susceptibility of BSE agent to chemical and physical inactivation in the field/laboratory	Commissioned/evaluated
SE1413	Strain typing of Scrapie agent in meat and bone meal	Proposed—not yet approved
SE1417	The effect of PrPgenotype on the thermostability of scrapie agent	Commissioned
SE1421	BSE and scrapie agent susceptibility to laboratory facsimilies of rendering practices (was SE1404)	Commissioned

SE1422	Practical aspects of inactivation of BSE and scrapie agents (was SE1405)	Commissioned

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the incidence of BSE in Scotland by (a) type of herd, (b) age of herd and (c) region. [23362]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: As at 22 April 1996, 37.5 per cent. of all dairy herds had had at least one case of BSE and 14.01 per cent. of all beef herds.

As at 22 April, the proportion of herds in each region in Scotland which had had at least one case of BSE was:

Region	Incidence per cent.
Borders	26.97
Central	16.08
Dumfries	33.85
Fife	29.67
Grampian	22.24
Highland	8.24
Lothian	24.85
Strathclyde	20.95
Tayside	25.83
Islands	4.67

The information is not recorded by age of herd.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will now publish the papers discussed by the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee. [23839]

Mrs. Browning: Many of the papers discussed by the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee contain interim reports on research, medical case reports and commercial information provided in confidence. It would not be appropriate to make such information publicly available. Indeed, to do so would harm the working of SEAC, as people would be unwilling to provide it with much important information.

Dr. Wright: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the minutes and proceedings of the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee since its inception in 1990. [23767]

Mrs. Browning: Much of the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee's discussions, as recorded in the minutes, cover interim reports on research, medical case reports and commercial information. It would be inappropriate to make this information publicly available. To require this information to be published could make people reluctant to provide this committee with material, which could seriously harm its ability to make well judged and timely recommendations to the Government.

The Government will continue to publish the statements made by SEAC outlining its advice to Government and the reasons for that advice.

Beef Cattle Producers

Miss Emma Micholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has for differentiated compensation payments to provide market values to producers of beef cattle. [26133]

Mrs. Browning: In respect of animals coming to slaughter at 30 months or over, my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food announced on 16 April that a market support measure would come into effect in the week beginning 29 April. The basic premium will be equivalent to the cull cow price, but a supplement in respect of steers and heifers will be available for six months. This will be set at no less that 25p/kg for the first four weeks of the scheme.

Fur Farms

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many times officials of the State Veterinary Service have observed the killing of mink and arctic fox on fur farms during the last 12 months; and what method of killing was used in each case. [26429]

Mrs. Browning: Officers of the State Veterinary Service have monitored the slaughter of farmed mink on one occasion in the last 12 months. The method of slaughter used was exposure to carbon monoxide.

There is no requirement to register fox farms. However, I am not aware of any in England and Wales.

Common Fisheries Policy

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans the Council of Ministers has to consider the option of limiting the number of days spent at sea by fishing vessels in the renegotiation of the EU common fisheries policy. [26500]

Mr. Baldry: The option of limiting days at sea already exists in the context of implementing member states' multi-annual guidance programmes for fleet capacity reduction. Negotiations on a further series of programmes will be taking place in the Council later this year, but the Commission has still to make proposals for this.

Fishing (Scientific Teams)

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what funds his Department allocated to the scientific teams attached to the monitoring of fish stocks and the regulation of fishing quotas in (a) 1992, (b) 1993, (c) 1994 and (d) 1995. [26501]

Mr. Baldry: Expenditure by the Ministry's Directorate of Fisheries Research for these purposes was as follows:

1992–93: £4.3 million

1993–94: £4.4 million

1994–95: £4.3 million

1995–96: £4.5 million (forecast outturn).

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many farm animals have been exported, by species, from Britain for (a) further fattening and (b) slaughter in each year since 1989. [26431]

Mrs. Browning: The table shows total recorded exports of live farm animals by species, as recorded in the Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom. It is not possible to identify precisely whether the animals were exported for fattening or slaughter. However, the hon. Member may wish to refer to "The Business Monitor" MA20 and MA21 series, available in the Library of the House, which provides more detail on recorded overseas trade statistics, within which live animal trade can be found.

[1] Data are provisional.

Ostriches and Emus

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what methods are used to kill ostriches and emus in the United Kingdom; and which methods are approved by his Department. [26430]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave to the hon. Member for Glanford and Scunthorpe (Mr. Morley) on 21 March 1996, Official Report, column 314.

Aggressive and Disruptive Children

Ms Corston: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research has been (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated by his Department on the nutritional and dietary aspects of aggressive and disruptive behaviour in children. [26440]

Mrs. Browning: No work has been commissioned by my Department on the nutritional and dietary aspects of aggressive and disruptive behaviour. However, MAFF's food research requirements document 1997–98 invites research proposals in the following area:

"To what extent can hyperactivity and other behavioural problems be traced to food and food ingredients."

The Food Advisory Committee has also recently requested that a review of the scientific literature on links between hyperactivity and food or food additive intolerance be conducted. This work is being carried out by the Department of Health's Committee on Toxicity of Chemicals in Food, the Environment and Consumer Products.

HEALTH

Creutzfield-Jakob Disease

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the possibility that CJD in humans is linked to scrapie in sheep; and if he will make a statement. [25463]

Mr. Horam: The possibility that scrapie in sheep might be a cause of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease in humans was examined by the Southwood working party in 1989. The working party concluded that there was no evidence for this and, in particular, that

"scrapie has been endemic in Great Britain for centuries without there being any evidence to show an incidence of CJD higher than the international average in the human population."

Paragraph 3.7.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the human CJD victims regularly ate lamb and mutton; and if he will make a statement. [25457]

Mr. Horam: The latest data on the meat-eating of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease cases was published in the fourth annual report of the National CJD surveillance unit, August 1995—page 16—copies of which are available in the Library.

Broadmoor Hospitals

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of (a) men and (b) women who were detained in Broadmoor hospital as at 30 March. [25574]

Mr. Bowis: A total of 374 men and 91 women were detained in Broadmoor hospital under powers in the Mental Health Act 1983 on 1 April 1996.

British Steel

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total value of commercial orders placed by his Department with British Steel plc in each year from 1988 to 1995. [25814]

Mr. Horam: Commercial orders placed with British Steel plc by the Department of Health during the period 1988 to 1995 were as follows:

1994–95: £56,400

1995–96: £343,215

Drugs

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his calculation of total costs in real terms and the total number of prescriptions for drugs issued in each of the past five years. [26281]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The table shows the annual number of prescriptions dispensed in the community in England between 1990–91 and 1994–95 and their total cost, including dispensing fees, in real terms.

Year	Total number of prescriptions dispensed (thousands)	Total cost of drugs and appliances including dispensing fees (£ millions)
1990–91	396,580	3,074
1991–92	415,370	3,206
1992–93	432,370	3,469
1993–94	455,320	3,725

Year	Total number of prescriptions dispensed (thousands)	Total cost of drugs and appliances including dispensing fees (£ millions)
1994–95	467,790	3,931

1. The number of prescriptions are rounded to the nearest thousand and include items personally administered and prescriptions dispensed by chemists, appliance contractors and dispensing doctors. It also includes prescriptions written by hospital doctors but dispensed in the community.
2. The costs relate to gross pharmaceutical services expenditure (drugs, medicines, appliances and dispensing fees) and is rounded to the nearest £million.

Tampons

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what proposals he has to designate tampons as a sterile product similar to medical dressings; [26532]

(2) what proposals he has to reintroduce the Tampon (Safety) Bill; [26522]

(3) if he will bring forward proposals to improve the safety of tampons. [26531]

Mr. Horam: Since 1984, the Association of Sanitary Protection Manufacturers has operated a voluntary prior notification scheme for tampons. Under the scheme, all new products are submitted to the Department of Health for assessment of their safety. I have no proposals to introduce a tampon safety Bill.

Complaints Procedures

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to publicise the new national health service complaints procedures among users of the service. [26362]

Mr. Horam: A supply of public information leaflets and posters was sent to all national health service trusts, family health service authorities, district health authorities, community health councils and family health services practitioners for use from 1 April when the new system was implemented. In addition, leaflets and posters have been supplied to all citizens advice bureaux, main public libraries and health information service outlets. The leaflet will also be available shortly in the 11 most commonly used ethnic minority languages.

Children's Hospices

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children's hospices there are in the Greater London area; and what responsibility he has for the funding of such hospices. [26312]

Mr. Bowis: I understand that the first children's hospice to be based in the Greater London area is at an advanced stage of planning. Recurrent funding has been included in annual financial allocations to health authorities, to enable them to commission services from children's hospices to serve the needs of their resident populations.

Management Cost Reductions

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish, by health authority, the severance costs incurred in order to achieve the 1996–97 management cost reduction targets. [26318]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Serco Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what contracts his Department and his agencies have with Serco Ltd.; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [26681]

Mr. Horam: There is no record of the Department of Health or its agencies having any current contracts with Serco Ltd.

Carers (Recognition of Services) Act 1995

Mr. Purchase: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what additional resources he estimates are required to meet the needs identified by the Carers (Recognition and Services) Act 1995; and what plans he has to make such resources available. [26355]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Croydon, North-West (Mr. Wicks) on 1 March, columns 758–59.

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Committee on Safety of Medicines had considered the safety of oral contraceptives containing desogestrel or gestodene at its meetings subsequent to 13 October 1995. [26603]

Mr. Malone: Yes, important safety issues are kept under regular review by the committee.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whose staff drafted the letter of 18 October 1995 relating to oral contraceptives containing desogestrel or gestodene. [26600]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 25 March, column 428.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column 184, if the hon. Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville) consulted him before authorising the letter of 18 October 1995. [26604]

Mr. Malone: Disclosure of information such as that requested would be in breach of the long-established convention, observed by successive Governments, protecting the confidentiality of the internal decision-making process.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report column 184, on what date the hon. Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville) authorised the issuing of the letter of 18 October 1995 relating to desogestrel and gestodene. [26605]

Mr. Malone: On 16 October 1995.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column

185, what external legal advice was sought prior to the referral to the Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products on 11 October 1995. [26608]

Mr. Malone: No external legal advice was sought prior to the United Kingdom's request of 11 October 1995 for this issue to be discussed at the Committee of Proprietary Medicinal Products meeting of 17 to 18 October 1995.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if a referral of matters relating to combined oral contraceptives containing desopestrel or gestodene was made to the Law Officers in terms of paragraphs 22(i) or 22(ii)(c) of "Questions of Procedure for Ministers" of May 1992, prior to the issuing of the letter of 18 October 1995. [26607]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 2 April, column 185.

Committee on Safety of Medicines

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions in 1995 travelling expenses for members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines were paid for travel to the United Kingdom from overseas. [26606]

Mr. Malone: Once.

Paediatric Intensive Care Beds

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the number of refused admissions to paediatric intensive care beds in England between 1 January and 22 April. [26806]

(2) if he will make a statement on the number of paediatric intensive care beds, excluding high dependency beds or coronary care beds, in England; [26807]

(3) if he will make a statement on the number of admissions to paediatric intensive care beds in England between 1 Janaury and 22 April. [26808]

Mr. Horam: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has asked the chief executive of the national health service to report to him on paediatric intensive care by the end of April. Information for this report is still being collated.

Read Codes

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the state of progress of the Read codes system development; how much has been spent on the Loughborough centre for the development of Read codes; and if he will list the different applications of the Read codes according to progress achieved. [26836]

Mr. Horam: A project to develop version 3 of Read codes, extending version 2 currently used in general practitioner practices to cover all national health service environments, particularly the acute sector, commenced in 1992. The two-year project to identify all new medical terms was completed in April 1994, that for professions allied to medicine in October 1994, and that for nursing terms in April 1995. This involved 55 working groups and over 2,000 clinicians at a total cost of £3.7 million.

A programme of projects has now commenced to pilot the new version 3 in a variety of environments including the acute sector. Previous versions, for example 4 Byte, version 2, continue to be fully supported by the Loughborough-based NHS centre for coding and classification and are in use in about 7,000 GP practices and about 170 NHS trusts.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will place a copy in the Library of the independent inquiry into the departmental delay in instituting parliamentary authority for the payment of general practitioner fundholders' management allowances between 1 April 1991 and 1 April 1995; and if he will make a statement; [26843]

(2) if he will specify the nature of the independent inquiry into the departmental delay in providing suitable parliamentary authority for the payment of management allowances for general practitioner fundholders between 1991 and 1995; who carried the inquiry; how the appointment was made; how much it cost; on what dates it commenced and was completed; and what disciplinary consequences flowed from it. [26842]

Mr. Malone: The internal inquiry into the events which led to the extra-statutory payment of management allowances to general practitioner fundholders between 1991–95 was established in June 1995. It was undertaken by Mr. Strachan Heppell, a former deputy secretary in the Department of Health. The terms of reference were:

> "To establish by studying all the relevant papers and by interviewing the relevant members of staff how management allowances came to be paid to GP Fundholders from 1991–95 without legal authority; to draw out any lessons that can be learned and need to be applied across the Department of Health; and to report."

The report of the inquiry, which was conducted at no additional cost to the Department, was received in January 1996. Its conclusions and recommendations have been fully accepted and are being implemented.

The report contains internal advice which it would not be appropriate to publish. I am arranging for a memorandum to be prepared setting out the findings, conclusions and recommendations of the report. I will send a copy to the hon. Member, and place a copy in the Library.

Yorkshire Regional Health Authority

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the hon. Member for Leeds, Central can expect an answer to his question of 19 March on the companies involved in the purchase of the former headquarters of the Yorkshire regional health authority at Harrogate. [26760]

Mr. Malone: The reply was given on 23 April.

Ambulance Call-outs (Kirklees and Wakefield)

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average number of call-outs per week since the beginning of 1996 for ambulances operating out of each of the ambulance stations in Kirklees and Wakefield; and what was the average response time of these call-outs. [26761]

Mr. Horam: West Yorkshire Metropolitan ambulance service national health service trust has consistently met and exceeded that national patients charter standard for ambulance response times. Figures for 1994–95 are set out in the NHS performance guide, copies of which are in the Library. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. Alan Titterington, chairman of the trust, for further details.

ENVIRONMENT

Smoking (Public Places)

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) to what extent the targets for effective smoking policy in public places have been met in the last 12 months; [26593]

(2) what steps he will take to improve the voluntary imposition to smoking controls in public places; [26578]

(3) what plans he has to introduce statutory protection of the public from passive smoking. [26579]

Mr. Clappison: In 1992, the Government's target was that 80 per cent. of public places should have effective smoking policies by the end of 1994. The report "Smoking in Public Places, 2nd Survey Report," a copy of which has been put in the Library of the House of Commons, shows for eight categories of establishment the percentage with an effective smoking policy are:

Category	Percentage
Shops	63
Advice/money transactions	48
Travel	38
Health	71
Formal education	77
Informal education	62
Food/entertainment	37
Sports/recreation	48

The report relates to a survey carried out in 1995. The Government's position is that non-smoking should be the norm in all enclosed public spaces visited by the public, with facilities as appropriate for those who wish to smoke. In 1991, the Department of the Environment, jointly with other Departments, published a code of practice on smoking in public places which provides practical guidance to owners and managers on implementing suitable policies on smoking. The Government will continue to make copies of that code freely available. The essence of a voluntary approach to smoking in public places is that the public should make their views known without Government interference.

The report shows that the voluntary approach is working, albeit more slowly than had been hoped. The Government had no plans to introduce statutory protection of the public from passive smoking beyond that which already exists.

DEFENCE

Government Contracts

Mr. George: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the annual cost to his Department of allowing defence companies to claim the costs of marketing their products abroad as overheads on non-competitive Government contracts; [26184]

(2) what is the annual cost to his Department of allowing the costs of entertainment to be included in the overheads on non-competitive Government contracts by companies claiming the costs of marketing their products abroad. [26185]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The financial information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, these costs are the subject of detailed negotiations with individual companies, to ensure that they comply with the criteria laid down in Government accounting conventions for the pricing of non-competitive contacts. Briefly, such costs must be necessarily incurred and be fair and reasonable; they must conform to an appropriate classification into "product groups", which must be agreed by my Department and they must not relate directly to a contract, in which case they would be directly charged to that contract and not be attributed to overheads.

Cyprus (Service Personnel)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 17 April, Official Report, columns 501–3, in respect of the soldiers convicted of killing a Danish tour guide in Cyprus, if he has conveyed to the Danish Government the content of the reply; and if he will make a statement. [26551]

Mr. Soames: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence wrote to the Danish Minister of Defence, Mr. Hans Haekkerup, on 3 April to make clear the Army's abhorrence of the disgraceful conduct of the three convicted riflemen.

Marine Services Organisation

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Worcester (Mr. Luff) of 28 February, Official Report, columns 553–54, on the market testing of the Marine Services Organisation, what were the reasons for non-compliance with the management requirements of the task which led to the elimination of the in-house team. [26693]

Mr. Soames: The in-house team's bid for the ports element of the marine services market test was ruled to be non-compliant since the proposed management arrangements were judged to be inadequate for the effective control of the task and to carry an unacceptably high risk of failure, with consequent financial and operational penalties to my Department. Specific areas of concern included the absence, under the in-house bid team's proposals, of a single focal point at each naval base responsible and accountable for all aspects of the provision of ports services. In addition, levels of delegation to junior staff were judged to exceed what was considered desirable.

There would also have been no acceptable system of tasking and prioritising the resources available at each base from the outset of the new operation. The risk assessment associated with these management weaknesses took into account the increase in the marine service tasks to be performed and the reduction of resources with which to undertake them; circumstances which underline the need for effective management arrangements to be put in place. The in-house bid team was ruled non-compliant accordingly and eliminated from this element of the market-test competition.

Land Mines

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent discussions he has had with the chiefs of staff concerning the military utility of anti-personnel land mines. [27025]

Mr. Soames: It is not normal practice to give details of discussions between Ministers and their advisers. Our policy on anti-personnel mines reflects our judgment of the balance to be struck between humanitarian goals and the continuing needs of our armed forces until there is international agreement on a total ban on such mines, or viable alternatives are developed.

Kaymar Telephone Numbers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which of his Department's offices used telephone numbers (a) 01–374–0075 and (b) 01–434–1162 in each year since 1970. [26694]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the answer which I gave on 18 April to my hon. Friend the Member for Eltham (Mr. Bottomley), Official Report, column 583.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Machine Guns

Mr. George Robertson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the total number of machine guns and semi-automatic rifles for which import licences were granted for each of the last five years; and if he will break down the figures by (a) domestic police and armed forces end use and (b) others. [26427]

Mr. Oppenheim: DTI licences for the import of machine guns and semi-automatic rifles are issued only to those individuals or companies who have a valid authority, granted at the discretion of either the Home Secretary, the Scottish Secretary or the Northern Ireland Secretary, to hold or to trade in such weapons.

The numbers of these types of firearms for which import licences were specifically applied for each of the past five years are as follows:

Year
1991: £26,709
1992: £ 7,908
1993: £14,571
1994: £23,166
1995: £31,233.

It should, however, be borne in mind that some licences are not used or are only partly used.

It is not possible from import licensing data to provide details of the number of weapons destined for police possession. The armed forces are exempt from the Firearms Act and from DTI import licensing.

HOME DEPARTMENT

KPMG

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the consultancies let to KPMG in each of the last three years and the contract fee in each case. [25559]

Mr. Howard: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to him on 25 April, Official Report, columns 261-62.

Prisoners (HIV)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many HIV positive cases were recorded for prison inmates in England and Wales during 1995. [26545]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 26 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your Question asking about the number of HIV positive inmates during 1995.

Thirty three new cases of HIV positive inmates were notified by establishments to Prison Service headquarters in 1995. An average of 69 inmates were known to be HIV positive at any one time during that year.

Prisoners (Drugs)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many inmates have been put on report in each prison in England and Wales for having in their possession unauthorised drugs, since 1 January. [26304]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 26 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked met to reply to your recent Question concerning the number of inmates who have been put on report in each prison in England and Wales for having in their possession unauthorised drugs, since 1 January.

Provisional figures for the numbers found guilty at adjudication of unauthorised possession of controlled drugs are shown in the attached table.

Walton Prison

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which wings in HMP Walton are currently closed; which wings at this establishment are planned to be closed in the near future; what are the reasons for each of the closures; and if, once the areas closed and planned to be closed have re-opened, there will be no slopping out. [26436]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 23 April 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 26 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the closure of wings at Liverpool prison.

Liverpool's H Wing closed on Saturday 23 March 1996 and is awaiting major refurbishment, including the provision of integral sanitation. All other wings at Liverpool have been refurbished and include such sanitation. There is no slopping out at Liverpool or at any other establishment in England and Wales.

Risley Prison

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Minister with responsibility for prisons last visited Risley prison. [26334]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 24 April 1996]: I visited Risley prison on Wednesday 10 April.

HEALTH

Chief Executives (East Sussex)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors underlay the provision of £700,000 for the pensions following the early retirement of the chief executives of East Sussex health authority and the East Sussex family health services authority. [26423]

Mr. Malone: I understand that these pension provisions were made in accordance with the national health service superannuation scheme and are a matter for East Sussex, Brighton and Hove health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the authority, Mr. Julian Wellesley, for details.

St. George's Hospital, Tooting

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) on how many occasions in 1995 patients were turned away from St. George's hospital, Tooting, because the bed capacity of the hospital was complete; and if he will make a statement; [26582]

(2) What has been the number of staff redundancies amongst nursing staff at St. George's hospital within the last 12 months. [26586]

(3) how many patients were operated on privately at St. George's hospital Tooting, after referral by a general practitioner to that hospital, during 1995; [26588]

(4) how many operations were cancelled at St. George's hospital during 1995; [26581]

(5) how many patients have had to wait for four hours or more in the accident and emergency services at St. George's hospital, Tooting, as a result of a shortage of hospital beds since 1 January 1996; [26583]

(6) how many patients had to wait overnight in the accident and emergency services at St. George's hospital, Tooting, during 1995; [26585]

(7) what was the average length of time that (a) a general practitioner fundholder patient and (b) a patient of a non-fundholding general practitioner waited for an orthopaedic operation at St. George's hospital, Tooting, once a general practitioner has made referral, in 1995; [26587]

(8) on how many occasions in 1995 St. George's hospital, Tooting, was accepting only emergency bed service referrals. [26580]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact Dr. Elizabeth Vallance, chairman of St. George's Healthcare national health service trust, for details.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what discussion has taken place between his Department and the NHS trust management of St. George's hospital, Tooting, regarding any future possible bed closures. [26556]

Mr. Malone: The National Health Service Executive holds regular business planning meetings with national health service trusts, including St. George's Healthcare NHS trust. No proposals for future bed closures have emerged from those meetings. The trust opened 16 additional beds on 1 April, and plans to open two additional paediatric intensive care beds later this year.

Funding (Doncaster)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the amount by which current national health service funding in the Doncaster area is under target; what action he plans to take to meet the target; and if he will make a statement. [26646]

Mr. Horam: Doncaster health authority is £2.8 million or 2.2 per cent. under target in 1996–97.

We plan to move all health authorities to their weighted capitation target as soon as it is practicable.

GP Fundholding

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the estimated total cost in 1996, 1997 and 1998 of additional payments to health authority managers who recruit general practitioners to become fundholders; [26795]

(2) what new financial incentives are to be offered to health authority managers to persuade general practitioners to become fundholders. [26794]

Mr. Malone: Performance-related pay is awarded at the discretion of employing authorities, who decide locally what objectives are set for particular posts.

Sheffield Centre for Health and Related Research

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding was provided by the Trent regional health authority, prior to its dissolution, to the Sheffield centre for health and related research. [26812]

Mr. Malone: Trent regional health authority provided the following funding to the Sheffield centre for health and related research.

Purpose	1994–95	1995–96	1996–97
Operational research	56,000	130,000	70,000
Purchasing effective care	—	30,000	16,000

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what employees at the Sheffield centre for health and related research are paid directly or indirectly by funds made available through the national health service executive or by other NHS funds; and if, in each case, he will list their name, current salary and remuneration package. [26813]

Mr. Malone: The Department of Health and National Health Service Executive fund some research and development work carried out at the Sheffield centre for health and related research, through the university of Sheffield. The centre is part of the University of Sheffield. Current information about its employees and their remuneration is a matter for the university.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which staff from the Trent regional health authority transferred to take up posts at the Sheffield centre for health and related research, or took up posts at that centre consequent on the dissolution of the regional health authority. [26847]

Mr. Malone: Three staff formerly employed by Trent regional health authority's operational research division took up employment with the Sheffield centre for health and related research in 1994.

Trent Regional Health Authority

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 16 April, Official Report, column 477, what exceptions were made in providing redundancy terms more favourable than those listed in section 45 of the General Whitley Council handbook or circular HSG (94) 18, following the dissolution of the Trent regional health authority; in each case, what were the circumstances in which this was done; and by how much the terms agreed exceeded those set out in the above guidance. [26848]

Mr. Malone: No exceptions were made.

Departmental File Records

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the five-year rule for keeping and destroying departmental file records was introduced; if he will now review its usefulness; if the five-year rule applies to the departmental solicitors' records; what representations he has had from the National Audit Office concerning the destruction of five-year-old records; when the records pertaining to the extra-statutory payments for general practitioner fundholders' management allowances were destroyed; and if he will make a statement. [27070]

Mr. Malone: Since the 1960s the guiding principle for Government record keeping is for Departments routinely to review the need to retain records once their business use has ceased. This is set out in detail in the Public Record Office's "Manual of Records Administration", a copy of which is in the Library.

Following a thorough review of departmental records management in 1995–96, all important Department of Health information is kept for at least two years and the need to keep it is reviewed when it is between two and five years old. These procedures apply to all departmental records including those for departmental solicitors.

No representation have been received from the National Audit Office on this issue.

Health Authority Funding

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out in descending order the funding allocation per head of population to each health authority in England. [26890]

Mr. Horam: The information will be placed in the Library.

Dental Treatment

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received concerning local reduced availability of NHS dental treatment; and if he will make a statement. [26979]

Mr. Malone: We receive letters from hon. Members and from the public about access to general dental services. Health authorities can advise patients on where best to seek national health service dental treatment locally.

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set out in descending order, by health authority in England, the incidence of (a) dental caries in five-year-olds, (b) adults with no natural teeth and (c) oral cancer. [26891]

Mr. Malone: The table shows the latest information on the incidence of oral cancer in each of the former regional health authorities in descending order. Information on dental caries in five-year-olds and adults with no natural teeth is not available in the form requested. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Peckham (Ms Harman) on 16 February at column 737, for information on the mean number of decayed, missing and filled teeth of five-year-old children in each health authority in 1993–94.

[1] Oral cancer is defined as: cancer of the lip (International Classification of Diseases, 9th revision, 140), tongue (ICD9 141), gum (ICD9 143), floor of the mouth (ICD9 145), unspecified parts of the mouth (ICD9 145), oropharynx (ICD9 146), nasopharynx (ICD9 147), and hypopharynx (ICD9 148). Cancers of the salivary glands (ICD9 142) have been excluded as they are not normally grouped with oral cancers.

Manchester Health Authority

Mr. Eastham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what factors were taken into account in making the current year's allocation of funding to Manchester health authority; and if he will make a statement. [26892]

Mr. Horam: In 1996–97 we have maintained continuity and stability of funding by ensuring that no health authority lost resources. All health authorities received a cash uplift of 2.73 per cent. for Manchester health authority this meant a cash increase of £6.2 million.

We have also ensured greater equity in resource allocation by using growth principally to move under-target health authorities closer to target. As Manchester health authority was more than 10 per cent. over target it received no allocation for growth in 1996–97.

Read Codes

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when the business case was completed for the development funding of Read codes; when Treasury approval was obtained for the scheme; what is the total discontinuation compensation payment agreed under the terms for the purchase of the rights from Mr. Read; what payment has been made to (a) Loughborough university and (b) Mr. Read under the rights purchase agreement; and if he will make a statement. [27065]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State (Mr. Sackville) gave him on 18 October 1995 at column 280–81.

Details of negotiations conducted on behalf of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health are confidential.

Part of the agreement to make Read clinical codes crown copyright is that the purchase price is not divulged to third parties.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Exports

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the revisions to his Department's objectives for export promotion since those listed in table 1.3 of "Overseas Trade Service: Assistance to Exporters", a report by the Comptroller and Auditor General, HC 293; and if he will make a statement. [26703]

Mr. Hanley: Our objectives and achievements, including for trade and investment promotion, are contained in the departmental report for 1996, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

The National Audit Office report (HC 293) on services to exporters provided by the FCO and DTI through their joint export promotion arm Overseas Trade Services shows that the FCO's overseas posts provide valuable assistance to existing and potential British exporters and investors overseas. The NAO concluded that the OTS services it examined in four south-east Asian countries had helped introduce around 1,000 British companies to those markets over two years. These services, which cost around £4.5 million to provide, helped generate additional exports for British companies worth around £345 million: a gearing of almost 1:80.

Serco Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what contracts his Department and his agencies have with Serco Ltd.; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [26680]

Mr. Hanley: This Department and agencies have no contract with Serco Ltd.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the revenue spending estimated by his Department in connection with the private finance initiative for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26632]

Mr. Hanley: We consider the use of private finance as the preferred option for all proposed capital projects. No projects under the private finance initiative scheme have yet been agreed. It is not yet possible to make an accurate estimate of the revenue implications of potential PFI projects.

EU Foreign Affairs Council

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the outcome of the Foreign Affairs Council and the intergovernmental conference ministerial meeting on 22 April. [27169]

Mr. David Davis: The A items listed in document 6507/96, which will be placed in the Libraries of the House as soon as it is available, were approved except item 6 of the former Yugoslavia which became a B item for substantive discussion.

The Council took note of resolution in EP documents 5779/96 (PE–RE–24) and 6210/96 (PE–RE 27). Copies of these documents will be deposited in the Libraries of the House as soon as they are available.

The Council agreed conclusions on former Yugoslavia; the critical dialogue with Iran; and the US /'Helms/Burton' legislation on trade with Cuba.

A declaration on the latest developments in Lebanon and conclusions on the situation in Niger were agreed. The Council also expressed its sympathy for the families of victims of the terrorist attack in Cairo on 18 April.

The Council discussed the MEDA regulation on aid to countries in the Mediterranean. While no agreement was reached at this Council, the presidency expressed hope for agreement during the next Council scheduled for 13 May. Ministers also discussed former Yugoslavia; and Slovenia.

The Council discussed the continuing export ban on British beef products. The Secretary of State underlined the urgent need for progress towards lifting the ban.

In the margins of the Council, partnership and co-operation agreements were signed with Armenia, Azerbaijan and Georgia.

The sixth EU/Gulf Co-operation Council joint Council and ministerial meeting also took place, followed by a dinner. Ministers discussed the prospects for a free trade agreement and agreed to set up a joint EU/GCC working group on regional security in the Gulf.

The second ministerial session of the IGC also took place on 22 April. Ministers considered a range of issues, under the broad heading of "the Citizen and the Union" on the basis of eight questions in a presidency note (doc No. Conf 3843/95) which has been placed in the Library of the House. The issues included: the workings of the justice and home affairs pillar; EU citizenship; fundamental rights; the employment and environment provisions of the treaty; subsidiarity; and transparency.

We reiterated the positions that the UK representative had already set out in the two preceding working party sessions on 1 and 2 and 15 and 16 April, in particular that intergovernmental co-operation was the appropriate model for justice and home affairs and that, in general, this was working well; that businesses, not new treaty provisions on employment, created jobs; that neither strengthening the concept of EU citizenship, nor writing fundamental rights into the treaty which were already protected in national laws would be likely to bring Europe closer to the citizen; and that subsidiarity should be further entrenched in the treaty.

The ministerial session was preceded by an exchange of views with the European Parliament President and two representatives of the European Parliament.

European Bodies (Costs)

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on increases in the costs of (a) the European Union Commission, (b) the EU Country Auditors and (c) the European Court, since 1990; and what are their estimated costs in 1996. [26317]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I have been asked to reply.

I presume my hon. Friend refers to the cost of the European Commission, the European Court of Auditors and the European Court of Justice. The information is provided in the table:

Costs of the European Commission, European Court of Auditors and the European Court of Justice

	1990 (ecu)	1996 (ecu)	Average annual growth (Per cent.)
European Commission	1,505.0	2,696.7	10.3
European Court of Auditors	53.4	56.2	3.1
European Court of Justice	66.9	169.7	17.7

Notes:

1. The figures for 1990 are outturn figures and have been taken from the 1990 European Court of Auditors report. The figures for 1996 are taken from the adopted European Community Budget.

2. The calculation of average annual growth has been based on the outturn for 1990–94 as shown in the relevant European Court of Auditors reports, and planned expenditure for 1995 and 1996 taken from the adopted European Community Budgets for those years.

Mr. Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the estimated cost of the Agriculture Directorate General for 1996; and what is the cost of the Agriculture Commissioner's cabinet. [26316]

Mr. Heathcote-Amory: I have been asked to reply.

I am afraid the 1996 EC budget does not show the information requested. I suggest that my hon. Friend contacts the European Commission direct.

SCOTLAND

Read Codes

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what part-funding contribution his Department has made towards the development of Read codes for computerised health and hospital information systems. [27064]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: The Scottish Office department of health has not made any contribution towards the funding of the development of Read codes.

Historic Scotland (Performance Targets)

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the key performance targets he has set Historic Scotland for 1996–97. [27541]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have set Historic Scotland the following key performance targets for 1996–97:

	Target
Protecting Scotland's Built Heritage
Number of monuments scheduled	370
Weighted number of listed building resurvey units	176
Percentage of scheduled monument consent cases resolved within 12 weeks	81 per cent.
Percentage of listed building consent cases resolved within 28 days	97 per cent.
Number of historic building repair projects newly assisted by grant	145
Total value of grand-assisted repairs in progress	£33.5 million
Backlog of conservation of monuments in care	reduce Promoting and Presenting the Built Heritage
Number of visitors to monuments in care	2.4 million
HS market share compared to major paid heritage attractions in Scotland	47 per cent.
Percentage of satisfied visitors (based on surveys)	95 per cent.
Average spend per visitor	£1.02
Agency management
Percentage efficiency gains/savings on all non-grant expenditure	1.5 per cent.
Total agency income	£9.9 million

Further Education

Mr Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he will publish his report on the discharge of his duties for further education in Scotland as required under section 1 of the Further and Higher Education Scotland (Act) 1972; and if he will make a statement. [27542]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: My right hon Friend's report on further education in Scotland in 1995 has been published today and has been laid before both Houses of Parliament. Copies are available in the Library of the House.

The report, entitled "Further Education in Scotland 1995: Report by the Secretary of State for Scotland" shows that further education colleges have continued to raise standards and that progress has been made in the use of performance indicators as part of their quality assurance arrangements. They continue to make an impressive contribution to the training needs of individuals and of employers and are to be congratulated on the 6 per cent. increase in student activity and 4 per cent. efficiency gains which they achieved in the 1994–95 academic year.

Copyright

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what progress his Department has made towards obtaining a photocopying licence from the copyright licensing agency to ensure compliance with copyright law. [26711]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 25 April 1996]: The Department is discussing detailed arrangements with the copyright licensing agency to determine what, if any, need it has for a licence to ensure compliance with copyright law.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the revenue spending estimated by her Department in connection with the private finance initiative for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26626]

Mr. Robin Squire: The estimated recurrent spending by this Department, including the Employment Service—but not including independent education institutions or local authorities—in connection with projects undertaken through the private finance initiative cannot, yet, be accurately calculated for 1996–97 and 1997–98. None was paid in 1995–96. As the hon. Member will surmise from the answer to her question of 19 April, this Department estimates that a number of projects will come forward over the next few years. I also refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Attercliffe (Mr. Betts) on 6 December, Official Report, column 311.

Local Education Authorities

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what evidence she has indicating whether some local authorities are now delegating a smaller proportion of their budgets to schools in the primary, secondary or special school sectors when compared with 1993. [26790]

Mr. Robin Squire: I will write to my hon. Friend when the local management of schools budget statements produced by local education authorities for 1996–97 have been analysed by the Department.

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will show for each English local education authority (i) the total number of pupils in each authority's (a) primary and (b) secondary schools, (ii) the total number of pupils and percentage at (1) primary and (2) secondary level who are educated outside their home local education authority, (iii) the total number and percentage of pupils in each authority at (x) primary and (y) secondary level who come from another local education authority and (iv) the political control of each local education authority. [26789]

Mr. Robin Squire: The latest available information is shown in the following table:

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in what circumstances claimants of jobseeker's allowance may receive travelling expenses from the Employment Service for the journey that they make to attend the jobcentre for their fortnightly review; and if she will make a statement. [27029]

Mr. Forth: As now, under jobseeker's allowance the Employment Service will not pay travelling expenses to claimants for the journey that they make to the jobcentre for their normal fortnightly attendance.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment in what circumstances an unemployed person may make a new claim for jobseeker's allowance by post; and if she will make a statement. [27032]

Mr. Forth: People wishing to make a new claim for jobseeker's allowance will normally be given an appointment to attend their local jobcentre in person for an interview with an employment officer. This ensures that they have access to the Employment Service's range of services and opportunities at the earliest opportunity. Making a new claim by post will however be allowed when exceptional adverse weather or other local circumstances prevents the jobseeker from the reaching the jobcentre, or when the jobcentre itself is closed to the public due to some exceptional circumstance. Arrangements will then be made for the jobseeker to attend the jobcentre in person for a full interview as soon as the situation allows. Jobseekers who live at a considerable distance from their nearest jobcentre will also be able to make a new claim for JSA by post, if attendance at the jobcentre would require them to be absent from home for more than eight hours. The Employment Service will arrange for them to have a full interview with a visiting officer at a location convenient to their home within four weeks of the date of claim.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to extend the voucher scheme to include all three-year-olds. [26209]

Mr. Robin Squire: It is important to get provision for four-year-olds right before extending the voucher scheme to cover three-year-olds. We will consider such an extension in due course.

School Inspections

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a further statement on future school inspection arrangements. [27496]

Mr. Robin Squire: I refer to the answer I gave on 19 December 1995, Official Report, column 1017. Having consulted Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools on future school inspection arrangements, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has now asked him to consult on more targeted arrangements to come into effect from September 1997 for secondary schools and September 1998 for other schools. The chief inspector expects to initiate this consultation next week.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what estimate he has made of funding to be made available to his Department through the private finance initiative in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26166]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: For the Lord Chancellor's Department, including the Court Service and the Public Trust Office, no funding became available through the private finance initiative in 1995–96. Current estimates suggest that capital spending on projects by the private sector will be £4.6 million in 1996–97 and £27.3 million in 1997–98.

Court Costs

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what were the costs of (a) out-of-court settlements and (b) awards made in court, for each of the last three years and so far this year; and what were the annual legal costs incurred. [26008]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Chris Mullins, dated 26 April 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, has asked me to reply to your Question about costs of cases settled outside court, awards made in court and legal costs.

Unfortunately, information about the size of out of court settlements and awards is not held centrally and could only be obtained at a disproportionate cost. The Court Service does not collect figures for legal costs for all cases.

Council of Europe

Mr. Cox: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the proposal in recommendation 1286 (1996) of the parliamentary assembly of the Council of Europe for a permanent intergovernmental structure to deal with issues relating to children; and if he will make a statement. [26097]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I have been asked to reply. This proposal is still under consideration.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Extradition Warrants

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the procedure by which extradition warrants are prepared and completed in the United Kingdom and transmitted to the relevant authorities in the Irish Republic; and if it is standard procedure for the Irish authorities to confirm the completeness and correctness of documentation prior to its submission to court. [26363]

The Attorney-General: Applications for arrest warrants in the United Kingdom are made on behalf of the relevant police force to a justice of the peace or, in certain cases, to a judge.

The applications are prepared and conducted by the Crown Prosecution Service, or as the case may be, the Crown Solicitor's Office in Northern Ireland. When a warrant is obtained in a case in which extradition is sought from the Republic of Ireland it is personally delivered by the police to their counterparts in the Republic. Thereafter, the matter becomes one for the Irish authorities.

A warrant cannot be executed in the Republic of Ireland until it has been endorsed by a Commissioner of the Garda. In "accusation" cases, there is an additional requirement in that the Commissioner can not endorse the warrant without the authority of the Irish Attorney-General. Under Irish law the Irish Attorney must direct that the warrant not be endorsed unless he is satisfied that there is a clear intention to prosecute based on sufficient evidence. To enable the Irish Attorney to discharge this duty I supply him with a certificate confirming the prosecuting authority's intention to prosecute, a statement detailing the facts of the case and statement of the relevant English law. If the Irish Attorney is satisfied, the warrant is endorsed and the accused is arrested and brought before the court. This additional requirement does not apply where the person named on the warrant has, following an examination of the evidence, been committed for trial or has escaped from custody following conviction.

Extradition

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Attorney-General how many applications for extradition have been submitted to the authorities in the Republic of Ireland in each of the past 10 years for terrorist-related offences; how many in each year have been successful; and how many in each year have been rejected on the basis that they were incorrectly prepared. [25932]

The Attorney-General: Applications for extradition for alleged "terrorist-related offences" have been brought before the Irish courts in 23 cases in the past 10 years. Fifteen of these cases were brought by the authorities in Northern Ireland and eight by the authorities in England.

In five cases the individual concerned has been extradited. In a further five cases the individual has fled following a successful application or appeal and in two of these has subsequently been arrested in the UK.

Extradition has been refused on the ground of defects in the papers in three cases. Two cases were refused in 1986 on the ground that the warrants were defective and one case was refused in 1996 on the ground that the original warrant was not produced.

In seven cases the individual has successfully appealed against an extradition order and in three further cases appeals are pending.

Details are not included of cases not yet before the courts.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Occupational Asthma

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims under the industrial injury scheme were made by people suffering from occupational asthma; how many of these claims were (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful broken down by region and gender in each case in the past five years. [25781]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the tables. A breakdown by gender is available only in relation to medical boarding and is set out in tables 2 to 5. Industrial injuries disablement benefit is not normally payable for assessments below 14 per cent.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many full assessments have been made where the absent parent is in receipt of income support (a) in total since April 1993 and (b) in each year since April 1993; [26566]

(2) in how many cases awaiting full assessment the absent parent is in receipt of income support. [26567]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Frank Field, dated 25 April 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Questions to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency maintenance assessments.

The number of cases awaiting assessment in which the absent parent is in receipt of Income Support is not known. The Agency is unable to identify the benefit status of the absent parent before completion of the maintenance assessment process, since there may be considerations that affect the benefit status between the time of receipt of the relevant maintenance form and the completion of a full maintenance assessment.

However, the number of full maintenance assessments where the absent parent is in receipt of Income Support is available from a 5% scan of the live cases on the Child Support Computer System. As at 31 March 1995 there were 88,900 absent parents in receipt of Income Support and as at 30 November 1995 there were 103,900.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many full maintenance assessments were made by the Child Support Agency (a) in total since April 1993 and (b) in each year since April 1993; [26558]

(2) how many cases have been cleared without a full maintenance assessment having been made by the CSA (a) in total since April 1993, (b) each year since April 1993; [26559]

(3) into what categories cases cleared without assessment by the CSA are placed; and what are the numbers in such categories (a) since April 1993 and (b) each year since April 1993; [26560]

(4) how many cases of good cause for not co-operating with the Child Support Agency were accepted (a) in total since April 1993 and (b) in each year since April 1993; [26561]

(5) how many reduced benefit directions have been made (a) in total since April 1993 and (b) in each year since April 1993. [26562]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Frank Field, dated 25 April 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency maintenance assessments and good cause decisions.

The number of full and interim maintenance assessments made by the Agency from April 1993 to March 1996 is shown on the attached table. The table also shows the number of cases cleared due to good cause accepted, reduced benefit directions imposed and other clearances.

The Agency does not have a business need to record routinely all the specific reasons why a case is cleared other than by a maintenance assessment, so we cannot provide a more detailed breakdown of these cases. Other reasons for clearances without a maintenance assessment include the following:-

benefit ceased—for a variety of reasons

MAF withdrawal: including reconciliation cases and those where the PWC has requested cancellation (e.g. in private cases) no qualifying child

no jurisdiction

death of AP, PWC or qualifying child

Information on reduced benefit directions imposed became available in 1995–96; prior to this figures were not collected.

You may be interested to know that information for 1994–95 and 1995–96 on full maintenance assessments, interim maintenance assessments, other clearances, good cause accepted and reduced benefit directions implemented is shown in the CSA Statistical Information placed in the House of Commons Library every month.

I hope this is helpful.

Number of cases with:—	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96	Total from April 1993
Full maintenance assessments	132,139	187,220	110,187	429,546
Without full maintenance assessments (interim)	73,303	63,616	17,689	154,608
Other clearances	130,790	317,313	198,978	647,081
Good cause accepted	31,749	41,666	38,963	[1]112,378
Reduced benefit directions imposed	n/a	n/a	27,478	[1]27,478

[1] These cases form part of the 'Other clearances'.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cases have there been where the parent with care has made no contact with the CSA after issue of the maintenance application form. [26563]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Frank Field, dated 25 April 1996.

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency maintenance application forms.

Full details of the numbers of parents with care who have currently made no contact with the Agency after the issue of a maintenance application form are not available as local Field offices (where the bulk of pre maintenance assessment work is now carried out) do not have access to the full functionality of the Child Support Computer System (CSCS).
However, all CSCS functions will be provided to the Field offices on a phased basis beginning later this year.

The figures that are available show that in April 1995, the six Child Support Agency Centres had 98,000 such cases, and this has now reduced to 68,000.

In all cases, other than the 16,000 cases that were temporarily deferred at the beginning of 1995, where a maintenance application form is not returned, the Agency takes the following steps:

Where a prescribed benefit is in payment, after 14 days the Agency issues a reminder. If there is still no contact from the parent with care, the Agency tries to make contact to establish if a Good Cause investigation is appropriate. If there is still no contact from the parent with care or Good Cause is not accepted, a reduced benefit direction is considered.

Where a private client does not return a maintenance application form, the requirement to cooperate condition does not apply. In such cases the Agency sends a reminder to the client after two weeks; if there is still no reply, the Agency can take no further action and no follow up contact is made.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many parents with care who had not returned their maintenance application forms to the CSA had their cases deferred in December 1994. [26564]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Frank Field, dated 25 April 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency deferred cases.

16,000 cases were referred during the period January to March 1995 as a result of the parent with care not returning their maintenance application form (MAF) where the MAF had been issued before July 1994. These cases, where action has been deferred at the present time, should not be confused with the deferred take-on of pre-Agency existing income support cases.

The cases where a maintenance application form has not been fully completed or returned have had action on them deferred until further notice. However, they remain on the books and can be re-started at the request of the client.

I hope this is helpful.

Income Support

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many income support cases deferred in December 1994 have yet to have their case taken on; [26565]

(2) how many of the parents with care whose cases have been deferred are estimated to have ex-partners who are on income support. [26568]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Frank Field, dated 25 April 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency cases deferred in December 1994.

It is not possible to give an exact figure for the approximately 300,000 Income Support cases deferred in December 1994 that are still outstanding. To obtain this figure a clerical examination of all the deferred cases would have to be made to find the number of cases awaiting action.

However, the most recent estimate, based on a sampling exercise, suggests that the number outstanding has reduced to around 200,000.

This reduction is due to a number of reasons. The Agency recommenced take on of these cases in November 1995, in line with the agreement made with the Secretary of State to recommence take on by December 1995; also, in some cases where Income Support has ceased and the parent with care has made a fresh application for benefit, the Agency will have become involved and these cases will have been taken on; in other cases the parent with care will have requested that the Agency take on the case and this will have been done; finally, some clients will no longer be claiming Income Support.

It is not known precisely how many of the deferred cases have ex-partners who are on Income Support; we will not know their circumstances until we have received a completed maintenance enquiry form. However, experience tells us that a significant number of the absent parents involved are in receipt of Income Support, thus providing little incentive for the parent with care to pursue the case with the Agency.

I hope this is helpful.

WALES

Private Health Diagnosis

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairmen of Welsh health authorities and trusts concerning the efficacy of the guidelines for private practice diagnosis followed by NHS treatment; what recent representations he has received concerning the level of private practice diagnosis preceding NHS treatment; what statistics he has collated on the trend in such patterns of procedure; what assessment he has made of its impact on NHS waiting lists and times; and if he will make a statement. [25393]

Mr. Hague: None. It is for the management of NHS trusts to ensure that consultants have agreed up-to-date job plans which set out their fixed commitments and other responsibilities to the NHS, and that the rules regarding private work are observed.

Further and Higher Education

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what were the staff-to-student ratios in further education in Wales in (a) 1980–81, (b) 1994–95 and (c) on the latest data for which figures are available; [26469]

(2) what was the staff-to-student ratios in higher education in Wales in (i) 1980–81 (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) the latest date for which figures are available. [26476]

Mr. Richards: Full information is not available for the years requested. Information for the earliest and latest years available is shown in the following table.

Ratios of full-time equivalent student numbers to full-time equivalent academic and academic related staff numbers in Wales

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the institutions of Welsh higher education categorised by their financial status as determined by the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales. [26470]

Mr. Richards: Information about the financial status of individual institutions is a confidential matter between the individual institutions and the funding council. Nine institutions are currently designated as being in a satisfactory financial position, four are marginal; and one is unsatisfactory.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in (a) cash and (b) real terms the capital funding of Welsh higher education institutions in 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96 and indicate in (i) cash and (ii) real terms the amount of capital funding per student. [26472]

Mr. Richards: The amount of capital funding for Welsh higher education institutions in 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96 in cash and real terms was as follows:

£ million

1993–94		1994–95		1995–96
Cash	November 1994 prices	Cash	November 1994 prices	Cash	November 1994 prices
21.534	21.930	30.893	30.893	25.297	24.620

The amount of capital funding per student is as follows:

1993–94		1994–95		1995–96
Cash	November 1994 prices	Cash	November 1994 prices	Cash	November 1994 prices
376	383	493	493	392	382

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of Stew for Wales if he will list in (a) cash and (b) real terms the amount of capital funding he plans to make available over the next three years and indicate in (i) cash and (ii) real terms the amount of capital funding per student in each of these years. [26473]

Mr. Richards: The indicative capital allocation for higher education for 1996–97, 1997–98 and 1998–99 in cash and real terms is as follows:

£ million

1996–97		1997–98		1998–99
Cash	November 1994 prices	Cash	November 1994 prices	Cash	November 1994 prices
23.681	22.430	21.158	19.552	14.538	13.139

The amount of capital funding per student is as follows:

£ million

1996–97		1997–98		1998–99
Cash	November 1994 prices	Cash	November 1994 prices	Cash	November 1994 prices
363	344	326	301	222	200

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the number of students in higher education in Wales who did not complete their studies in each of the last three years; and what estimate he has made of the impact of the changes in the value of awards made to students and the development of the student loan scheme on the student drop-out rate. [26474]

Mr. Richards: The information requested is not currently available but it is being collected by the higher education statistics agency and will be available in due course.

The introduction of loans has given students more money for their living costs. Borrowers do not have to begin repaying their loans until at least the April after they leave their courses, and then only if and when their income exceeds 85 per cent. of average earnings. There is no reason, therefore, why students should be unable to continue their education as a result of the shift from grant to loan.

For students who do find themselves in financial difficulties institutions can use access funds to help. In 1993–94 and 1994–95 some 4,000 students in higher education institutions in Wales received help from the access funds. In both years, no students in these institutions, who were refused help from the access funds, failed to start or to continue their courses because of financial considerations.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the impact on jobs in higher and further education of the funding announcements for 1996–97. [26475]

Mr. Richards: The financial provision for higher education for 1996–97 assumes an efficiency saving of 2 per cent. over 1995–96. For further education the planned efficiency saving is 5.3 per cent.

It is for institutions to decide how they manage the resources made available to them by the higher and further education funding councils for Wales, including the numbers of staff they employ.

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much was spent in (a) cash and (b) real terms per student in higher education in Wales in (i) 1980–81 and (ii) 1994–95. [26477]

Mr. Richards: The information in respect of 1980–81 is not available. The provision in cash and real terms for 1994–95 was £5,004.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the projects in Wales undertaken through the private finance initiative which have already been agreed, giving an indication of the money being spent in each of the financial years over which each project is planned to be undertaken. [26471]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: One project under the private finance initiative has been approved by the Welsh Office so far, a multi-storey car part at the University Hospital of Wales, Cardiff. The development will be paid for fully by those using the car parking facilities and therefore there is no cost to the Department. Other projects are under consideration. Information on schemes costing less than £1 million is not collected.

Health Innovation Zone Scheme

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what expenditure has been approved under the health innovation zone scheme (a) in the south Wales industrial valleys and (b) elsewhere in Wales; and in which financial years. [27069]

Mr. Hague: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what are (a) the competitive tender procedures and (b) the quality standards to be applied to applications for funding under the primary care development fund; what proportion of the allocated sums available under the fund was spent in 1995–96; what assessment he has made of the rate of allocation in 1996–97; and if he will make a statement; [27067]

2) on what date, and for what reason, the health innovation zone was transformed into the primary care development fund; what expenditure has been approved under the fund; and if he will publish the fund's terms of reference. [27068]

Mr. Hague: The primary care development fund has no formal status; it is a term used by the Department to refer to a number of budgets used to promote health care in the community. These budgets fund a number of centrally-promoted activities but health professionals and others may also bid for money to undertake worthwhile projects throughout Wales. There are no formal terms of reference but the Department expects a project to improve patient care and quality standards are determined on a case-by-case basis. The health innovator zone remains in place and benefits from many of the projects.

No sum is specifically allocated for such projects.

TREASURY

Public Service Pension Schemes

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will provide an explanation of the differences in the figures for the liabilities of the main unfunded public service pension schemes set out in (a) the answer to the hon. Member for Dover of 26 April 1993, Official Report, column 289 and (b) the answer to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 26 February, Official Report, columns 358–59 showing which elements are due to (a) timing and (b) other factors. [25858]

Mr. Waldegrave: The figures for the capital value of the liabilities of unfunded public service pension schemes are estimates based on data which become available at periodic intervals and, in some cases, in a very limited form. The £170 billion relating to 31 March 1991 was subsequently revised to £185 billion when more reliable data became available.

Various factors have contributed to the increase in liability between 1991 and 1993. In the case of deferred benefits and pensions in payment, which are linked to the retail prices index the increases implemented from April 1991 and April 1992 amounted together to just over 15 per cent.

For employees, liabilities increase in line with pay levels, and some groups had significant pay awards during this period. Other contributing factors affecting the increase include the overall increase in numbers, that is, the number of employees, plus deferred pensions, plus pensions in payment, and the increase in amounts of pension resulting from a large number of redundancies and premature retirements.

Retail Prices Index

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the RPI for each month together with the annual increase since June 1983. [26744]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested is available in tables 11 and 12 of the publication "Retail Prices Index", ONS Business Monitor MM23, a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Correspondence

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth can expect replies to his correspondence of 23 January and 6 March which refers to Mr. Peter J. Hewer of 3 Heyville croft, Kenilworth; and what are the reasons for the delay which has so far occurred. [26755]

Mr. Jack: I replied to my hon. Friend today.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the annual cost of measures taken to resolve the BSE problem as decided by 17 April for the first full year and subsequent years, setting out the net cost after recalculations required by the British rebate system, setting out the amounts in sterling, and proportions due net from the UK and the EC. [26758]

Mr. Waldegrave: Estimates for 1996–97 to 1998–99 are in the table:

Estimated cost of measures in the UK taken in response to BSE situation up to 17 April

£ million

	1996–97	1997–98	1998–99
Net cost borne by the UK	750	600	570
Net contribution from the EU	260	140	110
Total cost	1,010	740	680

The table takes account of the following measures:

(a) the compensation arrangements for cattle over 30 months of age which cannot now enter the food chain;

(b) the new calf slaughter premium;

(c) the package of aid for the renderers and the abattoir and cutting industries announced on 3 April and 16 April respectively;

(d) additional running costs for the agriculture departments to enable more activity by the meat hygiene service.

The table does not make any allowance for the possible cost of intervention in the beef sector.

The figures for the net contribution from the EU take account of both the UK's contribution to additional EU spending and the effect of additional receipts on the UK abatement.

Uncollected Taxes

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much is owed to the Inland Revenue in uncollected taxes; and how much has had to be written off in each of the past five years. [26802]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 25 April 1996]: The following table shows the figures for the amounts of uncollected tax owed to the Inland Revenue as at the end of October 1994, the latest date for which figures are available. The amounts represent tax assessed and collectible but not paid as at that date.

Type of Tax	Amount £ million
Corporation tax	561
Corporation Tax Pay and File	158
Capital Gains Tax	151
Income Tax (excluding PAYE)	2,250
PAYE (including sub-contractor's deductions)	647
Advance Corportion Tax	4
Income Tax on Interest etc.	2
Petroleum Revenue Tax	5
Total	3,778

The amounts of tax remitted or written off for each of the last five year are as follows:

Year to end October	Amount remitted written off £ million
1994	1,159.7
1993	1,580.2
1992	1,694.2
1991	883.9
1990	568.8

Overseas Visits

Mr. Hall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a list of all overseas visits made by all Ministers of his Department since 1990, including (a) details of the places visited and brief reasons for the visit, (b) details of size, composition and cost to public funds of the delegation and (c) the names of non-ministerial members of each delegation and the capacity in which each was present. [17499]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke [holding answer 1 March 1996]: Since I became Chancellor of the Exchequer in May 1993, Treasury Ministers have made nearly 100 overseas visits. Details are as follows:

No visits made.

Because of the way out records are currently maintained, to give details of the size, composition and disaggregated costs of travel in each case by both Ministers and officials would entail disproportionate cost. Nonetheless, all costs, including those of the Minister involved are rigorously scrutinised, and the compositions of delegations are kept to a bare minimum.

In total the costs of Treasury Ministers' overseas travel by financial year is as follows:

1993–94: £147,000

1994–95: £123,000

1995–96 (to date): £110,000.

The names of non-ministerial members of delegations are, by convention, not given.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what funding was provided for Professor Harash Narang's experiments and research into a urine test to detect BSE in cattle. [23227]

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what investigations were carried out by his Department into the request by Harash Narang for research funding for a live test for BSE in cattle; and if he will make a statement. [23353]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 and 29 March 1996]: Dr. Narang has not made any formal request to MAFF for research funds for work to develop a live test for BSE in cattle. Were he to make any such application it would be subject to the normal scrutiny procedures required to demonstrate that it was scientifically valid and a practical research proposal. We are in contact with Dr. Narang's sponsor, and are hoping to supply urine samples under a blind system to be agreed.

Green Minister

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what factors underlay his decision not to be the Green Minister for his Department. [25846]

Mr. Douglas Hogg [holding answer 23 April 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Lewisham, Deptford (Ms Ruddock) on 22 November 1995, Official Report, column 200.

Set-aside Scheme

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of claims and the amount claimed in 1995 for set-aside on land for each county of England. [26743]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I am unable to provide the information requested by the hon. Member at this moment. However, I will write to him with this information as soon as it is available.

TRANSPORT

Aircraft Inspection

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many meetings (a) he and (b) his officials have had with the Federal Aviation Authority in respect of the FAA inspection programme of foreign countries in each of the last five years. [26912]

Mr. Norris: Ministers have not met the FAA to discuss its international aviation safety assessment programme. However, officials have frequent contacts with the FAA and have discussed aspects of the IASA programme on a number of occasions.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many inspections have been undertaken by the Civil Aviation Authority on aircraft not registered in the United Kingdom, but using United Kingdom airports in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [26904]

Mr. Norris: I refer to my reply to the hon. Member for Crew and Nantwich on 7 March 1996, Official Report, column 309. The CAA has since carried out checks on aircraft registered in Liberia, Nigeria and Swaziland.

Aircraft Operating Licences

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what statutory requirements must be met by an aircraft operator before an operating licence can be issued. [26914]

Mr. Norris: Council Regulation (EEC) No. 2407/92 on licensing of air carriers sets out the criteria for granting operating licences in all EC member states. The Licensing of Air Carriers Regulations 1992 (SI 1992 No. 2992) make provision for implementing the Council regulation in the United Kingdom.

Aircraft Leasing

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many requests for (a) dry leasing and (b) wet leasing of aircraft have been refused by (i) his Department and (ii) the Civil Aviation Authority for each of the last five years. [26907]

Mr. Norris: The following table shows the number of lease applications which have been refused approval over the last five years:

	CAA		DOT		Total
	Wet	Dry	Wet	Dry
1991	1		2		3
1992	1		1		2
1993	6	1	—		7
1994	1		—		1
1995	3		2		5

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what procedures airlines are required to follow before they are permitted to (a) dry lease and (b) wet lease aircraft. [26906]

Mr. Norris: I have placed a copy of these procedures in the Library.

M5 Viaduct

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects work to correct the structural weakness to the M5 Golden Valley viaduct between Cheltenham and Gloucester to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [27058]

Mr. Watts: The Highways Agency programme is to strengthen or replace the structure during the years 1997–98 and 1998–99, subject to resources being available.

Lane and weight restrictions are in force on the structure to limit traffic loading.

Investigations have been in progress since the loading restrictions were imposed to determine the levels and extent of structural weakness. These investigations are part of the exercise to establish whether it is most cost effective to strengthen or replace the structure.

Greenford Roundabout

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what work is currently being undertaken at the Greenford roundabout; at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [26745]

Mr. Norris: These works are part of the implementation of priority (red) route measures for the A40 by the Traffic Director for London and will provide for full traffic signal control of Greenford road roundabout. The scheme is intended to create better lane discipline and reduce accidents. The cost of the scheme is approximately £210,000.

Drivers' Licences

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the security arrangements surrounding the issuing of drivers' licences to private car owners; and what checks the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency undertakes to ensure that a single licence number is not used by more than one person. [26770]

Mr. Norris: The Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency does not divulge details of the checks carried out before driving licences are issued. Each licence bears a driver number which uniquely identifies the holder.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the conviction in Nottingham of an individual for a drink driving offence in Kent on the basis of a mis-directed driving licence. [26901]

Mr. Norris: The police are investigating this matter.

Aviation Standards

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many meetings his Department has had with representatives of the Jamaican Government in respect of a service between Manchester and Jamaica. [26749]

Mr. Norris: Negotiations were held with representatives of the Jamaican Government on 24–26 January 1996 to discuss liberalising the existing air services agreement, including a request for a possible service between Manchester and Jamaica. Agreement was not reached and both sides agreed that a further round would be held later in the year.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to give to enforcement officers powers to seize and impound unlicensed heavy goods vehicles. [26771]

Mr. Norris: I am considering this in the light of the report on the roadside survey of illegal operators in October 1995, which was published on 24 April.

Network SouthCentral

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which bids for Network SouthCentral offered new rolling stock. [26701]

Mr. Watts: Details of unsuccessful franchise bids are commercially confidential.

London and South Coast Ltd. will be investing in a programme of improvements to existing rolling stock in order to improve the reliability of the Network SouthCentral fleet. Certain trains, which will be used for express London-Brighton services, will be refurbished.

Driver Regulations

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are the maximum hours (a) bus drivers and (b) lorry drivers can drive without a break; and what plans the Government have to harmonise the regulations so the same hours rules apply to both. [26775]

Mr. Norris: For both goods and passenger vehicles to which the European Union rules apply, four and a half hours. For passenger vehicles operated under the UK rules, five and a half; for goods vehicles operated under the UK rules, there is no limit on continuous driving but a driver must not drive for more than 10 hours a day. We have no plans to change the UK rules.

Articulated Lorries

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make the fitting of the HOPE anti-jacknifing device compulsory on articulated lorries. [26888]

Mr. Norris: No.

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport for what reasons his Department published a rail privatisation update leaflet in March; how many copies of this leaflet have been published; how much they cost to produce; how they are being distributed; and, in what numbers and at what frequency his Department intends to publish further rail privatisation update leaflets. [27027]

Mr. Watts: The rail privatisation update leaflet provides factual information to rail passengers about progress with railway privatisation and up-dates a similar leaflet published in March 1994. The leaflet has been delivered to all manned railway stations in the United Kingdom, where it has been placed in racks for customers to pick up if they wish. A total of 250,000 leaflets were produced at a cost of £19,800. Distribution costs were £7,215. The overall cost per leaflet was about 11p. We have no plans at this stage for a further leaflet.

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to expand the computer link between magistrates courts in South Wales and traffic area offices to the rest of England and Wales. [26774]

Mr. Norris: A joint working group which includes officials from the Department of Transport and the Lord Chancellor's Department is currently examining arrangements which would provide for the transfer of information about penalties and convictions for operators of heavy goods and passenger vehicles to be passed from the magistrates courts to the traffic area offices.

Experience gained from the manual trial of transfer of information between Gwent magistrates court and South Wales traffic area office will be taken into account in the recommendations of the joint working group.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Public Tours (Security Controls)

Mr. Pike: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what arrangements can be made to ensure speedier access through security controls for the public touring the House. [26433]

Mr. Ray Powell: This is a matter for the Serjeant at Arms. I have asked him to write to the hon. Member.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will list the revenue spending estimated by his Department in connection with the private finance initiative for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26637]

Mr. Willetts: The Cabinet Office, including the Office of Public Service, Her Majesty's Stationery Office and the Central Office of Information have not yet approved any projects under the PFI. The Central Computer and Telecommunications Agency hopes to involve private finance in the provision of the metropolitan telecommunications service. The precise level of revenue spending will not be determined until detailed negotiations are completed.

EU Regulations

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what steps he has taken to ensure that officials negotiating EU regulations are informed of their impact on United Kingdom business. [27074]

Mr. Freeman: Revised guidance requiring Departments to produce a compliance cost assessment for all EC legislative proposals was published on 25 January 1996, Official Report, columns 321–22.

These assessments inform Government policy and the position taken by UK officials when negotiating EC legislation.

Her Majesty's Stationery Office

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster when HMSO's 1995 report and accounts will be published; and if he will make a statement [27442]

Mr. Freeman: The 1995 HMSO accounts have been audited and certified by the Comptroller and Auditor General, and are being published today.

The accounts show an operating loss of £39.7 million for 1995. This is mainly due to HMSO making exceptional provisions for redundancy costs—some £26.1 million—and other one-off items as part of its continuing business transformation programme. The benefits of these changes are already being felt, with indications that HMSO has increased sales and returned to profitability in the first quarter of 1996.

In addition, HMSO has made an exceptional provision of £3 million in respect of a contract with a public sector customer in Uzbekistan, on which the Comptroller and Auditor General reports in detail in the HMSO accounts.

The main task is for HMSO to be ready for privatisation in the summer. In the interim, its management are working to the following key targets:

(i) to achieve an annual current cost operating profit of £7.8 million, before exceptional items;

(ii) for print, to achieve 97 per cent. of all orders delivered to time, and 99 per cent. of all orders from the print storage and distribution warehouse to be delivered on time;

(iii) for publications, to achieve dispatch times for customers' mail, electronic data interchange and telephone orders of 90 per cent. within four working days of receipt and 97 per cent. within five working days;

(iv) for office supplies, to dispatch 99 per cent. of validated orders for stock catalogue items within two working days of receipt, and for 97 per cent. of items to be dispatched first time from stock.

These accounts reflect the seriousness with which HMSO is tackling its trading position. However, this will be challenging as long as HMSO is governed by public sector operating restrictions. Privatisation will remove these and allow the business to compete on equal terms with other suppliers. In this context, I am pleased to inform the House that the sale process is proceeding well, and we have already received a healthy level of interest from good-quality bidders.

ENVIRONMENT

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the revenue spending estimated by his Department in connection with the private finance initiative for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26630]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department of the Environment and its sponsored bodies attracted over £4.5 billion in private investment in support of programmes in 1994–95 and anticipates a similar outturn in 1995–96. Forecasts for 1996–97 and 997–98 are for about £6 billion in private investment to be generated. This will assist in the delivery of a large number of projects, most notably ones relating to housing and urban regeneration. Estimated revenue spending on the Department's recently announced private finance initiative design, build, finance and operate-type projects is forecast to be nil in 1995–96, £200,000 in 1996–96 and £700,000 in 1997–98.

Serco Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contracts his Department and his agencies have with Serco Ltd.; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [26679]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is not held centrally and is available only at disproportionate cost.

Essex County Council

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total amount of reserves of Essex county council; what proportion of total expenditure that figure represents; and what is the average proportion for shire counties. [26878]

Sir Paul Beresford: The total level of reserves of Essex county council at 31 March 1995 was £120,127,000—of which £25,159,000 was local management of schools reserves—which was 12.4 per cent. of budgeted revenue expenditure for 1995–96. The same percentage for all shire counties at that date was 9.3 per cent.

Water (Pre-payment Devices)

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the number of domestic customers in each water company area who have suffered interruptions of supply through the operation of pre-payment water devices in each of the last three years; and what percentage this represents of customers using pre-payment water devices in each case. [27026]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 26 april 1996]: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the numbers of pre-payment water meters installed in each water company area; and if he will list which areas (a) provide for total disconnection from the water supply and (b) continue to allow a restricted quantity of water to be supplied in the event of prolonged non-payment. [26893]

Mr. Clappison: The Director General of Water Services is assembling information on the number of budget payment units in operation in each water company area. This information will be placed in the Library as soon as it is available. There is no disconnection of the water supply to the property as a result of the operation of a budget payment unit. The supply continues to be available and can be used as soon as the unit is recharged. The units do not permit a restricted supply of water in the event of a prolonged non-payment.

Mr. Burden: To ask the Secretary of State for the Enviornment in what circumstances in each water company area disconnection from water supply as a result of the operation of pre-payment water devices renders a water customer liable for less than the regular annual water and sewerage bill for his or her property. [26894]

Mr. Clappison: Customers operating a budget payment unit who pay their bill on a rateable value basis are not eligible for a discount to reflect occasions when the water supply is not taken because the customer has not recharged the unit. Customers who pay their bill on a measured basis and use a budget payment unit pay only for the amount of water consumed.

Water Resources (Regulation)

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what response he has made to the water companies' representations on the effect of the current regulation scheme on the level of water resources; and what plans he has to initiate a discussion at high level with the regulators and the Environment Agency on water resources. [27266]

Mr. Clappison: Together with the Environment Agency, the Office of Water Services and the drinking water inspectorate, the Water Companies Association and the Water Services Association are both participating in high-level discussions as part of the review of water resources and supply arrangements in the longer term which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced last September.

Water Reservoirs

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of reservoir capacity is currently full in each water company area; and what is was (a) six months ago and (b) a year ago. [27166]

Mr. Clappison: Storage as a percentage of capacity as at 1 April 1996, 1 October 1995 and 1 April 1995 in the major reservoirs or groups of reservoirs in each of the Environment Agency areas in England and Wales and which serve water companies is given in the following table:

Rating Appeals

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in total and by each valuation office the number of appeals that have been received against the 1995 rating; how many have been resolved; how many remain outstanding; and when he estimates that this process will be completed. [27306]

Sir Paul Beresford: I am placing in the Library a table which sets out, in total and by each office of the Valuation Office agency in England, the number of valid proposals to alter the 1995 rating lists which were received by 31 March 1996, the number settled and the number outstanding. We expect that all these outstanding appeals will be settled by the end of 1997. Appeals against entries in the 1995 rating lists may still be made up until 31 March 2001. Further appeals may be made thereafter in cases where lists have been altered, for example following decisions of valuation tribunals, the Lands Tribunal or the High Court. I cannot therefore estimate when all appeals against the 1995 list will have been settled.

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will set out in total and by each Valuation Office region the number of valid proposals to alter the valuation list which were lodged (a) before 30 November 1993, (b) between 1 December 1993 and 30 November 1994, (c) between 1 December 1994 and 30 November 1995 and (d) since December 1995; and what is the number in each category which have still to be settled. [27307]

Sir Paul Beresford: In the periods 1 April to 30 November 1993—the "initial appeal period"—1 December 1993 to 30 November 1994, 1 December 1994 to 30 November 1995 and 1 December 1995 to 31 March 1996 the Valuation Office agency received, respectively, 864,316, 89,440, 93,213 and 83,220 banding proposals in respect of dwellings in England.

Statistics are held on proposals made during the initial appeal period, and the total made cumulatively since 1 April 1993. The tables show, by Valuation Office region and in total, the last available figures for proposals received and outstanding and the age of those yet to be resolved.

Groundwater

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current percentage level of maximum groundwater in each of the water company areas; and what it was (a) six months ago and (b) one year ago. [27099]

Mr. Clappison: Groundwater levels as a percentage of the maximum historically recorded for the month in question at index sites on the major aquifers used for public water supply in England and Wales are given in the following table, grouped according to Environment Agency area and also showing the aquifer type:

Energy Efficiency

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list central Government expenditure on energy efficiency by all Departments and programmes for 1995–96. [27237]

Mr. Clappison: The information of 1995–96 is not yet available, but will be requested from individual Departments later this year. I expect shortly to publish figures for 1994–95.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Jury Service

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many representations he received in each of the last four years complaining about the procedure for selecting for and excusing from jury service. [26451]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. David Nicholson, dated 29 April 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question on the number of complaints that have been received about the procedure for jury selection and excusal.

The Court Service does not collate information about this specific area of complaint centrally and to obtain a precise figure would incur a disproportionate cost.

Magistrates (Doncaster)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what is the approximate shortfall in magistrates available to the Doncaster Bench. [26309]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The current strength of the Doncaster Bench is 185 and the most recent annual average number of sittings is 43. This is marginally over the Lord Chancellor's desired upper level of 40 sittings to achieve which it is estimated that a further 17 lay magistrates would be required.

Legal Aid

Mr. Cox: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what legal aid is available to a British national who is appealing against a prison sentence imposed in an overseas country; and if he will make a statement. [26426]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: A British national appealing against a prison sentence imposed overseas would be doing so under the jurisdiction of the overseas country. Legal aid would be available to the appellant according to the rules of any scheme operated by that country. Under the legal aid scheme of England and Wales, legal aid is limited to matters of English law and to proceedings before the courts of England and Wales. Parallel provisions apply under the legal aid schemes of Scotland and Northern Ireland.

HEALTH

Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his oral statement of 25 March, Official Report, columns 711–23, what are the risks referred to by SEAC associated with changing from eating beef to non-beef products. [26450]

Mr. Horam: As the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee's advice stated,

"no human activity is without some risk", and it is widely acknowledged that there is a variety of health risks associated with food.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the revenue spending estimated by his Department in connection with the private finance initiative for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26624]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Sheffield, Attercliffe (Mr. Betts) on 6 December 1995, Official Report, column 224.

Cancelled Operations (West Yorkshire)

Mrs. Ann Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of cancelled operations in each of the hospitals in the area covered by the West Yorkshire district health authority in each quarter of 1994–95 and 1995–96. [26776]

Mr. Horam: The latest information available is shown in the table:

West Yorkshire District Health Authority area

1994–95

Quarter 1: 0

Quarter 2: 6

Quarter 3: 34

Quarter 4: 226.

1995–96

Quarter 1: 222

Quarter 2: 63

Quarter 3: 122.

Note: Figures represent the number of operations cancelled for non-medical reasons on the day the patient is due to arrive or after they have arrived in hospital in the West Yorkshire district health authority area.

Childhood Leukaemia

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the study taking place in the Sellafield area in respect of cases of childhood leukaemia, sewage outlets and a virus. [26697]

Mr. Horam: No study is being carried out nor is one planned. At present, there are no data to link childhood leukaemia with viral infection or still less with any virus that would normally be present in sewage.

In its recent report, published on 27 March 1996, the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment recommended that the United Kingdom childhood cancer study, which is a national study testing both radiation and non-radiation hypotheses regarding the aetiology of childhood cancer and leukaemia, should be supported to completion.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health in which locations childhood leukaemia has been linked to (a) sewage outlets and (b) viruses; and if he will make a statement. [26698]

Mr. Horam: There is no evidence to link childhood leukaemia with any virus that would normally be present in sewage, or with any other viral infection.

General Practitioner Premises

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 16 April, Official Report, column 480, what proportion of general practitioners' premises were below minimum standards in each London health authority in each year since 1990. [26649]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Dulwich (Ms Jowell) on 30 January, Official Report, column 711.

Steroids

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the value and risks of prescribing steroids to children. [26786]

Mr. Malone: Corticosteroids are effective in the treatment of many serious and life-threatening conditions and have been used for the treatment of children and adults for many years. All medicines have side effects, and those for corticosteroids are well documented in the product information, which is produced by the manufacturer and authorised by the Licensing Authority and in the British National Formulary, which the Department sends free of charge to all doctors. The product information contains special precautions regarding use in children. In addition, in 1994, the Committee on Safety of Medicines evaluated the association of corticosteroids and severe chickenpox, as a result of which the product information for corticosteroids was revised to further improve warnings and precautions of use. Doctors and pharmacists were informed of these changes through the CSM's regular bulletin "Current Problems in Pharmacovigilance".

Paracetomol

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will restrict the sale of paracetamol and products which include paracetamol as a principal ingredient to outlets controlled by qualified pharmacists. [26796]

Mr. Malone: The sale of paracetamol in pack sizes over 25 tablets is already restricted to control by a pharmacist. There are currently no proposals further to restrict the sale of products containing paracetamol.

Traumatic Brain Injury

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evaluation he has made of the findings of the report commissioned for Headway on assessing residential care needs of people who have suffered traumatic brain injury; what action he is taking; and if he will make a statement. [26478]

Mr. Bowis: We shall study the report, which has just been received.

Paediatric Intensive Care

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 30 January, Official Report, column 716, if he will now publish the results of the monitoring figures for the occupancy of intensive care paediatric beds for the months of February, March and April, and monthly thereafter. [27264]

Mr. Horam: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has asked the chief executive of the national health service to report to him on paediatric intensive care by the end of April. Information for this report is still being collated.

AIDS Conference

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if representatives from his Department will be attending the 11th international conference on AIDS in Vancouver in July. [27268]

Mr. Horam: There will be two representatives from the Department of Health attending the 11th international conference on AIDS in Vancouver in July 1996—a principal scientific officer and a nursing officer.

Health Authority Funding

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the per capita funding in each district health authority in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97. [25887]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 19 April 1996]: The figures for district health authorities' funding per capita in 1995–96 will be placed in the Library. District health authorities were abolished on 31 March 1996 and replaced by health authorities combining the functions of district health authorities and family health services authorities, and often with different boundaries.

TREASURY

Overseas Visits

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the countries he has visited and the dates of these visits in each year since 1992. [26299]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I refer to the reply I gave on 26 April 1996 to the hon. Member for Warrington, South (Mr. Hall), Official Report, columns 322–25.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many times he has visited Switzerland and on what dates and for what purposes in each year since 1992. [26300]

Mr. Clarke: Since I became Chancellor in May 1993, I have made the following visits to Switzerland:

27–30 January 1994: Davos, Switzerland (World Economic Forum)

26–29 January 1995: Davos, Switzerland (World Economic Forum).

Valuation Office

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has had since 1 January 1995 about (a) delays in hearing appeals against valuation of business premises for rates and (b) reductions in manpower in the Valuation Office; and if he will make a statement. [26338]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Ministers within the Treasury have received around 10 inquiries relating to alleged delays in the hearing of business rate appeals and a further five inquiries in connection with reductions in manpower within the Valuation Office agency.

European Union

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 22 April, Official Report, column 10, on net EU receipts, if he will set out the formula and basis of calculation of (i) the gross contribution and (ii) the abatement in respect of 1995–96 and the previous year. [26788]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The basis of the Community's revenue system, which leads to the member states' gross contributions to the European Community budget, and a broad description of the basis used to determine the UK's abatement are contained in chapter 8 of the "Departmental Report of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's smaller Departments—The Government's Expenditure Plans 1996–97 to 1998–99", Cm 3217. This chapter also outlines the main differences between the UK's gross contributions in the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96.

Mr. Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Dover of 22 April, Official Report, column 10, relating to net EU receipts, in which documents produced by Her Majesty's Government the column "Public sector receipts" is analysed; and if he will set out the Departments which receive the funds and give details of their use. [26787]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: Details of the amounts of the UK's receipts from the Community budget by Department and by main Community funds, for the period 1990–91 to 1998–99, are given in table 8D of the "Departmental Report of the Chancellor of the Exchequer's smaller Departments—The Government's Expenditure Plans 1996–97 to 1998–99", Cm 3217. Similar details of the amounts in earlier years are given in the earlier departmental reports. Details of the use to which these funds are put can be obtained from the relevant departmental Ministers.

Serco Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what contracts his Department and his agencies have with Serco Ltd.; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [26641]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Treasury, Royal Mint, Office of HM Paymaster General, Valuation Office and Office for National Statistics have no contracts with Serco Ltd.

The Inland Revenue has a contract with Serco for administration services at the Inland Revenue offices, Castle Meadow road, Nottingham. This includes typing, secretarial, messenger, porter post room, switchboard, help desk, training/conference room booking services, etcetera. The current cost is £1,123,343.97—February 1995 to January 1996—and the contract ends on the 31 January 1998 with an option to extend to 31 January 2000.

There are no penalties if the contract is terminated early, due to a default in the service, or for a breach of the contract.

If Inland Revenue wishes not to continue with the contract for reasons other than the above, it needs to give six months' notice and would be liable to pay reasonable commitments, liabilities and expenditure which otherwise would be an unavoidable loss to Serco by reason of termination of the contract.

HM Customs and Excise estates department has call-off contracts with Serco Ltd. to provide works managers services for their properties in the south-east of England. These contracts cover headquarters properties based in Southend, investigation division properties based in London, all properties covered by south-east England and Anglia collections and a number of, but not all, properties covered by South London and Thames collection.

Due to the call-off nature of the contract and the delegation to regional managers, it is not possible to provide accurate figures as to the total value of supplies made under this contract, but a broad estimate would be a value of £500,000.

The contract for HQ Southend expires on the 31 May 1997; all other contracts listed above expire on 2 April 1998.

There are no penalty clauses for termination of the contract. In addition to usual causes for termination, the client is entitled to terminate the contract by giving not less than 30 days' notice.

VAT (Energy-saving Materials)

Mr. Khabra: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will undertake a cost-benefit analysis of the effects of reducing value added tax on energy-saving materials from 17.5 per cent. to 8 per cent; and if he will make a statement. [26831]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: I have no plans to reduce the rate of value added tax on energy-saving materials.

Departmental Payments

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps Her Majesty's Government are taking to monitor the performance of Government Departments in the timely payment of creditors. [26835]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 25 April 1996]: Departments are currently required to publish details of their payment performance in their departmental reports. Following the Prime Minister's statement at the Your Business Matters national conference, a league table of all Departments' payment performance will be published every year, and the Treasury is currently considering a new, rigorous and consistent method to collect this data.

Income Tax

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the income tax yield from the self-employed in the latest year for which figures are available. [27034]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 26 April 1996]: In 1995–96, it is estimated that £8.6 billion income tax was received in respect of income from trades, professions and vocations, net of repayments made. No estimate is available of tax paid by self-employed people on their other income.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

EU PHARE Programme

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the policy of his Department in pressing for changes to the administrative procedures of the EU Poland and Hungary Assistance for Economic Restructuring programme. [25903]

Mr. Hanley: The improvements we have been seeking PHARE's procedures include greater decentralisation of programme management from Brussels to recipient countries, effective monitoring and evaluation of programmes and a larger role for EU delegations in co-ordination and information.

China

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will place in the Library copies of the material which he has received from the International Planned Parenthood Federation and the United Nations Fund for Population Activity concerning their budgets and programmes in China. [26546]

Mr. Hanley: The China country programme of the United Nations Population Fund—UNFPA—has a current allocation of $500,000 which will be spent on women's development and mother and child health care projects, and for contraceptive quality assurance work. The International Planned Parenthood Federation has an allocation for the China Family Planning Association in 1996 of $1 million which is for audio-visual equipment and vehicles. Copies of relevant documents will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mrs. Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the work of the United Nations Fund for Population Activity in China with particular reference to encouraging population control policies which do not involve coercion. [27132]

Mr. Hanley: Our judgment is that the United Nations Population Fund performs an essential role in promoting adherence to voluntary and non-coercive approaches to family planning in all countries of the world, including in China. UNFPA is currently engaged in an intensive dialogue with the Government of China about the nature of any future assistance to that country. UNFPA has made it clear that it is prepared to support activities only in countries where birth planning restrictions have been lifted.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those occasions during the last year when Ministers from his Department have made representations in respect of Chinese population control programmes and policies; what was the outcome on each of those occasions; and if he will make a statement. [26547]

Mr. Hanley: Ministers raised human rights issues, which include allegations of coercion in family planning programmes, with a vice-minister of the state family planning commission in September 1995; during meetings with Chinese leaders in October 1995 and January 1996; and with the Chinese Foreign Minister in April 1996. These meetings have had the common objective of persuading the Chinese Government to adhere to international human rights standards. All meetings have served to underline to the Chinese Government the seriousness with which human rights issues in China are viewed in the United Kingdom, and have supported the current intensive efforts of the United Nations Population Fund to encourage the Chinese Government to implement family planning programmes which are responsive to freely-expressed demand for services, rather than seek to meet particular birth quotas or targets.

Rain Forests

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list those projects concerned with the conversation of tropical rainforests, or species within them, funded through the global environment facility, together with sums of money which have been committed internationally to each project; and if he will indicate if each project forms part of biodiversity action plans published by the Governments of the countries in which the projects are located. [25925]

Mr. Hanley: Further to the holding reply of 23 April, the table lists relevant projects and is based on information supplied by the secretariat of the global environment facility. Under the biodiversity convention, each party is obliged to develop or adapt national plans, strategies or programmes for the conservation and sustainable use of biological diversity in accordance with its particular conditions and capabilities. Many countries have yet to complete or adapt these plans. Some of the projects listed will assist in the formulation of these plans. However, all GEF projects relate to the recipient Governments' existing relevant environmental plans. These are listed in the table.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Serco Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Educationa and Employment what contracts her Department and her agencies have with Serco Ltd.; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should she seek early termination of the contract; and if she will make a statement. [26678]

Mr. Robin Squire: DFEE and its agencies have two facilities management contracts with Serco, for head office buildings in London and Runcorn, respectively, for which the Department pays annual management fees. The contracts expire on 31 March 1997 and can be terminated by giving 90 days' notice with no specified penalties.

Financial details of the contracts are in confidence for commercial reasons.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much has been spent on publicity in each of the four pilot authorities in phase 1 of the voucher scheme; and in each case what was the estimated publicity budget. [26783]

Mr. Robin Squire: To date, some £1.1 million has been spent on providing information to parents and providers nationwide. The budget, of £750,000, was exceeded in order to meet the unexpectedly high demand for information outside the phase 1 areas. It is not possible to break down expenditure between the phase 1 areas or between phase 1 areas and the rest of the country.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what funding has been made available to each of the four pilot authorities and in total to cover the cost of administration in phase 1 of the voucher scheme. [26814]

Mr. Squire: Grant aid has been made available to the four local education authorities taking part in the first phase of the voucher scheme to recognise the additional costs incurred in participating in phase 1 compared with joining in phase 2.

The maximum level of grant up to which each local education authority may claim is as follows:

Kensington and Chelsea	37,220
Norfolk	92,107
Wandsworth	48,980
Westminster	38,585
Total	216,892

Equal Value Claims

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many equal value claims have been brought by women for each year since 1990; and how many of those claims were successful in the same period. [26764]

Mrs. Gillan: The precise information requested is not available.

Statistics showing the number of equal pay cases disposed of each year since 1990, and the number of successful cases in each of those years, are shown in the following table.

Year	Equal pay cases disposed of [1]	Number successful [2]
1990	508	10
1991	227	5
1992	240	21
1993	780	19
1994	418	8
Total	2,173	63

[1] Many equal pay cases typically consist of a single complaint to which is linked a number of identical claims made by colleagues of the complainant who are employed by the same employer. When a tribunal disposes of a complainant's case, all other cases linked to it are disposed of in the same way and are recorded as such in tribunal statistics.

[2] This column records the actual number of successful complaints decided by tribunals. The figures do not include linked complaints which were not actually heard by tribunals.

EU Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the directives which have affected her Department in each of the past three years and (a) the United Kingdom legislation introduced as a result of the directives, (b) the United Kingdom legislation which goes beyond the minimum standards set out in the directives and (c) the clauses within each piece of United Kingdom legislation which amplify the minimum standards set out in the directives. [27078]

Mr. Robin Squire: The Department for Education and Employment is responsible for two related directives which require implementation in the UK and have been adopted in the last three years:

Directive 94/38/EC of 26 July 1994 amending annexes C and D to Council directive 92/51/EEC on a second general system for the recognition of professional education and training to supplement directive 89/48/EEC;

Directive 95/43/EC of 20 July 1995 amending annexes C and D to Council directive 92/51/EEC on a second general system for the recognition of professional education and training to supplement directive 89/48/EEC.

To date, no UK legislation has been introduced as a result of the directives, although legislation in the form of regulations under section 2(2) of the European Communities Act 1972 is being prepared for introduction later in the year.

Solotec

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on what date Solotec inherited responsibility for courses organised by Sight and Sound which had originally been entered into by South Thames training and enterprise council. [27273]

Mr. Paice: A contract was signed between Solotec and Sight and Sound on 24 April 1995.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 23 April, Official Report, column 102, if the letters to the regional offices in relation to the training and enterprise councils dated 22 March named particular training provider companies. [27315]

Mr. Paice: Yes.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if Employment Service staff based in jobcentres will take adjudication decisions on benefit sanctions for claimants of jobseeker's allowance. [27101]

Mr. Forth: All adjudication decisions on jobseeker's allowance will be made by independent adjudication officers. Decisions on the refusal of a jobseeker on principle to enter into a jobseeker's agreement, decisions connected with training schemes or employment programmes under section 19(5)(b) of the Jobseekers Act 1995 and decisions on the failure of a jobseeker to attend an Employment Service interview as required will normally be made by those independent officers located in jobcentres. All other labour market adjudication decisions will be made in centralised locations. We will in due course consider whether more independent adjudication will take place in jobcentres.

EU Nationals

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if EU nationals can count periods of unemployment and receipt of benefit in another EU country towards the elibility qualifying period for (a) training for work and (b) other Employment Service programmes. [27102]

Mr. Forth: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my colleague, the then Minister of State for Employment, to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Ladywood, (Ms Short) on 22 March 1995, Official Report, column 245.

Project Work

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what action will be taken against claimants who decline to participate in the job search element of project work. [27103]

Mr. Forth: The first 13 weeks of job search activity on the project work pilots is voluntary. Unemployed people will be offered extra help to find work through a range of opportunities including: 1–2–1 interviews, jobclub, jobfinder's grant, work trials, training for work and some specialist opportunities for people with disabilities. No action will be taken against clients who decline places on programmes.

Those who are then referred to project work experience will be required to attend three hours' supervised job search a week. Those who fail to do this without good cause may be subject to benefit sanctions.

All people participating in the pilots are expected to meet benefit conditions and show that they are actively seeking and available for work; normal adjudication action will be taken for people who do not meet these conditions or refuse employment.

National Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment for which training providers the London chamber of commerce and industry verify and award NVQ certificates. [27119]

Mr. Paice: The Department does not hold this information. The National Council for Vocational Qualifications, as accrediting body for NVQs, is provided with details of approved NVQ centres by the London chamber of commerce and industry examinations board under the status of commercial in confidence.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will investigate the circumstances surrounding the award of business administration and information technology NVQ qualifications by the London chamber of commerce and industry for courses provided by Sight and Sound and funded by Solotec. [27120]

Mr. Paice: I understand that the National Council for Vocational Qualifications is undertaking an investigation into this matter. The Department is being kept fully informed and will received a copy of the report when it is finalised.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will carry out a comprehensive review of the way in which NVQs are awarded. [27121]

Mr. Paice: NVQs were the subject of a comprehensive review by Gordon Beaumont who reported on the 100 most used NVQs and Scottish vocational qualifications in January. I have agreed an action plan, published on 27 March, in response to his recommendations, which includes actions relating to assessment, verification and certification of awards. These are being taken forward by NCVQ under a major programme of work which is sponsored by this Department.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what steps she has taken to ensure that the London chamber of commerce and industry is a suitable body to issue NVQ certificates; [27130]

(2) if she will investigate the suitability of the London chamber of commerce and industry verifiers to assess NVQ portfolios. [27131]

Mr. Paice: The National Council for Vocational Qualifications is responsible for regulating the NVQ system and its quality. The council regularly reviews the performance of awarding bodies to ensure that they have adequate arrangements and resources for quality assurance and that systems approved at the time of NVQ accreditation continue to operate effectively. The council has recently agreed a plan with the London chamber of commerce and industry examinations board requiring strengthening of arrangements for centre approval, external verification and internal verification.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the Government office for London was first informed about concerns surrounding the award of NVQs by the London chamber of commerce and industry for students attending courses organised by Sight and Sound. [27129]

Mr. Paice: The Government office for London first became aware about concerns surrounding the award of NVQs following information from Solotec on 16 April 1996.

TRANSPORT

Lorry Drivers (Eyesight Requirements)

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to receive the information from the relevant national authorities on eyesight requirements for lorry drivers required by the second European directive on driving licences, 91/439/EEC. [27072]

Mr. Norris: We have received replies from some, and are awaiting replies from other EU member states. We hope to receive outstanding replies shortly.

EU Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the directives which have affected his Department in each of the past three years and (a) the legislation introduced as a result of the directives, (b) the legislation which goes beyond the minimum standards set out in the directives and (c) the clauses within each piece of legislation which amplify the minimum standards set out in the directives. [27080]

Mr. Norris: The relevant directives are listed in the following table, along with the United kingdom legislation introduced as a result. In our view, in no case does the legislation go beyond the minimum standards required by the directive in question. It is intended that this should also be the case for legislation still in preparation.

Number	Title and description of Community Instrument	United Kingdom legislation
93/103/EEC	Minimum safety and health requirements for work on board fishing vessels	Implementation in progress.
93/116/EEC	Council Directive relating to interior fittings of motor vehicles	Motor Vehicles (EC Type Approval) (Amendment) Regulations 1994

95/54/EC	Commission Directive relating to suppression of radio interference and to type approval of motor vehicles and their trailers	Not yet implemented.
95/56/EC	Commission Directive relating to devices to prevent the unauthorised use of motor vehicles	Not yet implemented.

East London River Crossing

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he will lift the line orders for the east London river crossing. [27501]

Mr. Norris: The Government have decided that the east London river crossing line order should be revoked. Statutory procedures leading to revocation will be initiated as soon as practicable.

Bus Companies (Fuel Duty Rebate)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what sums were paid by his Department in fuel duty rebate in 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96 to (a) British Bus plc, (b) First Bus plc and (c) Stagecoach Holdings plc and their subsidiaries. [27231]

Mr. Norris: It would not be appropriate for the Government to disclose this information, which is regarded as commercially confidential, about private sector bus operators.

Fishes Royal

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list for each of the last five years (a) the number of staff employed and (b) the total cost to his Department in respect of responsibilities for Fishes Royal; and if he will make a statement; [26700]

(2) how much has been received in each of the last five years in respect of the disposal for Fishes Royal; and if he will make a statement. [26702]

Mr. Norris: I have asked the chief executive of the Coastguard agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from C. J. Harris to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 29 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about Fishes Royal

PQ 1843/95/96

Fishes Royal are the responsibility of the Receiver of Wreck who spends approximately 7.5 per cent. of her time on this function with the occasional assistance of local Coastguard Officers. This figure has remained largely unchanged during the last five years. The total cost since 1993, including staff costs, is as follows:

1993–94: £9,150

1994–95: £28,250

1995–96: £40,600

Figures prior to 1993–94 are not readily available.

PQ 1856/95/96

No money has been received in respect of the disposal of Fishes Royal in the last 5 years.

Aircraft Leasing

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list, for each of the last five years, the number of occasions on which his Department has been asked to grant permission for (a) dry leasing of aircraft and (b) wet leasing of aircraft. [26821]

Mr. Norris: The following table shows the number of wet and dry lease applications which have been made to the Department of Transport over the last five years:

	Wet	Dry
1991	35	6
1992	48	14
1993	49	36
1994	69	14
1995	85	31

MV Derbyshire

Mr. Dixon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 23 April, Official Report, columns 76–77, which months of the year it is possible to visit the wreck of the MV Derbyshire; and what assessment he has made of whether the recommendation of the assessors and advisers will be ready in time for a visit in the current year. [27236]

Mr. Norris: An assessment of the weather impact on operations in the area of Derbyshire site has been made in conjunction with the meteorological departments of the UK and USA and additional information from commercial organisations that have carried out underwater operations in this region. We expect to receive the recommendations of the assessors and advisors in time for a visit this year if that proves practicable.

Rail Franchises

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will publish the franchise agreements for those passenger rail franchises that have recently been awarded by the franchising director. [27134]

Mr. Watts: The Gatwick Express, InterCity East Coast and Midland Main Line franchises commenced operation yesterday, 28 April. Copies of the franchise agreements and ancillary documents have today been placed in the Library. Certain provision of these documents have been deleted in line with section 73 of the Railways Act 1993.

The Network SouthCentral franchise will commence operation as soon as practicable and a copy of the franchise agreement will be placed in the Library thereafter.

Serco Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what contracts his Department and his agencies have with Serco Ltd., what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should be he seek early termination of the contracts; and if he will make a statement. [26688]

Mr. Norris [pursuant to his answer, 25 April 1996, c. 246-47]: My Department also has the following contracts with Serco Ltd:

Description	Termination date
Supply and Installation of MIDAS instation and outstation equipment	Mid June 1996
Supply, Installation and Commissioning of Back Projection Display	31 July 1996
NMCS1 Maintenance	7 October 1996
Supply and installation of MIDAS System Manchester Network M62	7 October 1996
NCD Stores Yate	31 January 1997

Description	Termination date
Motorway Signals Mk2, Enhanced Message Signs, Cantilever Structures	18 March 1997
Supply of NMCS2 Core Systems	Mid June 1997
NMCS2 Software Upgrade and Supply of NMCS1	Mid September 1997
CCTV Maintenance Contract	28 January 1998
Refurbishment of Motorway Communication Equipment (call-off)	1 October 1998
Regional Maintenance contract	19 November 2000

The total cost of the contracts is £24,215,000. Individual contract costs are not provided as this information is commercially confidential.

The cost to the Department of early termination of these contracts would be negotiable and depend on the individual circumstances and loss suffered by the contractor. In any case, this amount, when taken together with any payments already made, should not exceed the total contract price.

PRIME MINISTER

Beef Exports (EU Ban)

Mr. John Morris: To ask the Prime Minister if he will take measures (a) at the Council of Ministers of the European Community and (b) the Court of Justice in Luxembourg to expedite the hearing of the British Government's proposed case against the European Commission's embargo on the export of British beef, particularly to third countries; and if he will instruct the Attorney-General to present the British case. [26372]

The Prime Minister [holding answer 23 April]: The European Union ban on the export of British beef is not justified on the basis of science as a measure necessary to protect public health, and it is totally disproportionate. We are pressing at every opportunity in the Council of Ministers for this ban on the export of British beef to be lifted. We are also challenging the legality of the ban before the European Court of Justice.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Trials (Media Reporting)

33. Mr. Soley: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on the reporting of trials in the media. [25667]

The Attorney-General: The law provides a general right to make fair and accurate reports of legal proceedings held in public, published contemporaneously and in good faith, subject to limited statutory exceptions such as those to protect rape victims and children and certain powers to order postponement of reporting where necessary to avoid prejudice to the administration of justice.

Financial Fraud

34. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement on his Department's role in respect of fraud in financial institutions. [25669]

The Solicitor-General: The role of the Serious Fraud Office is to deter fraud through the investigation and prosecution of cases of serious and complex fraud which fall within the criteria set by the director following the recommendations of the Davie report.

Crown Prosecution Service

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Attorney-General what is the current annual cost of running the Crown Prosecution Service; what was the cost five years ago; and if he will make a statement. [26047]

The Attorney-General: The current running cost provision for the CPS in 1996–97 is £220 million. Running cost expenditure in 1992–93, five years ago, was £201 million in cash terms and £222 million in constant prices. After taking account of price changes, the CPS's running costs are lower in 1996–97 in real terms by approximately 1 per cent. than they were five years ago in 1992–93.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Attorney-General what new proposals he has to improve the effectiveness of prosecution procedures. [25660]

The Attorney-General: Current initiatives between the Crown Prosecution Service and the police include steps to improve the quality and timeliness of case preparation by reducing the volume of paperwork in police files and piloting the use of CPS lawyers giving on-the-spot advice in busy police stations.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Taiwan (British Citizens)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British citizens are currently resident in Taiwan; and if he will make a statement. [26991]

Mr. Hanley: There are estimated to be about 800 British citizens resident in Taiwan, mainly business men with families, English language teachers and missionaries.

Iran

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to raise the subject of human rights in Iran with his EU counterparts. [25904]

Mr. Hanley: We frequently raise and discuss the subject of human rights in Iran with our European Union partners. The EU co-sponsors resolutions critical of Iran at the United Nations Commission on Human Rights and the United Nations General Assembly. The most recent resolution was adopted by the UNCHR on 24 April 1996. The EU also raises specific cases of human rights abuses with the Iranian authorities. We will continue to work closely with our EU partners on this issue.

BBC Worldwide Television (Arabic)

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proposals he has to ensure the continuation and expansion of the BBC world television service in Arabic. [25905]

Mr. Hanley: BBC Arabic TV, a commercial service of BBC Worldwide Television, ceased operation on 22 April. Decisions about any future developments are a matter for BBC Worldwide Television.

Nuclear Material

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs to what purpose the nuclear material referred to in Cm 3195 and Cm 3196 is to be put; and if he will make a statement. [26766]

Mr. David Davis: The end-uses of the nuclear material and technology, referred to in Cms 3195 and 3196, are respectively:

(a) the manufacture of nuclear fuel and/or associated research and development; and

(b) the recovery of a small amount of highly enriched uranium from medical radio-isotope production wastes.

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of the uranium oxide powder referred to in Cm 3195 is (a) 235 uranium oxide and (b) 238 uranium oxide. [26765]

Mr. Davis: The uranium oxide powder referred to in Cm 3195 will contain a maximum of 19.95 per cent. uranium 235, the remainder being uranium 238.

Gibraltar to Spain Crossing

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the average time taken by a motor car and occupants to cross the border from Gibraltar to Spain in the period 1 to 14 April in the years (a) 1994, (b) 1995 and (c) 1996; what representations he has made to the Spanish authorities on delays in the crossing; and what response he has received. [27071]

Mr. David Davis: The relevant figures are:

1 to 14 April 1994: frequent delays of 30 to 45 minutes, up to a maximum of 90 minutes.

1 to 14 April 1995: frequent delays of between one and two hours, up to a maximum of four hours.

1 to 14 April 1996: frequent delays of between one and one-and-a-half hours, up to a maximum of three hours.

We have repeatedly made representations to the Spanish Government about the delays at the Gibraltar frontier which remain unacceptable. They are totally disproportionate to the need to make customs and immigration checks.

Immigration

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) when the explanatory statement explaining the reasons for the refusal of a visa for Mrs. Shazia Shaukat, Ref. IMM/D2009, was (a) completed at the post in Islamabad and (b) dispatched to the immigration appellate authorities in London; and if he will make a statement; [27098]

(2) when the application made to the post in Islamabad by Mr. Mohammed Wahid Sadiq, Ref. IMM/C7406, to join his wife in the United Kingdom will be decided; when Mr. Sadiq was interviewed; when the letter dated 9 February from Bradford law centre concerning this case was answered; and if he will make a statement. [27100]

Mr. Hanley: I have asked the high commissioner at Islamabad for details and will arrange for the hon. Member to receive a substantive reply from the migration and visa correspondence unit as soon as possible.

Lebanon

Mr. David Young: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to Israel to cease its attacks on non-combatants in Lebanon and its violation of Lebanese territory. [27263]

Mr. Hanley: We have made our concerns about the situation in Lebanon clear to the Israelis on a number of occasions. We have called for an immediate ceasefire, including in UN Security Council resolution 1052, which was co-sponsored by the UK.

Organic Fertilisers (BSE Risk)

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the risks from bovine spongiform encephalopathy-related diseases to users of organic fertilisers with special reference to (a) blood, fish and bone, (b) bonemeal and (c) dried blood. [23844]

Mrs. Browning: I have been asked to reply.

There is no scientific evidence available to suggest that the use of organic fertilisers containing blood, fish, bone, bonemeal and dried blood pose a human health risk.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Private Fiance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the revenue spending estimated by his Department in connection with the private finance initiative for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26631]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The revenue spending estimated by my Department in connection with the private finance initiative is as follows:

1995–96: £0 million

1996–97: £0.2 million

1997–98: £3.6 million.

Power Stations

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will detail the provisions for ensuring proper maintenance of (a) coal-fired, (b) oil-fired and (c) gas-fired power stations established under the Electricity Act 1989; and if he will make a statement. [26798]

Mr. Page: Power stations must comply with emission standards laid down by Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution and also with the requirements of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 enforced by the Health and Safety Executive. Provided these requirements are met, maintenance standards are a commercial matter for the operators. However, the pricing mechanism by which generators receive payment from the electricity pool includes an element related to the availability of generating capacity, and this gives generators a market incentive to ensure that their stations are sufficiently well maintained to be available.

Winfrith Reactor

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what advice he has received from the nuclear installations inspectorate on the pre-commencement safety report for the divestment of the A59 active handling team; and if NII approval of the safety case for the divestment is required. [27003]

Mr. Page: Responsibility for safety of United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority operations is a matter for UKAEA. I would not normally expect to receive advice from the NII on day-to-day safety matters and it has not raised any concerns with me on this case. The safety implications of the arrangement are being considered by UKAEA, the licensed operator, and the NII in accordance with normal licensing procedures.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the recorded safety incidents and the related costs which occurred during the execution of the contract by Wastechem to decontaminate the pond furniture at the Winfrith steam-generating heavy water reactor. [27037]

Mr. Page: There were no ministerially reportable incidents during the conduct of this contract. Detailed questions about safety issues and costs are an operational matter for UKAEA. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) which companies were shortlisted to bid for the work associated with the A59 active handling building at Winfrith; [27001]

(2) what sums were paid to Wastechem to decontaminate the pond furniture at the Winfrith steam-generating heavy water reactor; [27041]

(3) what was (a) the contracted time agreed with Wastechem and (b) the actual time taken to decontaminate the pond furniture at the Winfrith steam-generating heavy water reactor; [27036]

(4) what percentage of the pond furniture at the Winfrith steam-generating heavy water reactor was decontaminated by Wastechem to the level specified in the contract; and what was the cost of the storage and disposal of the remainder; [27038]

(5) for what reasons (a) AEA Technology was not permitted to bid and (b) the British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. bid was rejected for the work associated with the A59 active handling building at Winfrith; [27002]

(6) what time scale was given in the bid by Wastechem for the work specified in the invitation to tender for the A59 active handling divestment at Winfrith; what representations he has received from United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority that the time scale be extended; and what estimate he has made of the cost of that extension; [27004]

(7) what estimate he has made of the savings from placing the contract for the A59 active handling divestment contract with Wastechem over undertaking the work on an in-house basis; [27005]

(8) what were the contract prices submitted by (a) Wastechem and (b) AEA Technology to decontaminate the pond furniture at the Winfrith steam-generating heavy water reactor; [27040]

(9) what savings were achieved by awarding the contract to decontaminate the pond furniture at the Winfrith steam-generating heavy water reactor to Wastechem; [27035]

(10) if he will make a statement on the claim made by Wastechem against the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority in connection with the decontamination of the pond furniture at the Winfrith steam-generating heavy water reactor and the amount of the settlement reached. [27039]

Mr. Page: These are operational matters for UKAEA. I have asked the chairman to write to the hon. Member.

Research Councils

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what research council category have been allocated to Scotland in each of the last three years; and what figures are projected for the next three years. [26331]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 23 April 1996]: Research council expenditure in Scotland was as follows:

£ million

Research council	1993–94	1994–95
BBSRC	—	21.1
ESRC	5.2	4.8
EPSRC	—	32.0
MRC	33.6	32.7
NERC	14.3	10.4
PPARC	—	10.4
CCLRC	—	—
AFRC	10.5	—
SERC	45.8	—
Total	109.4	111.4

Figures for 1995–96 are not yet available, and a meaningful projection of Scotland's allocation for the next three years cannot be made as a significant proportion of the funding, comprising grants to higher education institutions and postgraduate studentships, depends on the number of successful Scottish grant applications that are made in this period.

The Agricultural and Food Research Council and the Science and Engineering Research Council ceased to exist in April 1994. The Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council, Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council and the Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council came into being on 1 April 1994. The Council for the Central Laboratory of the Research Councils came into being on 1 April 1995.

Manufacturing Employment

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of future employment levels in the manufacturing sector; and if he will make a statement. [27000]

Mr. Lang: Manufacturing employment rose in February and more than 50,000 extra jobs have been created since the beginning of 1994. Both the British Chambers of Commerce and the Institute of Directors have reported that firms expect to increase employment over the next four months.

Industrial Development Boards

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if (a) members of his Department's regional industrial development boards and (b) other advisers are required to register and record personal financial interests in companies (i) at the date of appointment to the board or to an advisory position and (ii) in circumstances where companies in which a financial interest is held apply for Department of Trade and Industry financial assistance. [25609]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 19 April 1996]: Yes.

Financial Assistance

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what financial assistance, including loan guarantees, has been given by his Department since 1980 to South West Leisure Products Ltd. by (a) type of assistance and (b) date, including month. [24647]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 16 April 1996]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to my answer of 29 February 1996, Official Report, column 676, which was however confused by a typographical error in the Official Report.

South West Leisure Products Ltd. received regional selective assistance totalling £23,068 in January and October 1985 and regional development grant totalling £66,900 between 1985 and February 1988.

Two loans to the company were guaranteed under the loan guarantee scheme in August 1986.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what role was played by (i) Mr. Kenneth Holmes and (ii) Mr. Michael Jordan in the granting of DTI financial assistance to (a) Pan Atlantia (UK) plc, (b) Van Pieters Ltd., (c) Portcurno Management Company Ltd., (d) South West Farm Processors Ltd., (e) ROM-Data Ltd., (f) Dellcourts Ltd. and (g) Character Ceramics Ltd. [22573]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 25 March 1996]: Kenneth Holmes, acting as an external accountancy adviser, advised the Department on regional selective assistance applications from Porthcurno Management Company Ltd. and ROM-Data Ltd. Although he did not advise the Department on the offers made to Character Ceramics Ltd. in 1992 and 1993, he did advise on an earlier application from the business when trading as Rodelco China.

The regional selective assistance to South West Farm Processors Ltd. was considered by the South West industrial development board while Kenneth Holmes was the chairman of SWIDB, but before he became an external adviser to the Department. Because of a conflict of interest, Mr. Holmes absented himself from the discussion in March 1990 at which the SWIDB decided to recommend the grant.

Michael Jordan was a member of SWIDB when it considered the application by Porthcurno Management Company Ltd.—although an offer was subsequently made to the company, it went into liquidation without any grant payments being made.

Neither Kenneth Holmes nor Michael Jordan advised the Department on the grants made to Pan Atlantia (UK) Ltd. or Van Pieters plc. No financial assistance was sought by Dellcourts Ltd. under any of the Department's principal regional, enterprise or technology schemes.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list those employees or others giving advice in any capacity in his Department's south-west regional office who took part in the assessment of (a) the regional selective assistance grant in 1993 and (b) any other financial assistance made to Pendennis Shipyard Ltd. Falmouth since 1985. [21187]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 18 March 1996]: Departmental officials principally involved in the assessment of the regional selective assistance grant application in 1993 were John Bowder, then regional director; David Johnson, the deputy regional director; Mike Twomey and Kris Bale, also both of the regional office; and David Reams, economics and statistics division. Kenneth Holmes, an external accountancy adviser, was also involved in the assessment.

The case was also considered by the South West industrial development board.

No other assistance has been paid to Pendennis Shipyard Ltd. under the Department's principal regional, economic or technology schemes during the period mentioned.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what role Mr. Michael Jordan performed in (a) the granting of the regional selective grants to Pendennis Shipyard Ltd., Falmouth in (i) 1993 and (ii) 1995 and (b) the loan in 1994 to Queensbury International Ltd., Plymouth. [22567]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 25 March 1996]: In respect of the 1993 grant to Pendennis Shipyard Ltd., I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 22 March 1996, Official Report, column 373. The company received a second tranche of regional selective assistance in 1995, but this was made under the terms of the 1993 offer.

Michael Jordan played no role in the Department's consideration of the 1994 guarantee under the loan guarantee scheme to Queensbury International Ltd.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what financial assistance has been given by his Department since 1980 to (a) Marine Projects Ltd., (b) the Renwick Group of companies, (c) Brock's Fireplaces Ltd., (d) Vickring Ltd., (e) K. J. Ward Holdings Ltd., (f) Valetare Ltd. and (g) Devon Conversions Ltd. [22571]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 25 March 1996]: Two of the companies have received assistance under the Department's principal regional, enterprise and technology schemes since 1980:

Company	Scheme	Payment £	Year
Marine Projects (Plymouth) Ltd.	Regional selective assistance (three projects)	910,000	1984–91
Valetare Ltd.	Consultancy Initiative	2,379	1993

Under the loan guarantee scheme, a loan to Renwicks Garages 1982 Ltd.—later trading as Vickring Ltd.—was guaranteed in 1982, and a loan to Renwick Computer Services Ltd. was guaranteed in 1984.

South West Industrial Development Board

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the membership since 1980 of the South West industrial development board, giving full names and dates of birth. [24649]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 16 April 1996]: The board's membership is published annually in the reports on the Industrial Development Act 1982 which are deposited in the Library of the House.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the members of his Department's South West industrial development board for each year since 1987. [24207]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 2 April 1996]: This information is published annually in the reports on the Industrial Development Act, which are deposited in the Library of the House.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library a copy of the minutes of his Department's South West industrial development board meetings since 1 January 1990. [25607]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 19 April 1996]: No. Meetings of the regional industrial development boards record commercially confidential advice to Ministers. This has been the practice under all Governments.

Serco Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what contracts his Department and his agencies have with Serco Ltd; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [26687]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Details of the two contracts that my Department currently has with Serco Ltd. are as follows.

The DTI has a contract with NPL Management Ltd.—a wholly owned subsidiary of Serco Group plc—to operate the National Physical Laboratory on behalf of my Department. A programme of work broadly defined in the contract is commissioned from NPL by my Department on terms similar to those which apply to the procurement of research and development from all third parties, and at a rate negotiated prior to award of the contract. Serco does not, however, receive any fee for operating NPL on behalf of the DTI. The contract is for a period of five years from 1 October 1995. Early termination is provided for in the contract, but this does not commit my Department to any penalty payments.

The National Weights and Measures Laboratory—an executive agency within DTI—has a contract with Serco to maintain its building and plant. The cost of the contract is dependent on the extent of the work required in any year. The cost in 1995–96 was £91,378. The contract expires on 30 September 1996. Early termination is provided for in the contract subject to three months' notice, but this does not commit the agency to any penalty payments.

Business Links

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what research his Department is carrying out into the relationship between business links and business incubators; and when he plans to publish the findings. [27006]

Mr. Page: Business incubators can be a valuable method of providing intensive support to small companies with growth potential, perhaps most obviously for high-technology companies working in related product areas. My Department is aware of a number of different business incubator projects and is also represented on the enterprise panel set up to determine whether practical steps can be taken to encourage further development of the incubator movement in the UK. We understand that the panel is due to launch its report in July.

We would fully expect business incubator projects to have close relationships with their local business links. There is, however, no specific research being undertaken on the relationship between business links and business incubators.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Industrial Development Board

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will provide a breakdown of expenditure on activities to promote Northern Ireland as an industrial development location, including overseas representation, public relations and advertising, promotional aids, visits, seminars, exhibitions, sponsorships of research in the Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland for 1994–95 and 1995–96. [26229]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 April 1996]: In 1994–95 and 1995–96, the Industrial Development Board for Northern Ireland, to promote Northern Ireland as a industrial development location, spent as follows:

1994–95: 5,781 (£000)

1995–96: 6,222 (£000s).

These figures comprise:

	1994–95	1995–96
Representation outside Northern Ireland	2,779	2,724
Public Relations	1,434	1,438
Advertising	119	624
Promotional Aids	1,278	1,295
Visits	61	31
Seminars/Exhibitions	110	110
Sponsorship of Research	Nil	Nil
Total	5,781	6,222

The marked increase in advertising expenditure in 1995–96 over 1994–95 was to allow the Industrial Development Board to gain the maximum publicity from President Clinton's successful visit to Northern Ireland in December 1995. Representations outside Northern Ireland include Great Britain.

Read Codes (NHS)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what part-funding contribution his Department has made towards the cost of development of Read codes for computerising health and hospital record-keeping and information systems. [27066]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 26 April 1996]: The Department of Health and Social Services has made no contribution towards the cost of development of Read codes.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Taylor Report

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list by recommendation (a) those recommendations listed in the Taylor report which have been implemented and (b) the target date for implementation for those that have not. [26525]

Mr. Sproat: The Government have implemented 70 out of the 76 recommendations. Recommendations 1, 2, 3, 5, 6(a), 7 up to and including 23, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, in part, 30 up to and including 71, 74, 75 and 76 have been implemented. The Government have no plans at present to implement the remaining recommendations.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many football clubs have been prevented from promotion as a result of their grounds not meeting the requirements of the Taylor report. [26526]

Mr. Sproat: None.

Battle of Trafalgar Bicentenary

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what preparations her Department is making for the commemoration of the bicentenary of the battle of Trafalgar and the death of Nelson. [25916]

Mr. Sproat: We shall consider this nearer the time.

Football (Corruption)

Miss Hoey: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what evidence she has presented to the premier league football inquiry into football corruption in English clubs. [25735]

Mr. Sproat: None.

British Library

Ms Rachel Squire: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much money has been spent by the British library in the development and operation of its automated information systems strategy to date. [25595]

Mr. Sproat: The British library's information systems strategy determines the overall framework within which the library incurs expenditure on the operation and development of its information technology systems. The strategy was published in November 1995. In the financial year 1995–96, the library spent some £6.5 million on operating its information technology systems, and £4.5 million on their further development. In 1996–97, the library has budgeted £7.3 million for operating information technology systems, and £6.1 million for their development.

Television Licences

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what consultations took place concerning the decision to require owners of second homes to have a second television licence; and if she will make a statement. [25863]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 23 April 1996]: The BBC is responsible for interpreting the television licensing regulations. On the basis of independent legal advice, the corporation announced on 29 March that second home owners require a separate television licence if television is used in their second homes. The Department was kept informed of the BBC's deliberations.

Media Violence

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) if it is an aim of Government policy to reduce the amount of violence depicted on television; [25208]

(2) if she will monitor the average weekly number of murders by shooting depicted on each television channel and publish the results on a regular basis. [25348]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 23 April 1996]: Broadcasters in the UK are independent of Government, but have clear responsibilities with regard to programme content. The broadcasting and regulatory bodies—the governors of the BBC, the Independent Television Commission, the Radio Authority and the Welsh Authority—produce and regularly review codes and guidelines with which broadcasters are obliged to comply. These set out the standards to be maintained with regard to the depiction of violence and sexual conduct and issues of general taste and decency, as well as other issues affecting programme content. These are in addition to broadcasters' own guidelines. The Government firmly believe that broadcasters must exercise caution, and be sensitive to public concerns about the depiction of violence, and have expressed this view to the chairmen of the broadcasting and regulatory bodies.

It is the statutory duty of the Broadcasting Standards Council, under the Broadcasting Act 1990, to monitor the portrayal of violence, as well as sexual conduct and standards of taste and decency, in radio and television programmes. This research has been conducted and published annually since 1991.

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what recent representations she has received about the depiction of violence in the media, with particular reference to its effect on children. [22304]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 1 April 1996]: The Department receives a number of representations about the depiction of violence in the media generally, many of which express considerable concern about its possible effect on children. Issues of the depiction of violence in film and video releases are, of course, for my right hon. and learned Friend the Home Secretary. While issues of programme content in broadcasting are a matter for the independent broadcasting and regulatory bodies, the governors of the BBC, the Independent Television Commission, the Radio Authority and the Welsh Authority, the Government strongly believe that broadcasters should exercise caution in this area, which generates considerable public concern.

Public Bodies

Dr. Wright: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many appointments to the public bodies listed in "Public Bodies" for her Department were made during 1994–95 from names supplied by the public appointments unit; and if she will list them. [25958]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 22 April 1996]: None.

Archaeological Sites

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she plans to introduce legislation to implement her proposals for new controls for archaeological sites. [25844]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 23 April 1996]: Proposals to update and improve the legislation governing the protection of archaeological sites will be included in the heritage Green Paper, to be published shortly. Subject to the outcome of the consultation exercise and given a suitable legislative opportunity, these proposals will then go forward for consideration by Parliament.

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much was paid late to the private sector for goods and services by her Department in 1995–96. [26151]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 24 April 1996]: The information requested is not available, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what percentage of bills were paid late by her Department in 1995–96. [26127]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 24 April 1996]: My Department is committed to the payment of invoices within agreed contractual provisions or within 30 days of the presentation of a valid invoice or delivery, if later. Although the information requested is not available, and could be provided only at disproportionate cost, on the basis of a sample of invoices received by the Department of National Heritage during 1995–96, 91 per cent. were paid on time.

Copyright

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what progress her Department has made towards obtaining a photocopying licence from the Copyright Licensing Agency to ensure compliance with copyright law. [26719]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 25 April 1996]: The Department of National Heritage is currently discussing the terms of its photocopying licence with the Copyright Licensing Agency. We expect to sign the final licence shortly.

Five Nations Championship

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what consultations she has had with the four home rugby unions concerning the equal partition principle of the receipts from the television contract for televising the Five Nations championship. [27313]

Mr. Sproat: None.

Serco Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what contracts her Department and her agencies have with Serco Ltd.; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should she seek early termination of the contract; and if she will make a statement. [26683]

Mr. Sproat: My Department and the Historic Royal Palaces agency do not have any contracts with Serco Ltd. However, the Royal Parks agency has two contracts the details of which are set out in the list. In neither case would the Royal Parks agency be liable for any penalties in the event that the contract was terminated early.

Contract	Estimated annual cost (£)	Duration	Completion date
Hyde Park Grounds maintenance	868,784	4 years	3 March 2000
Richmond Park Grounds maintenance	533,061	4 years	3 March 2000

Football Trust

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the budget of the Football Trust in each of the last five years; and what percentage of that budget was received from pools betting duty. [26528]

Mr. Sproat: The information is as follows:

Football Trust income 1992 to 1996

Year ended 5 April	Income £ million	Percentage of budget received from pools betting duty concessions
1992	34.9	58
1993	38.7	55
1994	38.9	58
1995	41.5	55
1996	25.7	62

Crown Immunity

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many buildings in the Government's historic estate (a) are in disrepair and (b) have Crown immunity; how many of those in disrepair have Crown immunity; what proposals she has to (i) tackle this disrepair and (ii) end Crown immunity for such buildings; and if she will make a statement. [25717]

Mr. Sproat: There are about 1,600 historic buildings in the Government estate, which are either statutorily listed or scheduled ancient monuments. All have Crown immunity. Thirty-one are known to be in disrepair and at risk. Departments have developed proposals to dispose of 17 of these, mostly through sale on the open market. The remainder are subject to regular comprehensive surveys, used to prioritise essential repairs. Many of the 31 buildings at risk are the responsibility of the Ministry of Defence, whose expert historic buildings advisory group considers ways in which the buildings might be disposed of or brought into use.

The Government have already announced the intention to end Crown immunity from planning and conservation controls at a suitable legislative opportunity. The implications of this for certain aspects of conservation policy will be discussed in the forthcoming Green Paper.

Dome Cinema, Worthing

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what action her Department is taking to save the Dome cinema at Worthing, West Sussex; and if she will make a statement. [26614]

Mr. Sproat: The future of this building, which is currently listed as grade 2, is a matter for its owners and the local planning authority, which is responsible for the control of works to listed buildings. My right hon. Friend's responsibility is restricted to the listed status of the building. A request that it is upgraded to 2* is currently being considered by English Heritage, my statutory adviser on listing matters.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what estimate she has made of funding to be made available to her Department through the private finance initiative in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26173]

Mr. Sproat: The estimated private finance component of projects completed, under way or in prospect in my Department, its agencies and non-departmental public bodies is as follows:

(a) 1995–96: £6.01 million

(b) 1996–97: £14.5 million

(c) 1997–98: £26 million.

Ms Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the revenue spending estimated by her Department in connection with the private finance initiative for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26627]

Mr. Sproat: The Department, including its agencies and sponsored bodies, have engaged in a number of PFI projects, which involve the following income generation or revenue spending:

	Estimated income	Estimated spending	Surplus
1995–96	445,000	418,000	27,000
1996–97	445,000	350,000	95,000
1997–98	445,000	150,000	295,000

Tourism

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what assessment has been made of the principal reasons indicated by research as to why foreign tourists visit Britain. [26791]

Mr. Sproat: From time to time, the British Tourist Authority produces information about features mentioned by holiday makers as being enjoyable parts of their visits. In the 1988 overseas visitors survey, the particular features of Britain which visitors enjoyed included: the people, mentioned by 30 per cent.; heritage and cultural attractions, 26 per cent.; countryside, scenery and villages, 21 per cent.; and specific towns, areas or attractions, 18 per cent. The 1995 overseas visitors to London survey indicated that visitors to London, which attracts 51 per cent. of all overseas visitors to Britain, including 84 per cent. of all first-time visitors, mentioned as enjoyable features of their visit: historic houses, sites and cathedrals, 38 per cent.; British way of life and people, 21 per cent.; museums and galleries, 18 per cent.; shopping, 15 per cent.; London architecture, 13 per cent.; parks and gardens, 12 per cent.; and pageantry, history and ceremonial, 11 per cent.

National Heritage Memorial Fund

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the grants of over £3 million that have been made by the national heritage memorial fund; and if she will list each of the organisations that have received grants in excess of this amount. [26307]

Mr. Sproat: The information is as follows:

Receiving Organisation	Amount (£ million)
Heritage Memorial Fund
The National Trust—to acquire Kedleston Hall	14.0
The National Trust—to acquire Belton House	9.0
Weston Park Foundation—endowment payment	7.8

SCOTLAND

Cairngorm Funicular Railway

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the application from the Cairngorm chairlift company for financial assistance from Highlands and Islands Enterprise for an uplift facility at Cairngorm makes provision for any of the money or facilities established to be transferred, either wholly or in part, to the Cairngorm Mountain Railway Company Ltd.; and if, under the terms of the application, it would be possible to consider such a transfer in the future. [25914]

Mr. Kynoch: Ministers are currently considering an application by Highlands and Islands Enterprise for approval to incur expenditure related to the proposed Cairngorm funicular project. I am unaware of any provision in the application for the transfer of money or resources to the Cairngorm Mountain Railway Company.

The precise terms of the application for assistance made by the Cairngorm Chairlift Company to Highlands and Islands Enterprise are a matter for the enterprise organisation. However, as I pointed out in my answer to the hon. Member on 2 April at column 344, in the case of assistance provided by Highlands and Islands Enterprise it is a standard condition that the onward transfer of assets in respect of which financial assistance has been provided may not take place without the consent of that organisation.

Rural Home Ownership Grants

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list for each district and islands council area for 1995–96 (a) the total number of rural home ownership grants awarded by Scottish Homes and (b) the expenditure on rural home ownership grants. [26552]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The information requested is a matter for Scottish Homes. I have asked its chairman, Mr. John Ward, to write to the hon. Member.

Crofter Building Grants and Loans Scheme

Mrs. Ray Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many new houses were provided through the crofter building grants and loans scheme in 1995–96; and what has been the total number of improvements through the scheme. [26553]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Data on the number of new house and house improvement projects completed during a given financial year are not collated for statistical purposes. However, in 1995–96, 94 new house and 113 house improvement projects were approved for grant and/or loan assistance under the scheme.

Mrs. Michie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been for each year since 1989–90 (a) the actual expenditure on grants provided through the crofter building grants and loan scheme and (b) the actual expenditure on loans provided through the scheme. [26554]

Mr. Robertson: Prior to 1990–91 expenditure records did not differentiate between grant and loan expenditure. In 1989–90, the total expenditure under the scheme was £3.562 million. The information for the following years is set out in the table.

£ million

Financial year	Grant	Loan
1990–91	1.568	2.557
1991–92	1.555	2.592
1992–93	1.836	2.959
1993–94	1.887	2.901

[1] Provisional outturn

Strathclyde Police (Corruption Investigation)

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what reports the Lord Advocate has received, and when, from Strathclyde police on their internal investigations into allegations of corrupt links between police officers and organised crime; what action he has taken in respect of these reports; and if he will make a statement. [26917]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate informs me that this matter was first reported to the regional procurator fiscal at Glasgow on 2 June 1995. The regional procurator fiscal has been kept regularly informed of progress in the investigation by Strathclyde police into a number of allegations by a convicted criminal about the conduct of some of its officers and the activities of prominent criminals in the Glasgow area. The regional procurator fiscal has in turn kept the Crown Office fully informed and, where appropriate, Crown counsel's instructions have been obtained concerning relevant aspects of the investigation. The investigation is continuing under the independent guidance and direction of the regional procurator fiscal. It would be entirely inappropriate to disclose details of the allegations or of the investigation.

EU Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the directives which have affected his Department in each of the past three years and (a) the legislation introduced as a result of the directives, (b) the legislation which goes beyond the minimum standards set out in the directives and (c) the clauses within each piece of legislation which amplify the minimum standards set out in the directives. [27076]

Mr. Kynoch: Given the range of my Department's interests, it is affected by many directives. None of these applies only to Scotland and principal responsibility for the relevant UK legislation therefore lies in all cases elsewhere.

Gaelic Education

Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he has completed his consideration of the inspectors' report on provisions for Gaelic education in schools; and if he will make a statement. [27566]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have now considered the inspectorate report on Gaelic education and have taken into account the views of the 123 organisations and individuals who submitted comments on it. I was pleased to note that the report highlighted the impressive progress which has been made in developing Gaelic education since the mid-1980s.

The report provides an invaluable picture of the strengths and the weaknesses of Gaelic education at this juncture and I am anxious to use it to determine the best way forward. With all resources for education coming under pressure from competing priorities, it is important that resources for Gaelic education are used in the way that best supports the future of the Gaelic language. The Government wish to build on the successes of the last 10 years and to this end I propose to increase funding for Gaelic education by 10 per cent.—by £200,000—from 1997–98. Our aim is to strengthen the existing provision and to enable it to grow steadily, assuming that the level of parental demand is maintained, while securing its quality.

While the report was generally reassuring on the quality of the existing provision, that provision is the result of very rapid growth, and the Government have already acted on one of the report's recommendations by funding research into comparative attainment levels in Gaelic and English-medium schooling. Professor Richard Johnstone of Stirling university will work with Leirsinn—the research unit at Sabhal Mor Ostaig, the Gaelic college on Skye—and the Scottish Council for Research in Education on a project which will report in 1999.

The inspectorate report pointed out that the development of good-quality Gaelic-medium education suffers from a number of constraints, some of which derive ultimately from the small number of Gaelic speakers—a total of 69,510 at the time of the last census, many of whom are elderly. The Government are determined to address these constraints in consultation with the Gaelic community and the local authorities and we believe that co-ordinated planning and careful targeting of resources will be crucial to long-term success.

A key area needing to be tackled is the shortfall of teachers able to deliver Gaelic-medium education. To that end, we have already taken, and will continue to take, steps to encourage the teacher education institutions to increase the number of Gaelic speakers on pre-service training courses to meet the needs of the Gaelic-medium sector. We have decided to make exceptional postgraduate grants available, where necessary, to Gaelic-speaking graduates undertaking the one-year postgraduate primary teacher training course. Unfortunately, in the case of some courses, not enough Gaelic speakers apply for places and the Gaelic-speaking community itself can help by encouraging students to enter the teaching profession. We have funded publicity measures to assist with this and would be happy to do so again.

The report highlighted the contribution which the development of pre-school education has played in both stimulating interest and providing a useful preparation for entry to Gaelic medium primary education. Gaelic pre-school education will continue to be the main feeder for Gaelic-medium primary units and its growth should take account of available Gaelic-medium primary provision. We will therefore be encouraging education authorities to be more proactive in providing advice on pre-school provision in their areas.

The inspectorate recommended that, in order to improve the range and quality of Gaelic teaching materials at all levels, a national resource centre should be established which would produce teaching materials and arrange for their dissemination. I endorse this recommendation and will make funds available for this purpose. I shall be consulting local authorities and relevant Gaelic organisations about the remit of and location for a centre.

In the face of significant practical difficulties, the inspectorate recommended against the extension of Gaelic-medium education to secondary level, proposing instead additional provision for Gaelic medium tuition in the first four years of secondary education, including certificated courses on aspects of Gaelic culture in S3/S4. It has to be said that these recommendations met with widespread opposition from the Gaelic community, but after lengthy consideration the Government have decided to accept the inspectorate's advice on this matter as offering the best way forward. We shall issue an early invitation to the Scottish Consultative Council on the Curriculum and the Scottish Examination Board to set up a joint working party for the creation of the new courses. I appreciate that the additional provision envisaged falls short of the aspirations of the Gaelic community, but I am satisfied that the new courses will consolidate and extend the benefits gained by children attending Gaelic-medium primary units. In view of the teacher supply issues, it will be difficult to achieve the necessary consolidation at primary level and to devise and introduce the new secondary courses. I am confident that, by capitalising on the expertise of the available secondary teaching force the new courses will offer quality Gaelic-medium education at secondary level.

The report recommended that the scheme of specific grants for Gaelic education, which has been instrumental in encouraging education authorities to develop Gaelic-medium education, should continue. We have carefully considered this and accept that the specific grants have a key role to play in supporting Gaelic education and should continue. From 1997–98 the element of specific grants devoted to production of teaching materials will be diverted to the proposed new resource centre and the element which is currently used by authorities to support Sabhal Mor Ostaig will be transferred to the Department and added to its grant to the college.

Finally, the inspectorate found that voluntary organisations had played a major part in promoting the speaking of Gaelic and in raising its profile in education and in the wider community. It felt, however, that some duplication between the organisations had hindered the pace of development. It recommended a review of the Government's financial support for the language and culture with a view to securing improved co-ordination between local authorities and Gaelic organisations, thereby ensuring that available resources are used to best effect. I endorse this recommendation and such a review will be undertaken by the Scottish Office in consultation with the organisations and the education authorities during the next financial year.

The measures I have announced today will consolidate the work which has already been done to support Gaelic by providing an improved base for the provision of quality Gaelic education into the next millennium and additional resources will be committed to the area. Ultimately, the future of Gaelic lies in the hands of the Gaelic community themselves, but these measures demonstrate yet again the Government's commitment to assist them in their efforts to maintain their language and culture.

Peat Extraction (Flanders Moss)

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will make a statement on the agreement between Scottish Natural Heritage and others to secure the non-extraction of peat from Flanders Moss, including the sums involved; [25561]

(2) if he will make a statement on the factors which underlay the decision that no compensation was payable to the owner of part of Flanders Moss and adjacent farmland, following the decision to designate the area as a site of special scientific interest and prohibit the extraction of peat in 1989. [25562]

Mr. Kynoch [holding answer 26 April 1996]: These are matters for Scottish Natural Heritage. I have asked the chairman of SNH to write to the hon. Member.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Departmental Expenditure

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was his Department's expenditure on (a) computer hardware, (b) related buildings, (c) related equipment, (d) computer systems, (e) computer services and (f) computer applications (i) directly or (ii) indirectly sourced for (1) the Benefits Agency, (2) the Contributions Agency and (3) the Information Technology Services Agency in each year since 1990 separately identifying planned and outturn expenditure. [24194]

Mr. Burt: The details of the Department's total computer related expenditure are in the table. Information on the expenditure of individual DSS agencies is available only at disproportionate cost.

	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	£ million 1994–95
1. Capital
Computer hardware and other capital	118.0	64.1	120.8	146.1	75.6
Land Buildings	12.6	12.5	26.1	31.6	14.4
2. Running costs
Computer systems, services and applications	249.0	422.4	445.2	450.3	432.8
3. Out-turn and plan
Total provision	369.4	432.5	441.6	564.5	466.7
Total Out-turn	379.6	413.7	435.9	561.8	460.2
Reduced/(Increased) expenditure	(10.2)	18.8	5.7	2.7	6.5
Reduced/(Increased) expenditure Running Cost	(2.5)	5.5	3.5	1.7	5.1
Capital	(7.7)	13.3	2.2	1.0	1.4

1. All figures are taken from that year's ITSA annual report and accounts. For 1990–91 they are vote based and include VAT.
2. For all subsequent years items 1 and 2 are accrual based and item 3 is vote based.
3. ITSA, an executive agency of the Department of Social Security, has supplied IT services to the DSS, its agencies and to other Government Departments and agencies, including the Employment Service, the Northern Ireland Social Security Agency, the National Health Service Pensions Agency and the Department of Health. These costs are included in the figures.

Resettlement Agency

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what funding has been earmarked within the Department for the carrying out of duties hitherto undertaken by the Resettlement Agency; what account will be taken of the needs of single homeless people in determining the level and type of programme to be administered under the new arrangements; if the funding available for resettlement units will be ring-fenced; and if he will make a statement. [24836]

Mr. Roger Evans: In excess of £21,000,000 will be made available by DSS headquarters in 1996–97 through revenue and capital support, these grants having previously been administered by the Resettlement Agency.

Following the repeal of schedule 5 to the Supplementary Benefits Act 1976, as amended, section 30 of the Jobseekers Act 1995 enables the Secretary of State to continue to support provision for single, unsettled, homeless persons in accommodation owned and operated by local authority and voluntary organisations.

In February 1985, the Government announced their intention to work towards the closure of DSS re-establishment centres and resettlement units. It was decided that all funds used to run the RECs and RUs would be directed towards the establishment of new resettlement provision. The fundamental principle of this replacement programme was that new provision had to be established without any increase in the DSS's resettlement budget, apart from annual inflation increases approved by the Treasury. This principle remains in force.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have been found exempt from the all-work test of capacity by virtue of (a) receipt of the highest rate of disability living allowance care component, (b) a serious medical condition and (c) a receipt of invalidity benefit and being aged 58 years or over on 13 April 1995 for (i) February and (ii) March. [26366]

Mr. Burt: We estimate that 738,000 people are not subject to the all-work test because they were aged 58 or over on 13 April 1995 and have been continuously in receipt of invalidity benefit since 1 December 1993. The requested information on the numbers exempt from the all-work test in February and March 1996 for the other reasons given, is in the table.

	February 1996	March 1996
In receipt of Disability Living Allowance High Rate Care Component	2,261	2,197
Severe medical condition	18,930	18,533

Source:
100 per cent. count of cases on the incapacity benefit computer system.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many persons and what proportion of persons whose claims to incapacity benefit have been disallowed because of a failure to return form IB50 have subsequently been awarded the benefit. [25804]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many IB50 all-work test questionnaires were issued by his Department in (a) February and (b) March; and how many claims were disallowed for failure to return the questionnaire. [26340]

Mr. Burt: Such information as is available is in the table.

	February	March
Number of IB50 all-work test questionnaires issued[1]	137,778	113,804
Number of claims disallowed for failure to return IB50 questionnaire[1,2]	827	974

[1] Figures exclude clerically processed cases. [2] Figures exclude:
—Severe disablement allowance cases
—cases where the claim related to national insurance credits only

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many and what proportion of persons who have passed the all-work test have been awarded points under the heading of mental health descriptors. [25806]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

State Pensions

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) men and (b) women aged 100 years or over and living in the United Kingdom were in receipt of state retirement pensions on 30 March. [26302]

Mr. Heald: At 30 September 1995, the latest date for which information is available, it is estimated that 1,240 men and 7,520 women aged 100 or over and living in Great Britain were in receipt of state retirement pension.
Notes:

1. "State retirement pension" comprises contributory retirement pension, non-contributory retirement pension and graduated retirement benefit.

2. The figures are subject to a degree of uncertainty as they are based on a 5 per cent. sample of retirement pension awards.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the revenue spending estimated by his Department in connection with the private finance initiative for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26629]

Mr. Burt: To date, the Department has awarded one PFI contract. This is for the replacement of the national insurance recording system—NIRS2—and was awarded in April 1995. Revenue costs from public funds will not arise under this contract until the replacement system is developed and successfully delivered to the Department in 1997. These revenue costs are subject to continuing negotiation and are currently commercial in confidence.

Mental Health

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people who have failed to attend a medical examination since April 1995 have a recognised mental health problem. [26820]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Student Loans

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what discussions he has had with the Secretary of State for Education and Employment regarding the link between student loans and social security payments. [26853]

Mr. Roger Evans: Departmental officials and those from the Department for Education and Employment have regular discussions regarding the interaction of the educational maintenance system and social security benefits.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) under what circumstances student loans are counted as income when applying for social security benefits; [26850]

(2) if he will make a statement on the link between student loans and social security benefits. [26852]

Mr. Evans: The majority of full-time students are not eligible for income-related social security benefits, although students in vulnerable groups—disabled students and those with dependent children—and partners of students do retain eligibility.

Student loans are taken into account as income for social security benefit purposes, subject to a £10 weekly disregard. Any student loan not taken out, but which would be available to a student if he or she took reasonable steps to acquire it, is treated in the same way.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in receipt of student loans are in receipt also of social security payments; and which social security payments they are in receipt of. [26854]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security under what circumstances student loans are taken into account when applying for council tax rebates; and if he will make a statement on the link between student loans and forms of assistance with housing needs. [26849]

Mr. Evans: The majority of full-time students are not eligible for income-related social security benefits, including council tax benefit. This applies equally to housing benefit and housing costs met by income support. However, students in vulnerable groups—disabled and those with dependent children—and partners of students retain eligibility for these benefits.

Students' loans are taken into account as income for council tax benefit, housing benefit and income support purposes, subject to a £10 weekly disregard. Any student loan not taken out, but which would be available to a student if he or she took reasonable steps to acquire it, is treated in the same way.

Child Benefit

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for how many women child benefit was the only source of independent income for each year since 1990. [26763]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The figures from 1990 to 1993, the latest year for which information is available, are in the table. Estimates are based on the family expenditure survey. Independent income is interpreted as any income recorded and attributed to the individual on the FES. It is uncertain how individuals will record and attribute between themselves particular types of income—for example, income from benefits or investments—and whether treatment will be consistent over time. Therefore conclusions based on year-on-year comparisons must be drawn with caution.

The figures quoted of course exclude those lone parents in receipt of child benefit whose main source of income is income support.

Year	Number of women
1990	845,000
1991	855,000
1992	930,000
1993	785,000

Notes:
1. Independent income excludes benefit paid in respect of local taxes—rate rebates, community charge benefit, council tax benefit.
2. Estimates are based on the family expenditure survey for the United Kingdom and are rounded to the nearest 5,000.

War Pension Disregards

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the cost of disregarding the total of war disablement pensions and war widows' pensions for (a) housing benefit and (b) council tax benefit calculations. [27177]

Mr. Heald: A broad estimate of the cost of fully disregarding war disablement pensions and war widows' pensions is (a) £45 million in housing benefit and (b) £15 million in council tax benefit.

Notes.
1. Estimates are based upon the May 1994 income support quarterly statistical inquiry and the 1991, 1992 and 1993 family expenditure survey uprated to 1996–97 levels.
2. In compiling these estimates, expenditure has been rounded, wherever appropriate, to the nearest £5 million.
3. Estimates are broad order estimates only, due to a lack of comprehensive data.

Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many local authorities wholly disregard war disablement pensions and war widows' pensions for housing benefit and council tax benefit calculations; how many disregard only the mandatory first £10; and how many disregard more than the £10 but not the total amount. [27178]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

EU Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the directives which have affected his Department in each of the past three years and (a) the United Kingdom legislation introduced as a result of the directives, (b) the United Kingdom legislation which goes beyond the minimum standards set out in the directives and (c) the clauses within each piece of United Kingdom legislation which amplify the minimum standards set out in the directives. [27082]

Mr. Burt: The only directive that has affected this Department in the past three years is the directive on the protection of pregnant women at work—92/85/EEC. This required changes to the UK's maternity benefits schemes for employed women. The changes were introduced for women expecting babies on or after 16 October 1994.

The Trade Union Reform and Employment Rights Act 1993 introduced the right to 14 weeks' maternity leave. Following a period of consultation, which allowed all sides of industry, interest groups and individuals to comment on the Government's proposals on maternity pay, the following legislation was introduced.

SI 1994/1230: The Maternity Allowance and Statutory Maternity Pay Regulations 1994 made on 3 May 1994 amending primary legislation to enable changes to be made.

SI 1994/1367: The Social Security Maternity Benefits and Statutory Sick Pay (Amendment) Regulations 1994 made on 11 June 1994 covering the detail of the changes.

There were two clauses which amplified the minimum standards set out in the directive.

Regulation 2 of SI 1994/1230 increased the rate of maternity allowance for employees for the whole 18-week maternity allowance period rather than the minimum 14-week leave period specified in the directive.

Regulation 4 of SI 1994/1230 extended the higher rate of statutory maternity pay—90 per cent. of earnings for the first six weeks of maternity leave—to all women who have completed 26 weeks' continuous service with their employer at the qualifying week. Previously, women had to complete at least two years' service to get the higher rate. The directive required a qualifying period of no more than 37 weeks. The regulation also has the effect of increasing the lower rate of statutory maternity pay for the remaining 12 weeks of the maternity period, rather than eight weeks required by the directive.

Restricting the changes to the minimum required by the directive would have complicated the scheme and made it harder to understand. Employers supported simplification over the marginal extra cost. As a result, the changes were more beneficial to women and eased the administrative burden for business.

Income Support

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security with reference to his answer of 21 April 1995, Official Report, column 314, if he will continue to publish on a monthly basis the numbers of people refused income support because of the habitual residence requirement, in the same form as before, for the year 1996–97. [27179]

Mr. Roger Evans: Yes.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people were refused income support due to the habitual residence requirement (a) in March 1996, (b) in February 1996 and (c) since its inception; and how many of these were (i) British nationals, (ii) European Economic Area nationals and (iii) others. [27157]

Mr. Evans: The information is set out in the tables.

Habitual residence: February and March 1996

Family Credit

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what percentage of those lone parents who were in receipt of family credit in (a) 1992–93 and (b) 1993–94 received family credit for (i) 26 weeks only, (ii) 52 weeks only and (iii) more than 52 weeks; [22187]

(2) how many lone parents claimed family credit in (a) 1992–93 and (b) 1993–94; [22189]

(3) how many couples claimed family credit in (a) 1992–93 and (b) 1993–94; [22190]

(4) what was the total number of family credit claimants in (a) 1992–93 and (b) 1993–94; [22191]

(5) of those couples in receipt of family credit in (a) 1992–93 and (b) 1993–94 what percentage received family credit for (i) 26 weeks only, (ii) 52 weeks only and (iii) more than 52 weeks. [22192]

Mr. Roger Evans [pursuant to his answer, 1 April 1996, c. 76]: The information that I gave regarding family credit claimants contained a typographical error. The correct information is as follows.

The available information is set out in the table. In order to provide data on a comparable basis, it refers to recipients of family credit at the end of each financial year. This excludes awards beginning and ending during the year and therefore significantly underestimates the number and proportion of awards that last for 26 weeks only. The proportion with longer spells on family credit is thus over-estimated.

	Caseload (thousands)	Percentage of caseload with Family Credit in payment for 26 weeks	Percentage of caseload with Family Credit in payment for 52 weeks	Percentage of caseload with Family Credit in payment for more than 52 weeks
1992–93
All families	485	42.1	23.2	34.6
All couples	280	48.0	21.2	30.8
All lone parents	204	34.1	25.9	40.0

All families	536	38.9	21.1	39.9
All couples	303	45.2	21.0	33.8
All lone parents	233	30.7	21.3	48.0

Notes:
1. Figures refer to awards in payment at the end of the financial year; and may exclude those who have ceased to claim during the year.
2. All figures have been rounded to the nearest thousand.
3. Percentages have been expressed to one decimal place, and therefore may not tally.

WALES

Devolved Powers

15. Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measure he has taken to devolve powers and responsibilities from central to local government. [25646]

Mr. Hague: I announced during the Welsh Affairs debate on 29 February, Official Report, columns 1024–40, my intention to issue a consultation paper on devolving certain responsibilities from my Department to local government. That paper, "The Welsh Office and Local Government: Redefining the Relationship", was issued on 20 March.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

16. Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consideration he has given to the impact of the BSE problem on the Welsh food strategy. [25647]

Mr. Hague: The food strategy is concerned not only with beef but with developing the whole of the Welsh food industry, from producers to retailers. The problems faced by the beef industry will be considered during the consultation. I expect the strategy that emerges to make proposals for restoring consumer confidence in Welsh beef within the context of a general marketing strategy for all goods from Wales.

Jobs (Pembrokeshire)

16. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action Government Departments have recently taken to increase the number of jobs in Pembrokeshire. [25648]

Mr. Hague: The Ministry of Defence recently decided to relocate its moorings and buoys work to Pembroke Dock. This will bring 135 jobs to the area. The Welsh Office continues to provide support to companies in the area through regional selective assistance and to infrastructure projects through the strategic development scheme. Since January 1994, 18 offers of RSA have been accepted promising the creation of over 300 new jobs and safeguarding a further 226. The Welsh Office and Government agencies also continue to support the work of the west Wales task force.

Hospice and Palliative Care

18. Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he last consulted charitable organisations which provide hospice and palliative care services in the Gwent area. [25649]

Mr. Richards: Organisations that provide hospice and palliative care services were consulted in August 1994 about NHS responsibilities for meeting continuing health care needs, which include palliative health care services

The provision of palliative health care services in Gwent is the responsibility of Gwent health authority. Guidance outlining health authority responsibilities was issued in February 1995.

Environment

19. Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what action he is currently taking to improve care for the environment in Wales. [25650]

Mr. Hague: Details of the wide range of actions being taken are given in "The Environment in Wales: Fourth Report", the Welsh commitment tables in "This Common Inheritance UK Annual Report 1996" and the speech I gave at the Welsh launch of the Environment Agency on 27 March, copies of which are in the Library of the House.

Slag Heaps

20. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many former slag heaps have been reclaimed; to what uses they have been put; at what cost; and if he will make a statement. [25651]

Mr. Richards: This is an operational matter for the Welsh Development Agency. I will arrange for the chief executive of the agency to write to my hon. Friend and for a copy of his letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Beef Industry

21. Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he will next meet farmers' leaders to discuss the beef industry in Wales. [25653]

Mr. Hague: The Under-Secretary of State, my. hon. Friend the Member for Cardiff, North (Mr. Jones), and I have met farmers' leaders to discuss this subject on a number of occasions recently and will continue to do so as necessary.

European Central Bank

22. Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the implications for Wales of a European central bank. [25654]

Mr. Hague: None.

Non-urgent Operations

23. Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what resources were made available for non-urgent operations at the three treatment centres in south Wales in 1995–96. [25655]

Mr. Richards: In 1995–96, funding for non-urgent operations at the three south Wales treatment centres totalled 2.536 million, made up of:

Ophthalmic centre, Bridgend general hospital: £0.956 million

Surgical centre, Bridgend general hospital: £0.516 million

Orthopaedic centre, Prince of Wales hospital, Rhydlafar: £1.064 million

Education Statistics

24. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the percentage of young people aged 18 to 21 years in full-time education in (a) Carmarthenshire, (b) Dyfed, (c) Wales and (d) Britain. [25656]

Mr. Richards: The available information is for 1994–95 and relates to the new unitary authority area of Carmarthenshire and the previous local education authority area of Dyfed. The following table sets out the information on this basis.

Percentage of population aged 18 to 21 in full-time education in Wales, 1994–95[1]

	Percentage
Carmarthenshire	27
Dyfed	33
Wales	33
United Kingdom	29

[1] Ages as at 31 August 1994.

Inward Investment

25. Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what steps he is taking, in conjunction with the Welsh Development Agency and the Development Board for Rural Wales, to ensure that inward investment industrial projects are encouraged to locate in the western counties of Wales; and if he will make a statement. [25657]

Mr. Hague: I have given the agency and the board specific targets: the agency is required to encourage 20 per cent. of inward investment cases to go beyond the eastern M4 and A55 corridors and the board is required to deploy 50 per cent. of its programme expenditure in the western parts of its area and to attract at least 30 per cent. of new jobs from new inward investment projects to those parts of its area not in Powys. These provide a focus. Other measures include the significant infrastructural improvements that are on-going and the assisted areas upgrading that took place in 1993.

26. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent major inward investments have come to Wales; and if he will make a statement. [25658]

Mr. Hague: Recent announcements show that Wales continues to be a leading region for inward investment and my recent visit to the United States confirmed my belief that more will come. Over the past few months, significant projects have been announced by Ford,; Newport Wafer-Fab,; Halla,; Sumitomo,; and Cable OnLine. There has been significant success in the financial services sector too, including Legal and General.

Second Severn Crossing

27. Mr. Simon Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects the second Severn crossing and its access roads in Gwent to be fully open to traffic. [25659]

Mr. Richards: The concessionaire, Severn River Crossing plc, has announced that the official opening ceremony will take place on 5 June 1996. It is expected that the crossing and the Welsh approach road will be open to traffic on the following day.

Industrial Villages

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what actio he proposes to advance his support for industrial villages, in the valley programme area. [26364]

Mr. Hague: The hon. Member knows from our meeting on 16 April that I am prepared to consider any proposals received for developing the industrial village concept in the programme for the valleys area. My officials will be discussing further with representatives of Neath Port Talbot county borough council the proposals for the Dulais valley which the hon. Member put forward.

Training and Enterprise

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on training and enterprise in north Wales. [26829]

Mr. Richards: Extra-ordinary general meetings of the North East Wales and North West Wales training and enterprise councils were held on 9 April where it was agreed to create, through merger, a single TEC for the north Wales area.

In proposing the merger, the TECs consider that the long-term economic needs of north Wales would be best served by one organisation assuming responsibility for the delivery of training and enterprise support for local people and businesses across the whole of the area.

The merger is planned to take effect in April 1997. However, this will depend on a decision to be taken by the Welsh Office nearer the time on whether the proposed TEC is a suitable body to contract with for the delivery of the Government's training and enterprise programmes in north Wales. This decision will be taken in the light of the new organisation's memorandum and articles of association and its draft corporate and business plan—for 1997–98 and beyond—when these documents have been produced, consulted on as appropriate and submitted to the Department.

British Dental Association

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations his Department has recently received from the British Dental Association; and if he will make a statement. [26988]

Mr. Richards: The Welsh Office maintains regular, largely informal, contact with BDA representatives in Wales.

On 6 March this year, I met representatives of the Welsh council of the BDA, together with the Welsh general dental services committee of the BDA, to hear their views on a variety of topics. These included premature retirement for general dental practitioners; the £3 million initiative to increase NHS dental service provision in Wales; fluoridation of public water supplies; and the relationship between the Welsh Office and the profession in Wales.

Officials are happy to continue the present close relationship with the profession's representatives and to accommodate any request for more formal contact when required. I have agreed to meet them again when the need arises.

Welsh Language Education

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what grant aid the Government have given to Welsh language education for the financial year 1996–97. [25652]

Mr. Richards: The Government will be making available to schools and local authorities about £7.4 million towards Welsh language education in 1996–97.

EU Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the directives which have affected his Department in each of the past three years and (a) the legislation introduced as a result of the directives, (b) the legislation which goes beyond the minimum standards set out in the directives and (c) the clauses within each piece of legislation which amplify the minimum standards set out in the directives. [27075]

Mr. Hague: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Cancelled Operations

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has on the numbers of cancelled operations in Welsh hospitals during 1995–96; and what numbers of those operations cancelled were reinstated within the patients charter guarantee period. [27310]

Mr. Hague: Information on the number of cancelled operations in Welsh hospitals and the number of those operations which were reinstated within the patients charter guarantee period is not collected centrally. However, the number of patients admitted to Welsh hospitals and treated more than one month after a cancelled operation in the first three quarters of 1995–96 is shown in the following table. Information for the quarter ending 31 March 1996 is not yet available.

Quarter ending 30 June 1995: 65

Quarter ending 30 September 1995: 30

Quarter ending 31 December 1995: 43.

Waste Water Directive

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what further consideration has been given with respect to a request to the European Commission for a derogation from the 2000 deadline for the urban waste water treatment directive and the Cardiff East sewage works. [27328]

Mr. Hague: The matter remains under consideration.

Dental Services

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 22 April, Official Report, column 40, if he will list the health authorities which employ or plans to employ salaried dentists; and if they are full time or part time. [27305]

Mr. Hague: The following health authorities currently employ salaried dentists to provide general dental services.

North Wales: Two part time

Dyfed Powys: One full time and three part time

Gwent: One full time.

No further appointments are proposed at the present time.

South and East Wales Ambulance NHS Trust

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what further consultations he has had with the chairman of the South and East Wales Ambulance NHS trust concerning the level of management overheads and the need for further economies at management level; and when he expects to receive a further report on the future shape of the trust. [27309]

Mr. Hague: My officials have had a number of discussions with the new chairman about the work he is doing to put the trust on a firm financial footing. The trust will continue to provide monthly financial progress reports and an operational plan for 1996–97 is expected by the end of May 1996.

Health Promotion

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 599, if he will list the specific initiatives of the Health Promotion Authority for Wales which were targeted to those on low income; and what independent evaluation has been undertaken on their effectiveness. [27329]

Mr. Hague: Initiatives relevant to those on low income undertaken by Health Promotion Wales, HPW, include:

"Get Cooking": designed to improve the nutrition skills of individuals and promote health eating on a limited budget;

"Health Shopping Basket": designed to promote the availability of healthier eating products among small local retail outlets;

"Community Alcohol Education Materials": designed to encourage sensible drinking. Developed with the help of residents of a mid-Glamorgan village;

"Network of Health Promoting Schools": includes schools in areas of low income in Wales;

"Communities for Better Health": aims to encourage and support a network of local projects.

In addition, a large proportion of HPW's other work is as relevant to those on low income as it is to other groups within the population.

Evaluation is a component of all HPW's activities. The results are published in peer review journals or as specific HPW evaluation reports.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consideration he is giving to applying the recommendations of the nutrition task force and the low income project team to Wales. [27308]

Mr. Hague: Responsibility for most health promotion matters in Wales has been devolved to health authorities. It is for them to decide how and to what extent they wish to take note of the recommendations of the nutrition task force in England when developing their local strategies.

Cancer Statistics

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future provision for cancer statistics collection and dissemination; what provision will be made to (a) transfer and (b) retrain and upgrade the clerical staff of his Department and the Welsh Health Common Services Authority to the successor statistical collecting service; and what revisions he proposes to published cancer statistics to adjust for incorrectly recorded cancers. [27311]

Mr. Hague: Proposals for the future management of the Wales cancer registry submitted by the Velindre NHS trust and the Welsh Combined Centres for Public Health are currently under consideration. I expect the management of the registry to transfer shortly.

The invitation for proposals to manage the registry set out clear performance targets, including targets for data accuracy, which the successful organisation will be expected to meet. Both Velindre and the combined centres put forward proposals which covered the staffing and staff training necessary to fulfil these performance requirements. It is intended that most of the managerial and operational aspects of the registry, including current managerial, clerical and IT staff, will be transferred to the new organisation. It is not intended that any staff will transfer from my Department to the registry.

The cancer registry revises data where necessary on an on-going basis, and this is reflected in its dissemination and publication of data.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has had from (a) clinicians and (b) others concerning the future of the Wales cancer registry and the recording of bone and other cancers. [27312]

Mr. Hague: I am aware of having received four representations about the future of the cancer registry, one from a clinician.

In March 1995, officials of my Department met representatives of the Wales Green party to discuss matters related to the recording of cancer data in Wales. In the last two years, I am aware of four other representations about recording of cancers in Wales. One of these was from a clinician.

Local Authorities (Negligence Claims)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 18 April, Official Report, columns 635–36, if he will consult the Welsh Local Authority Association concerning the negligence insurance cover available to local authorities and the principles of open government in fault and negligence cases. [27304]

Mr. Hague: I have no plans to do so at present.

Child Sex Abuse

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the cost of the outside legal advice he has received in relation to the Jillings report into child sex abuse in Clwyd; and how many (a) solicitors, (b) Queen's counsel and (c) other barristers have been involved. [27316]

Mr. Hague: One junior counsel has been instructed by the legal adviser of the Welsh Office. His fee note has not yet been received.

Further and Higher Education

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what new proposals he has to improve the educational value of further and higher education services. [25631]

Mr. Richards: Proposals for promoting relevant, high-quality further and higher education are an integral part of "People and Prosperity—An Agenda for Action in Wales". Wales will also participate in the forthcoming national inquiry into higher education, chaired by Sir Ron Dearing.

Strategic Development Schemes

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current annual cost to his Department of the administration of (a) the strategic development schemes and (b) European structural funds, Rechar funds and the European social fund; and how many staff, and at what grades, deal with such schemes and funds. [19355]

Mr. Gwilym Jones [holding answer 7 March 1996]: The information requested has been placed in the Library of the House.

DEFENCE

Remotely Piloted Vehicle (Llanbedr)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column 97, if the Jindivik remotely piloted aerial target authorised to fly in the Llanbedr danger area on 6 January was fitted with a destruct feature; and if he will make a statement. [26691]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive, DERA, to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 29 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Defence has asked me as Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency to reply to your question, pursuant to that of 2 April, asking if the Jindivik remotely piloted aerial target authorised to fly at Llanbedr on 6 January was fitted with a destruct feature.

I can confirm that the Jindivik in question was fitted with a destruct feature.

I hope this is helpful.

Land Mines

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of the number of anti-personnel land mines that his Department (a) currently holds and (b) will hold in 2000. [27022]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 26 April 1996]: It is our established policy for security reasons not to reveal information relating to stock levels of munitions held or planned. However, as stated by the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my hon. Friend the Member for Boothferry (Mr. Davis) on 23 April 1996, Official Report, column 84, we intend to reduce quantities by almost half as soon as practicable. This will be reflected in the quantity of anti-personnel mines held in 2000.

If either agreement has been reached for an international ban on all anti-personnel mines or suitable alternatives have been identified, we will commence destruction of our remaining anti-personnel mines accordingly. The total number of mines held in 2000 will therefore also depend on whether and when such developments occur.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what techniques his Department plans to us to dispose of anti-personnel land mines not classified as smart land mines. [27023]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 26 April 1996]: No decision has been made on the method of destruction of surplus anti-personnel land mines. A decision will be made after assessment of the most cost-effective method which is consistent with safety and environmental protection.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to purchase new smart anti-personnel land mines; and from which countries. [27024]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 26 April 1996]: As my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office stated in his announcement on 23 April 1996, Official Report, column 84, the United Kingdom will work actively towards a total worldwide ban on anti-personnel mines. If we need to replace our remaining anti-personnel mines before an international ban is agreed, we will procure only those with a self-destruct capability. No final decisions on the procurement of these mines, including a source, have been taken and any decision will take account of all relevant factors, including progress towards a total worldwide ban.

Saxon Vehicles

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Saxon vehicles have been deployed by his Department in Bosnia over the last three years. [26460]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 23 April 1996]: A total of 65 Saxon vehicles were deployed to Bosnia in March 1994 with 1st Battalion the Duke of Wellington's regiment. These vehicles have remained in theatre with successive units though numbers have fluctuated in accordance with operational tasks. There are currently 75 Saxon vehicles in Bosnia with 1st Battalion the Queen's Lancashire regiment.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what off-road duties Saxon vehicles are used for; and if he will make a statement. [26459]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 23 April 1996]: Saxon is a reliable troop-carrying vehicle which provides protected mobility between dismounted actions. It has a limited cross-country capability, and its use in operations, exercises and training reflects this.

Its capacity and protection make it an ideal vehicle for use by infantry in Bosnia, where the mine threat means that vehicles are forced to remain on tracks and roads. Units deploying with Saxon have generally been pleased with how well it has fared.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what restrictions on the use of certain mountain tracks in Bosnia were placed on Saxon vehicles; and if he will make a statement. [26457]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 23 April 1996]: The use of different types of vehicle over particular terrain is a matter for the chain of command and military commanders on the ground. Guidance takes account of a number of factors including road, weather and operational conditions. All training throughout the deployment of British forces in Bosnia has stressed the importance of defensive driving and winter driving skills and these factors are constantly inculcated in all personnel.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what operational duties Saxon vehicles carried out in Bosnia. [26461]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 23 April 1996]: The Saxon vehicle has carried out a wide range of operational duties with British forces in Bosnia. It continues to be employed on a variety of tasks including patrolling, escort duties, checkpoint protection and the movement of personnel and supplies.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many accidents involving Saxon vehicles have resulted in (a) deaths and (b) serious injury in the last three years; what were the dates of these accidents; what were the causes of these accidents; and on what dates the boards of inquiry sat to investigate each accident. [26455]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 23 April 1996]: In the three calendar years until 31 December 1995, there were two fatal accidents involving Saxon vehicles, both from 1st Battalion the Royal Gloucestershire Berkshire and Wiltshire regiment—1RGBW. The first accident, in which one soldier, Private Benjamin Hinton, was unfortunately killed and three others were seriously injured, occurred on 9 September 1994. The second accident, on 12 September 1994, resulted in the tragic death of three soldiers: Privates Phillip Armstrong, Martin Dowdell and Christopher Turner. Again, three others were seriously injured.

A board on inquiry to investigate both accidents was convened in Cyprus on 24 July 1995. The timing of the board of inquiry reflected the need for all police and other investigations to be completed first, and the completion of 1RGBW's tour in Bosnia in March 1995. In March 1995, 1RGBW moved temporarily to Catterick before transferring to Cyprus in May 1995. The board concluded that both accidents were caused by driver error.

Information relating to non-fatal accidents which resulted in serious injuries could not be provided without disproportionate cost.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when his Department purchased Saxon vehicles; how many vehicles were purchased; and what was the total cost. [26458]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 23 April 1996]: Two types of Saxon vehicles have been purchased: Saxon General War Role—GWR—in the early 1980s at a total cost of some £45 million for 527 vehicles; and Saxon Patrol between 1992 and 1994 at a total cost of some £25 million for 145 vehicles.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the boards of inquiry concerning fatalities resulting from Saxon crashes in Bosnia were provided with all the witnesses and documents relevant to the investigations. [26456]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 23 April 1996]: The board of inquiry considered all the available documentation. It commented that certain types of documentation were not available to them. These documents were thought to have been lost during the roulement of units in Bosnia. It has now come to light that some of those missing documents had been sent to the coroner before the board of inquiry met. My Department is to ask that the documents be made available for examination as a matter of urgency to determine whether they may have any bearing on the accidents.

The board of inquiry took evidence from all witnesses whom they considered had a contribution to make to the inquiry.

Atomic Weapons Establishment, Llanishen

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 16 April, Official Report, columns 455–56, what is the cost of decommissioning the AWE site in Llanishen that was taken into account in reaching the closure decision. [27327]

Mr. Arbuthnot: There is a long-standing convention of not announcing the detailed figures which subscribe to the overall cost of the defence nuclear programme. My Department, however, expects to spend some millions of pounds on the thorough decommissioning of the AWE site at Llanishen.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisons (Costs)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will publish further figures on the comparative cost of public and private prisons; and if he will make a statement. [26659]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 29 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking when will further figures on the comparative cost of public and private prisons be published.

We have recently received the first draft of a report by Coopers and Lybrand which updates the comparison of performance on cost and service delivery between each of the privately managed prisons and the most nearly comparable public sector prisons, using 1994–95 data.

Once the report has been finalised, we shall need to discuss the findings, and arrangements for publications, with Ministers.

Prisons (Suicides)

Ms Quin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of suicides in prison in each of the past 10 years. [25902]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Joyce Quinn, dated 29 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of suicides in Prison Service establishments in the past ten years.

The attached table shows the number of self-inflicted deaths in prisons in England and Wales in each year of the past ten years.

Year	Self-inflicted deaths
1986	21
1987	46
1988	37
1989	48
1990	50
1991	42
1992	41
1993	47
1994	62
1995	60
1996[1] (Total as of 19 April 1996)	17

Ms Jowell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) attempted suicides and (b) suicides have been committed by young (i) men and (ii) women in prison establishments for each year since 1990. [26782]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Tessa Jowell, dated 29 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about suicides and attempted suicides by young men and women in prison establishments in each year since 1990.

The attached table gives the number of reported incidents of attempted suicides and the number of self-inflicted deaths for young offenders, male and female, aged 15–21 inclusive, for the years 1990 to 1995.

Breakdown of attempted suicides and self-inflicted deaths by young offenders, male and female, aged 15–21 inclusive, for the period 1990–95

	Attempted suicides		Self-inflicted deaths
Year	Male	Female	Male	Female
1990	—	—	10	0
1991	209	15	7	0
1992	278	21	10	1
1993	246	10	3	0
1994	254	3	12	0
1995	158	3	12	0

[1] Figures for attempted suicides were not collected centrally until 1991.

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if each prison in England and Wales has an officer fully trained in suicide awareness; and if he will make a statement; [26539]

(2) if he will make a statement on the training given to prison officers in suicide awareness; and when this training was last reviewed. [26540]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 29 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about suicide awareness training in prisons in England and Wales.

Training in suicide awareness was last reviewed in preparation for the launch of the current strategy in April 1994. The strategy is underpinned by a comprehensive training manual in modular form. As part of the implementation process, all governors nominated staff to attend central training as tutors. Tutors then carried forward the training of staff of all grades within their own establishment.

Every prison has a minimum of one member of staff trained as a suicide awareness tutor who contributes to the overall training programme set out by the governor.

Prisons (Trade Unions)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the relevant trade unions are to be de-recognised on the selection of prisons for market testing; and if he will make a statement. [26660]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 29 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about trade unions being de-recognised on the selection of prisons for market testing.

The Director of Personnel has informed all recognised trade unions that they were de-recognised for the purposes of collective bargaining on the scope and selection of schemes for private finance, market testing and contracting out. We shall continue to consult with the trade unions on these matters.

Where as a consequence of schemes transferring work to contractors there are personnel implications, the existing arrangements for consultation or negotiation with trade unions will apply.

Prison Service (Corporate Plan)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the 1996 to 1999 corporate plan for the Prison Service will be published; when he received the plan; what considerations underlie the time scale for publication; and if he will make a statement. [26661]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 29 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question on the 1996 to 1999 corporate plan for the Prison Service.

We are currently discussing the final draft of our plan with Ministers, and we hope to be able to publish it within the next three or four weeks.

Prison Population

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the prison population on the last day of each of the last 24 months; and if he will make a statement. [26662]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 29 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking what was the prison population on the last day of each of the last 24 months; and if he will make a statement.

The information requested is given in the attached table.

Prison (Probation Posts)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of prisons plan to reduce probation posts during the current financial year; and if he will make a statement. [26664]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 29 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the percentage of prisons which plan to reduce probation posts during the current financial year.

The number of prisons and young offender institutions in which there are plans for a decrease in probation staff during 1996–97 is 56. This represents 44 per cent.

The Prison Service is committed to partnership with the Probation Service to deliver the custodial and non-custodial parts of a prisoner's sentence effectively. Governors have been discussing with chief probation officers the scope for improvement in efficiency and for more effective use of all available resources. This includes other ways of discharging continuing tasks which have been undertaken by probation staff but which do not require their specialist skills.

Prisons (Education Facilities)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of prisons plan to reduce education facilities during the current financial year; and if he will make a statement. [26665]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 29 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the percentage of prisons that plan to reduce education facilities during the current financial year.

73 prisons and young offender institutions, 57 per cent., are currently planning to reduce contracted educational provision in 1996–97.

Education is an essential part of the opportunities which must be provided in prisons. The Prison Service has given guidance to governors which identifies the core curriculum areas to which priority should be given. This includes the necessary support for prisoners who lack the basic skills of literacy and numeracy. But it is right for governors to review all regime activities and make considered decisions on how available financial provision can best be utilised. There is, for example, scope for improving the targeting of education provision and for considering whether other activities, like work and programmes to tackle offending behaviour, can better address identified prisoner deficits.

Prison Service (Capital Programme)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what estimate he has made of the effect of the reduction to the current financial year's Prison Service capital programme on (a) roof and cell strengthening, (b) renewal of services, (c) maintenance spending, (d) new kitchen and regime facilities and (e) new information technology projects; and if he will make a statement. [26666]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 29 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the effect of the reduction to the 1996–7 Prison Service capital programme on specified classifications of spend.

Roof and cell strengthening schemes at higher security prisons will be given priority. Work on the remaining projects planned for 1996–7 has been rephased and will be funded either conventionally, or through the private finance initiative (PFI). Where governors have concerns about possible compromises to security, they will make local short-term arrangements to strengthen other aspects of security, such as closed circuit television.

Some 50 per cent, around £16m, of renewal of services and maintenance projects have been deferred until later years, although those schemes identified as vital are proceeding in 1996–7. Because of the nature of these projects, it is possible that they might attain a higher priority during the year and the Prison Service strategy is to monitor and review the situation on a regular basis.

Essential kitchen schemes that address health issues will proceed in 1996–7 with a total spend of around £2.5m. The other projects initially planned for 1996–7 are currently being considered for funding through PFI in later years. Where there is a risk that this delay compromises the role of the kitchen and the functioning of the prison, short-term maintenance will be undertaken.

Regime facilities that are essential to support the opening of new houseblocks in 1996–7 are in the current programme. Those schemes that have been deferred will be considered for funding through the private sector.

A project, known as Quantum, has been initiated to identify the scope for, and then to procure, the provision of all IT services under a PFI agreement. This obviates the need for a significant capital provision for IT in 1996–7.

Prison Service (Staff)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Prison Service posts will be lost during the current financial year; what was the target figure set; and if he will make a statement. [26667]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 29 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of Prison Service posts lost during the current financial year; and what was the target figure.

Reductions in staff are part of the Prison Service's plans for improving its cost efficiency. Final decisions on numbers have not been taken. These decisions will be reached following local consultation with the unions and will take into account the operational needs of the Service, available financial provision, the scope for cost reductions in other areas and the numbers of staff who have applied for voluntary early retirement and severance.

Maximum Security Prison

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Home Office feasibility study on the super-max prison will be published; for how long he has had the study; what are the reasons for the time taken to publish the study; and if he will make a statement. [26670]

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. and learned Friend has not yet received the final Prison Service report examining the feasibility, costs and benefits of building a maximum security prison to house the most dangerous prisoners in the system and a control prison to hold the most unruly and disruptive prisoners.

Prison Service (Redundancy Package)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Treasury-funded redundancy package for the Prison Service will be extended beyond 27 March 1997; and if he will make a statement. [26673]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 29 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the Treasury-funded redundancy package for the Prison Service being extended beyond 27 March 1997.

The White Paper "The Civil Service—Continuity and Change" announced that from 1 October 1994 to 31 March 1997, 80 per cent of the cost of early departures—whether voluntary or compulsory—would be funded from the central Civil Service Superannuation Vote. The scheme is administered by the Office for Public Service and applies across the Civil Service. There are currently no plans for the scheme to be extended beyond March 1997.

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was paid later to the private sector for goods and services by his Department in 1995–96. [26153]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 24 April 1996]: The information requested is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of bills were paid late by his Department in 1995–96. [26117]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 24 April 1996]: This information is being collated by the Department of Trade and Industry and will be published by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade before the summer recess.

Fire Safety Regulations

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 18 December, Official Report, column 960, on new fire safety regulations, when he now plans to introduce the regulations; and what assessment he has made of the costs of the regulations to (a) small businesses, (b) medium-sized enterprises, (c) large businesses and (d) all businesses. [27089]

Mr. Sackville: I hope to make an announcement shortly.

Risley Prison

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the most recent escape took place from Risley prison. [26335]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 24 April 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 29 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the most recent escape from Risley.

The most recent escape took place on 9 April 1996, when a prisoner escaped by hiding on a Prison Service vehicle as it left the prison. An internal enquiry is currently underway.

Mr. Raghbir Singh

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for how long Mr. Raghbir Singh has been detained without charged; what reasons have been given to Mr. Singh for his detention; and when he can expect to be released. [26885]

Mr. Howard: Raghbir Singh has been detained since 29 March 1995, pending deportation on the ground that his presence is not conducive to the public good for reasons of national security. There is no proposal to release him before deportation.

The lawfulness of my decision to detain Mr. Singh under Immigration Act powers and to initiate deportation action against him has been the subject of judicial review proceedings before both the High Court and the Court of Appeal. On both occasions, the courts concluded that the action was lawful.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list for each financial year from 1990–91 the amount of capital expenditure for (a) the Prison Service, (b) police and (c) other Department functions covered by the private finance initiative or other unconventional capital arrangements, together with the figures from 1990–91 and for each future financial year for which information is available of the estimated revenue or other financial consequences of that capital expenditure. [26036]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 24 April 1996]: Details of the estimated capital expenditure and revenue consequences to 2000–01 are as follows:

A: Prison Service

£ million

Year	Capital expenditure	Revenue consequences
1990–95	Nil	Nil
1995–96	8	Nil
1996–97	72	2
1997–98	190	34
1998–99	105	89
1999–00	n/a	110
2000–01	n/a	111

B: Police

£ million

Year	Capital expenditure	Revenue consequences
1990–94	Nil	Nil
1994–95	[1]—	2
1995–96	[1]—	4
1996–97	1.5	4
1997–98	0.5	7
1998–99	0	5
1999–00	[2]—	20
2000–01	[2]—	40

[1] The capital cost of the police national (telecommunications) network has largely been incurred during these years, and is estimated to be approximately £50 million.

[2] The capital cost of the public safety radio communications project, estimated at some £500 million, is expected to be incurred after 1998–99.

In addition to the above, individual police forces are expected to develop PFI projects.

C: Other departmental functions

£ million

Year	Capital expenditure	Revenue consequences
1990–95	Nil	Nil
1995–96	12	Nil
1996–97	34.5	4
1997–98	53.5	21
1998–99	58	55
1999–00	n/a	64
2000–01	n/a	65

EU Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the directives which have affected his Department in each of the past three years and (a) the United Kingdom legislation introduced as a result of the directives, (b) the United Kingdom legislation which goes beyond the minimum standards set out in the directives and (c) the clauses within each piece of United Kingdom legislation which amplify the minimum standards set out in the directives. [27085]

Mr. Howard: Information is not held centrally concerning the directives which affect my Department, and such information could be compiled only at disproportionate cost. However, my Department has taken lead or shared responsibility for the following directives and resulting United Kingdom legislation during the past three years:

Directive (92/58/EEC) on the minimum requirements for the provision of safety and/or health signs at work, implemented by the Health and Safety (Safety Signs and Signals) Regulations 1996;

Directive (92/91/EEC) concerning minimum requirements for improving the safety and health protection of workers in the mineral extracting industries through drilling, implemented by the Borehold Sites and Operations Regulations 1995;

Directive (93/96/EEC) on rights of residence for students, implemented by the Immigration (European Economic Area) Order 1994;

Directive (93/109/EC) laying down detailed arrangements for the exercise of the right to vote and stand as a candidate in elections to the European Parliament for citizens of the Union in a member state of which they are not nationals, implemented by the European Parliamentary Elections (Changes to the Franchise and Qualification of Representatives) Regulations 1994;

7th directive (94/21/EC) on summer time arrangements, implemented by the Summer Time Order 1994;

Directive (94/80/EC) laying down detailed arrangements for the exercise of the right to vote and stand as a candidate in local government elections for citizens of the Union in a member state of which they are not nationals, implemented by the Local Government Elections (Changes to the Franchise and Qualification of Representatives) Regulations 1995;

Directive (95/46/EC) on the protection of individuals with regard to the processing of personal data and on the free movement of such data, implementation required by 1998.

My Department has not undertaken a comprehensive analysis of United Kingdom implementing legislation to identify where it goes beyond the minimum standards set out in each of the above directives, and could do so only at disproportionate cost. However, it is my Department's policy not to make regulations implementing European directives which add to the burdens imposed by such directives.

Electoral Registration

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration he has given to the report of the working group on electoral registration. [26975]

Mr. Sackville: After consulting the political parties and local authority associations, we concluded that there was not enough support for the major changes discussed in the report to justify pursuing them.

Prison Escapes

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of escapes by prisoners in England and Wales during 1995; and how many are still at large. [26544]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 29 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the number of escapes by prisoners in England and Wales during 1995 and the number still at large.

There were 122 escapes in 1995. Of these, 27 prisoners remain unlawfully at large.

Serco Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what contracts his Department and his agencies have with Serco Ltd.; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [26682]

Mr. Howard: My Department has seven current contracts with Serco Ltd., as follows:

(a) Five contracts, work on which has been completed and where there has been no early termination of contracts. Contracts will end when final accounts have been paid and any retention sums returned as appropriate. This is scheduled to be by September 1996.

(b) Two contracts due to expire on 31 May 1997 and 28 November 1997 respectively. The sums payable in the event of early termination cannot be pre-ascertained. Under the conditions of contract, if the Home Office were to terminate either contract early, through no fault of the Contractor, any payment would be calculated taking into account only the losses directly attributable to and unavoidably incurred, as a result o the termination. Were the contracts to be terminated due to contractor default or breach of certain contract terms, provisions exist for the Home Office to recover any losses incurred as a result.

The value of each contract is a matter of commercial confidentiality, but the combined value of the contracts calculated over the whole contract period is approximately £7 million.

Wandsworth Prison (Drugs)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the number of inmates put on governor's report for being in possession of unlawful drugs in Wandsworth prison in 1995; [26613]

(2) what was the number of recorded drug finds in Wandsworth prison in 1995. [26617]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Tom Cox, dated 29 April 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Questions about the number of prisoners placed on governor's report in Wandsworth prison for being in possession of drugs and the number of recorded drug finds at Wandsworth prison in 1995.

In 1995, 84 prisoners were placed on governor's report for being in possession of unlawful drugs and, during the same period, 208 drug finds were recorded in the prison.

Prison Service (Director General)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if Mr. Richard Tilt was advised when he was appointed acting Director General of the Prison Service as to the likely duration of the post; and if he will make a statement. [26692]

Mr. Howard: When he was appointed acting Director General of the Prison Service, Mr. Tilt was informed that the temporary appointment would cease when a substantive appointment to director general was made.

British Greyhound Racing Fund

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the income of the British Greyhound Racing Fund in the first three months of (a) 1995 and (b) 1996. [26860]

Mr. Kirkhope: The British Greyhound Racing Fund is an independent body and there are no official statistics on its income. However, the secretary to the fund advises that income in the first three months of 1995 and 1996 was £837,000 and £405,000 respectively.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what would be the cost of slaughtering the national cattle herd. [22952]

Mrs. Browning: The national cattle herd is about 11.8 million head. Slaughtering animals alone at a cost of about £50 per head would cost around £590 million. More substantial would be the economic costs to the meat and dairy industries and compensation to farmers for loss of stock and replacement.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action is being taken to stop the use of (a) mammalian meat and (b) other waste abattoir and butchers' animal matter and bonemeal in the manufacture of non-farm animal feed. [23347]

Mrs. Browning: The inclusion of mammalian meat and bone meal is prohibited in all farm animal feed, including farmed fish and feed for horses. It can be used in pet food, but only if this is manufactured in premises not also used to manufacture feed for farm animals. Protein from specified bovine material cannot be used in any animal feed. Tallow from this material can be used for animal feed after processing by the oleochemical industry, but my Department issued a consultation document on 24 April proposing that this be prohibited.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food which (a) EU and (b) non-EU countries have had confirmed cases of BSE; how many cases have been confirmed in each country; and in which countries BSE is now considered to be endemic. [23205]

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the disposal policy for cattle infected with BSE in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Ireland, (c) France and (d) other EU member states. [23359]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: The following number of BSE cases have been notified in the following countries up to 22 April 1996:

	Number
Great Britain	159,743
Northern Ireland	1,680
Isle of Man	405
Jersey	119
Guernsey	580
Alderney	2
Republic of Ireland	124
France	17
Portugal	34
Switzerland	210
Germany	4
Denmark	1
Italy	2
Canada	1
Oman	1
Falkland Island	1

Outside the British Isles, BSE has occurred in home bred animals in the Republic of Ireland, France, Portugal and Switzerland. All other cases in other countries have occurred in animals which were born in the UK.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list studies evaluated by his Department on developing sub-typing on the BSE agent. [23358]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: Project code SE 1403, "Strain typing of BSE pathogens in mice, comparison with strains from natural sheep scrapie", has been evaluated. Project code SE 1415, "Strain typing of BSE pathogen in mice and comparison with strains from natural sheep scrapie", has been partially evaluated since it started only last year.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the current penalties for infringement of BSE regulations; in what circumstances these penalties applied; and what plans he has to change these penalties. [23366]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Pendle (Mr. Prentice) on 25 April 1996, Official Report, column 273, which details the penalties in place for infringement of the controls on specified bovine material.

The penalties which would apply on summary conviction for a contravention of the Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy Order 1991, as amended, are a fine of up to £5,000 and, in relation to the restrictions regarding feedingstuffs, where appropriate a further fine of up to £1,000 for each 508 kg of feedingstuffs, beyond the initial 508 kg of feedingstuffs, in respect of which the offence is committed. Furthermore, a person who has been convicted for contravening the provisions of the order is liable at the court's discretion on a further conviction for a second or subsequent offence against the order to imprisonment for a term of up to one month in lieu of the applicable fine.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the annual expenditure on research into BSE since 1985 in 1996 prices; and if he will make a statement. [23360]

Mrs. Browning: The expenditure on research into BSE since 1991 at 1996 prices is estimated to be:

Financial year	£ million
1991–92	[1]5.276
1992–93	[1]6.348
1993–94	[1]6.278
1994–95	[1]5.909

Financial year	£ million
1995–96	5.7
1996–97	6.6 (estimated)

[1] Estimated using GDP deflator for November 1995.

Records prior to 1991 were not computerised; to provide a financial breakdown prior to this date could be done only at disproportionate cost.

Dr. Moonie: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy have occurred in cows born in (a) 1989, (b) 1990, (c) 1991, (d) 1992 and (e) 1993. [24001]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 2 April 1996]: The following table shows the number of confirmed BSE cases at 15 April by year of birth since 1989:

Year of birth	Number of cases
1989	10,621
1990	3,346
1991	1,119
1992	76
1993	1

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what date he was informed by the SEAC of new evidence as to a possible link between BSE and Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease. [25341]

Mrs. Browning: The Minister was informed on 13 March 1996 that evidence had been presented to the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee about a new variant of CJD. SEAC presented its conclusions on this new variant and the possibility that it was linked to BSE to the Government on 20 March 1996, and statements were made to the House on that day.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the European ban on british beef includes calves. [25252]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 16 April 1996]: Yes.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what consideration has been given to (a) the method and (b) the location of slaughter of potentially BSE-infected cattle. [25253]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 16 April 1996]: All BSE suspects reported and placed under restriction and subsequently slaughtered are killed by intravenous barbiturate overdose. This is done at the place where the suspect is reported, normally a farm.

Healthy cattle over 30 months of age, which are now excluded from the food chain, will be slaughtered in the normal way in approved abattoirs but separately from animals intended for human consumption.

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to include the animal feed industry in compensation packages arising from the current BSE situation. [26134]

Mrs. Browning: Many sectors of industry have suffered from the current market turbulence in the beef industry. My right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food announced measures on 16 April, Official Report, columns 513–16, to support those sectors whose particular circumstances and role made such support necessary. The circumstances of other sectors that have suffered from the current crisis will be considered carefully by my right hon. Friend and ministerial colleagues, but there are no plans at present to provide financial support for the animal feed industry.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with European countries importing live veal calves from Britain about the possibility of contracting CJD from cattle infected with BSE. [23791]

Mrs. Browning: Colleagues in other member states have been kept fully informed of the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee's recent advice on the possible link between BSE and CJD, in the Council of Ministers, the Standing Veterinary Committee and the EC Scientific Veterinary Committee.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reasons deboning is not required for cattle of 30 months or under. [23202]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 march 1996]: Because the independent advisory committee, SEAC, has not recommended it.

Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the membership of the body advising the Government on bovine spongiform encephalopathy; and how its composition is determined. [22967]

Mrs. Browning: The members of the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee are:

Chairman:

Professor J. R. Pattison—Professor of Medical Microbiology and Dean of the University College, London Medical School

Deputy Chairman:

Dr. R. G. Will—Consultant Neurologist and Head of the National CJD Surveillance Unit

Members:

Professor Ingrid Allen—Professor of Neuropathology at the Queen's University of Belfast

Professor J. W. Almond—A Virologist and Professor of Microbiology at the University of Reading

Mr. R. Bradley CBE—A Veterinary Pathologist and Chairman of the BSE sub-group of the EC Scientific Veterinary Committee

Professor F. Brown FRS—Deputy Director (Scientific) of the Animal Virus Research Institute, Long Island, New York, USA

Professor J. Collinge—A Clinical Neurologist and head of the Prion Diseases Group at St. Mary's Hospital, London

Dr. W. D. Hueston—Veterinary Epidemiologist, United States Department of Agriculture

Dr. R. H. Kimberlin—Independent Consultant on Scrapie and related diseases

Dr. M. Painter—A Consultant in Communicable Disease Control, City of Manchester

Dr. D. B. Pepper—Private Veterinary Surgeon

Professor P. G. Smith—An Epidemiologist from the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine

Dr. W. A. Watson—Former Director of the Central Veterinary Laboratory.

The committee was set up in 1990 to advise the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Department of Health on matters relating to spongiform encephalopathies. The membership of the committee is chosen to provide expertise on a wide range of BSE-related topics.

Cattle Feed

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those firms which used infected sheepmeat in cattle feed-based food; and if he will make a statement. [23435]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 1 April 1996]: At the time when infected sheep material is thought to have been present in cattle feed, meat and bone meal, produced by rendering sheep material, was a quite legitimate ingredient in cattle feed. At that time, no one could reasonably have been expected to foresee that the incorporation of ovine MBM presented a risk.

It is not possible to determine which companies may inadvertently have used infected sheep material in cattle feed.

Driftnetting

Mr. Olner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he intends to review the current maximum lengths of driftnets in respect of the finding of the recent report "Cetacean bycatch in the UK tuna driftnet fishery in 1995"; and what proposals he has to ban the use of driftnets; [24842]

(2) what response he has made to the proposals for a ban on the use of driftnets from the European Parliament and the European Commission; and if he will make it his policy to support an EU-imposed ban on driftnetting; [24580]

(3) what assessment he has made of the scientific evidence for a ban on high seas driftnets. [24581]

Mr. Baldry [pursuant to his answer, 16 April 1996, c. 464–65]: The current maximum length of driftnets permitted on UK and other Community fishing vessels is set at 2.5 km in line with the precautionary approach and in response to United Nations resolutions. I am not aware of scientific evidence that justifies a different maximum length or a ban on the use of drift nets. I do not therefore support the European Commission's proposal, but I do think that means should be sought to reduce by-catches of cetaceans in high seas driftnet fisheries.

Photocopying Licence

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what progress his Department has made towards obtaining a photocopying licence from the Copyright Licensing Agency to ensure compliance with copyright law. [26710]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 25 April 1996]: The Department has received a draft photocopying licence from the Copyright Licensing Agency, and the terms and conditions are being studied by officials.

Beef (Food Aid)

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will investigate the possible current or future use as food aid in countries with severe food shortages of suitable beef slaughtered in accordance with EU-supported anti-bovine spongiform encephalopathy measures. [26889]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 26 April 1996]: The regulations covering these measures require that the meat from animals slaughtered under them is removed from the human and animal food chain. It will not therefore be available for use as food aid. In any case, it would not be appropriate to use for food aid meat which is not deemed suitable for use in the United Kingdom.

Slaughterhouses

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many slaughterhouses in each MAFF region have sought derogations from EC regulations in each year since 1989. [26005]

Mrs. Browning: Under the single market provisions of Council directives 91/497/EEC and 91/498/EEC which had to be implemented by 1 January 1993, member states were permitted to grant slaughterhouses temporary derogations for a limited period from the structural requirements of directive 91/497/EEC, provided they met the necessary hygiene requirements. Prior to 1 January 1993, therefore, there were no slaughterhouses operating under a licence issued subject to a temporary derogation. Total figures for premises in England licensed subject to temporary derogations for 1993, 1994 and 1995 were provided in the reply I gave on 16 April to the hon. Member for Fife, Central (Mr. McLeish), Official Report, column 469. A breakdown of the figures by MAFF region is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many slaughterhouses in each MAFF region were not approved by the EC in each year since 1989. [26006]

Mrs. Browning: The total number of red meat slaughterhouses in England which were not approved for EC trade at the end of each year from 1989 to 1995 is given in the table. No breakdown of these figures by MAFF region is readily available and it could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Until 1993, local authorities were responsible for licensing slaughterhouses and the figures shown for 1989 to 1992 are derived from records of state veterinary service visits.

Total number of red meat slaughterhouses not approved for EC trade

	Number
1989	635
1990	589
1991	540
1992	487
1993	[1]373
1994	[1]346
1995	[1]292

Pig Exports

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many pigs have been exported for (a) further fattening, (b) slaughter and (c) breeding in each year since 1992. [26657]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 26 April 1996]: The table shows recorded exports of live swine, as recorded in the overseas trade statistics of the United Kingdom. It is not possible to identify precisely whether the animals were exported for fattening or slaughter, but pure-bred animals for breeding are separately identifiable. The member may wish to refer to the business monitor MA20 and MA21 series, available in the Library of the House, which provides more detail on recorded overseas trade statistics—within which live animal trade can be found in division 00.

Thousand

	1992	1993	1994[1]	1995[1]
Swine, pure bred breeding animals	33	16	15	25
Swine, other than pure bred breeding animals	379	150	176	190

[1] Data provisional.

Exported Calves

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many calves were exported from the United Kingdom to Spain in each year since 1993. [26658]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 26 April 1996]: The overseas trade statistics of the United Kingdom recorded no exports of calves to Spain in 1994 and 1995. Recorded exports in 1993 totalled 1,815 head.

Specified Bovine Offal

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those European Union countries where specified bovine offal as defined in the United Kingdom is removed from cattle on slaughter; and if he will make a statement. [23558]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 1 April 1996]: On 4 April 1996, France introduced measures to require the removal and destruction of specified bovine offals, as defined in the UK, but only from animals born before 31 July 1991. Portugal applies SBO controls, but only to animals culled from herds which have had a case of BSE. Belgium also has SBO controls, but is not clear whether these are the same as the controls applied in the UK. No other member states have SBO controls.

Beef Exports

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to mount a legal challenge against the EU worldwide ban on exports of United Kingdom beef. [25668]

Mrs. Browning: The Government are challenging the legality of the EU ban on the export of British beef before the European Court of Justice.

Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what has been the total value of beef exports to the European Union in each of the last four quarters; [26996]

(2) what has been the total value of exports of calves and cull cattle to the European Union in each of the last four quarters; [26997]

(3) what has been the total value of beef imports from the European Union in each of the last four quarters; [26998]

(4) what has been the total value of imports of calves and cull cattle from the European Union in each of the last four quarters. [26999]

Mrs. Browning: Overseas trade statistics for the United Kingdom record the total value of imports and exports of bovine carcase meat and live bovines with other members of the EC as follows:

£ million

	1995 Q1	Q2	Q3	Q4
Exports to the EC
Beef	132	147	130	125
Live bovines	14	23	23	14
Imports from the EC
Beef	46	52	71	52
Live bovines	2	1	4	6

Please note that all data are provisional and subject to amendment.

It is not possible to identify separately the figures for calves and cull cattle, but the figures for exports of live bovines are predominately made up of trade in calves.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Cyprus

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the estimated number of Turkish Cypriots in Cyprus living in the area to the south of the UN-patrolled buffer zone; what are current trends in the number; and if he will make a statement. [27152]

Mr. David Davis: The UN Secretary-General's report of 10 December 1995 on the UN operation in Cyprus states that 362 Turkish Cypriots located in the southern part of Cyprus have made themselves known to United Nations forces in Cyprus personnel. We support the call in UN Security Council resolution 789 for a Cyprus-wide census under the auspices of the United Nations.

Land Mines

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 23 April, Official Report, column 84, what is his Department's assessment of the effect of Her Majesty's Government's decision to modernise their stock of anti-personnel mines on the prospects of achieving an international agreement banning all anti-personnel mines. [27323]

Mr. David Davis: We are committed to pursuing a total ban on anti-personnel land mines. We shall as soon as possible destroy nearly half of our existing stocks of anti-personnel land mines. We intend to destroy the remainder when an international ban is agreed, or when viable alternatives become available. In the meantime, should it become necessary to replace any of the remaining mines, we shall do so only with self-destruct mines. We have taken no final decision to procure any new anti-personnel mines. We shall continue to pursue the policy which, in our view, offers the best prospect of addressing the terrible consequences for innocent civilians of the irresponsible use of anti-personnel land mines.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 23 April, Official Report, column 84, how the Government plan to pursue an international agreement on banning all non-self-destructing anti-personnel mines. [27320]

Mr. Davis: We are committed to pursuing a total international ban on all anti-personnel mines and, as an interim measure, will also work for a ban on non-self-destructing mines. We shall consider how best to proceed, in concert with allies and partners who share our objectives, in the light of the conclusion of the UN weaponry convention review conference, which is currently in progress in Geneva.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 23 April, Official Report, column 84, what is his Department's policy towards sharing self-destruct technology with those countries who currently export non-self-destruct anti-personnel mines to help them switch production to self-destruct anti-personnel mines. [27324]

Mr. Davis: Our aim is to bring about the elimination of all anti-personnel land mines as soon as it is practicable, and in the short term to eliminate particularly non-self-destruct mines which are the most dangerous to civilians. We have also announced a total moratorium on the export of all anti-personnel land mines to all destinations. We shall be guided by these factors in considering any sharing of mine-related technology with any country.

PRIME MINISTER

Ministerial Visit (Gosport)

Mr. Viggers: To ask the Prime Minister if he will pay an official visit to Gosport. [25708]

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Department of Transport

Mr. Allen: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement on the future role of the Department of Transport. [26903]

The Prime Minister: The "Transport Report 1996", Command Paper 3206, which was published on 25 March, sets out the Department of Transport's overall objectives and priorities for the immediate future.

Nuclear Safety and Security Summit

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his answer of 22 April to the hon. Member for Reading, West (Sir A. Durant) Official Report, columns 18–19, if he will publish (a) the financial commitments made to the Ukraine to close down and clean up the Chernobyl reactors by (i) the United Kingdom and (ii) the G7 and (b) the timetable over which these commitments are made. [27348]

The Prime Minister: The memorandum of understanding signed in December 1995 between the Ukraine, the G7 countries and the European Commission provides for the closure of Chernobyl within the framework of a comprehensive assistance programme for Ukraine's energy sector. The MOU committed assistance to some $500 million in grants and to $1.8 billion in projected investments. To date, the United Kingdom has contributed over £16 million for Chernobyl-related projects and assistance with energy sector restructuring.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what estimates he has made of the cost to the United Kingdom of (a) additional health monitoring, (b) nuclear installations safety reviews, (c) compensation for loss of trade to the United Kingdom and (d) other costs of the Chernobyl accident of 1986. [27386]

The Prime Minister: No central estimate has been made of the cost of the United Kingdom of additional health monitoring of the Chernobyl accident. Direct costs which can be identified amount to around some £13 million for compensation paid to sheep farmers and environmental monitoring projects. In addition, over a 10-year period, £33 million will have been invested in the Government's radioactive incident monitoring network.

Prince of Wales's Consent

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Prime Minister in what circumstances the Prince of Wales's consent is needed for a Bill. [26043]

The Prime Minister: Bills whose provisions affect the hereditary revenues, personal property or interests of the Duchy of Cornwall require the consent of the Prince of Wales to be signified in both Houses before they are passed. The same would apply to any Bill which affected the interest of the Prince of Wales in his capacity as Prince and Steward of Scotland.

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 30 April. [26044]

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 30 April. [26045]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Performance Targets

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what are the key performance targets for the Court Service, Her Majesty's Land Registry, the Public Record Office and Public Trust Office for 1996–97. [27708]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The following tables set out the key performance targets that the Lord Chancellor has set for the Court Service, Her Majesty's Land Registry, the Public Record Office and the Public Trust Office for 1996–97.

Court Service
Key performance targets 1996–97

	Indicator	Target
Quality of service:	1. Percentage of courts and offices meeting all charter for court users standards	95 per cent.
Supreme court:	2. Percentage of administrative process dealt with within target time	95 per cent.
Crown court:	3. Percentage of defendants committed for trail waiting 16 weeks or less	75 per cent.
County courts:	4. Percentage of administrative process dealt with within target time	92 per cent.
Enforcement:	5. Number of warrants paid as a percentage of correctly directed warrants	70 per cent.
Unit costs:	6. Unit cost of a productive courtroom hour (Crown court)	£522.55
	7. Unit cost of an hour of administrative work as measured by the business management system (county courts)	£49.92
Cost recovery:	8. Percentage of the cost of civil courts recovered	86 per cent.

Fuller details of the agency's targets are given in its business plan which is available from the Court Service Headquarters.

Her Majesty's Land Registry Executive Agency Key performance targets 1996–97

Indicator	Target
Financial
Return on average capital employed[1] (ROCE):	3 per cent.
External financing limit:	£0
Efficiency
Cost per unit in real terms[2]	£27.84—a 3 per cent. reduction over the 1995–96 target of £28.70
Cost per unit in cash terms:	£30.82
Productivity
Unit output per post (per day):	3.34 units—a 4.1 per cent. increase over the 1995–96 target of 3.202 units
Citizen's charter standards
Percentage of pre-completion applications handled in two working days at every district land registry:	Not less than 98.5 per cent.
Average processing time for post-completion applications at every district land registry:	Where no requisitions arise, no more than 15 working days.
Percentage of registrations handled free of error at every district land registry:	Not less than 98 per cent.
Development of land registration
Number of computerised titles:	To increase the number of registered titles in computerised format to 14 million.
Number of title plans:	To increase the number of title plans in computerised format to 0.3 million.
Number of account holders using direct computer access at end of year:	400 account holders.

[1] ROCE below 6 per cent. reflects agreement with HM Treasury to apply surplus income generated in 1993–95, when ROCE exceeded 25 per cent. in each year to fee reductions in 1996–99.

[2] The real term unit cost in the base year, of 1992–93 was £30.65.

Fuller details of the registry's performance targets are given in its business plan, which is available from Her Majesty's Land Registry.

Public Record Office Key performance targets 1996–97

Indicator	Target
1. Efficiency
Unit costs of key activities:
(a) record accessions	Reduce by 3.4 per cent. to £2.99
(b) providing record storage space per linear metre	Reduce by 14.6 per cent. to £60.70
(c) making documents available to users per document	Reduce by 0.9 per cent. to £5.99
(d) providing census reader services per reader visit	Reduce by 4.86 per cent. to £4.03
(e) providing document reader services per reader visit	Limit increase to 7.01 per cent., i.e. to £41.54
(f) providing remote user information services per contact	Reduce by 3.79 per cent. to £42.20
Backlog of records reported by Departments as being over 30 years old and awaiting review	Reduce by 1,000 metres
The timely destruction of records not worthy of preservation	Departments to have in place key features of records management, as specified in the PRO Manual of Records Administration
Provision of acceptable storage conditions, i.e. meeting the preservation and environmental standards recommended by BS 5454: 1989 Recommendations for storage and exhibition of archival documents BSI, 1989.	Increase the proportion of records stored to the standards from 87.75 per cent. to 87.85 per cent.
Management efficiency in running support services and projects	Reduce the running costs of the office's support services as a proportion of overall running costs from 11.2 per cent. to 9.8 per cent.
2. Quality of service
Citizen's charter standards	Achieve all charter standard targets[1]
3. Effectiveness
Performance in achieving specified milestones towards strategic objectives	(i) complete new Public Record Office project at Kew
	(ii) review operation of the public records system
	(iii) increase revenue by 10 per cent.

[1] Subject to specified modifications during period of major building works and moves of records.

Fuller details of the office's targets are given in its business plan, which is available from the Public Record Office.

Public Trust Office Executive Agency Key performance targets 1996–97

Indicator	Target
1. To carry out accounting transactions within target times	To bring to account at least 98 per cent. of receipts and payments transactions within turnaround targets
2. To achieve investment targets	(a) to pay annually not less than the rate provided by the average of a model set of comparators for special and basic rate at 75 per cent. of special rate
	(b) on an annual basis to ensure that 85 per cent. of all measured funds perform in line or better than their model based on stock market indices
	(c) on a three-year rolling basis to ensure that 80 per cent. of all measured funds perform in line or better than their model based on stock market indices
3. To achieve Charter Standards	To achieve 98 per cent. of charter standards
4. To achieve unit costs in activity areas	To reduce overall unit costs so that the target for 1996–97 will be at least 2.75 per cent. lower than the target for 1995–96 (adjusted for inflation)
5. Percentage of full costs recovered	To ensure that 100 per cent. of full costs are recovered

Fuller details of the office's performance targets are given in its business plan, which is available from the Public Trust Office.

ENVIRONMENT

Water Supplies

16. Mr. Nigel Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what powers he has to ensure that the water companies take steps to guarantee uninterrupted water supplies this summer. [25688]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Under the Water Industry Act 1991 the Secretary of State—or the Director General of Water Services—may make enforcement orders requiring a company to take specific actions in order to secure compliance with any statutory or other requirement enforceable under the Act. One such duty, under section 37, is that water companies must develop and maintain an efficient and economical system of water supply within their area and make supplies available to persons who demand them.

20. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to monitor the future availability of water supplies. [25692]

Mr. Jones: My Department commissioned a series of reports from the National Rivers Authority on the water resource situation and prospects for supplies in England and Wales. A further report, from the Environment Agency, is expected to be published on 1 May.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what voluntary leakage reduction target each water company has set over the next five and 10 years; [27164]

(2) if he will publish water company leakage rates on a quarterly basis at times of water shortage. [27165]

Mr. Clappison: The water service companies' current targets for reducing leakage are summarised in the table. The Director General of Water Services is involved in on-going discussions with companies about the adequacy and consistency of these targets. There are not plans to publish leakage rates quarterly.

Water Service Company Leakage Targets
Anglian Water	Aim to reduce leakage to around 10 per cent. by the year 2000
Dwr Cymru	Aim to achieve a reduction of over a third by the year 2000
Northumbrian Water	Aim to reduce leakage to 15 per cent. in the coming years
North West Water	Aim to reduce leakage to 22 per cent. by the year 2000
Severn Trent Water	Aim to reduce leakage to 12 per cent. over the next five years
Southern Water	Aim to reduce levels to 10 per cent. by the year 2000
South West Water	Aim to reduce leakage to 15 per cent. by the year 2000
Thames Water	Aim to halve leakage by 2005
Wessex Water[1]	Aim to achieve 15 per cent. leakage by the 2005
Yorkshire Water	Aim to reduce leakage to 60Ml/d by 1998 and to 20 per cent. in the longer term

Mrs. Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what additional investment each water company approved in the past six months to respond to the present shortage of rainfall. [27167]

Mr. Clappison: During the latter part of 1995 and the first four months of 1996, the privatised water and sewerage companies have announced additional investment of more than £400 million in developing water resources and improving the distribution network. Figures for individual companies are as follows:

	£ million
Anglian Water	10
Dwr Cymru	10
Northumbrian Water	3
North West Water	53
Severn Trent Water	100
Southern Water	32
South West Water	20
Thames Water	35
Yorkshire Water	171
Wessex Water	5

Unified Business Rate

17. Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the impact on small businesses of his policy to give transitional relief on the unified business rate. [25689]

Mr. Gummer: In 1995–96, the transitional arrangements benefited 815,000 small business premises compared with 315,000 large properties. This represents a saving to small businesses of nearly £380 million. Over the period 1995 to 2000, small businesses are expected to benefit by about £1.35 billion from transition.

District Auditor Service

18. Mr. Khabra: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had with the Controller of the Audit Commission on the district auditor service. [25690]

Mr. Curry: No such discussions have been held, but Ministers meet the chairman and members of the commission informally from time to time.

21. Mr. Betts: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met local authority leaders to discuss Government contribution to local authority spending. [25693]

Mr. Curry: I last met local authority leaders specifically to discuss the financing of local authority revenue expenditure on 15 January. My most recent meeting with chairmen of the local authority associations was on 23 April.

Local Authority Spending

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the percentage increase in expenditure by local authorities between 1992–93 and the 1996–97 budgeted figures. [25691]

Sir Paul Beresford: The increase in local authority budgeted expenditure from 1992–93 to 1996–97 is estimated at 9.3 per cent.

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to change the basis on which local authorities are authorised to make grants to (a) sporting and (b) other bodies; and if he will make a statement. [26046]

Sir Paul Beresford: We have no plans to change the basis on which local authorities are authorised to make such grants.

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement of the rules governing the use of funds paid to a company by a local authority for the provision of services, with particular reference to the use of such funds to prepare bids to provide similar services for other local authorities. [27447]

Sir Paul Beresford: Where a company carries out work for a local authority it is for that company to determine how it uses the income from the contract.

Rural White Paper

22. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many copies of the rural White Paper have been sold to date. [25694]

Mr. Gummer: Since the publication of the White Paper, "Rural England" in October 1995, some 7,200 copies have been sold.

Local Education Authorities

23. Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received concerning the allocation of funds to local education authorities. [25695]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Secretary of State received 143 written representations from local education authorities and, with ministerial colleagues, met delegations from 44 local education authorities during the formal consultation period.

Capital Challenge

24. Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what submissions he has received from local authority leaders concerning capital challenge. [25696]

Mr. Curry: Two hundred and twelve responses have been received from local authorities and local authority associations and 36 have been received from other bodies.

Good Landlord Registration Scheme

25. Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking to promote a good landlords registration scheme. [25697]

Mr. Clappison: We believe that a compulsory national registration scheme would impose an unnecessary regulatory burden on landlords and local authorities, and unnecessary costs. Research shows that the majority of tenants have a good relationship with their landlord.

We actively encourage local authorities through the housing investment programme to work with private landlords to make the most effective use of the local housing stock and to provide good quality accommodation. We believe authorities should have the flexibility to develop initiatives which best meet local needs and problems.

Local authorities have a range of enforcement powers to take action against landlords who provide accommodation which does not meet fitness standards. Proposals in the Housing Bill will strengthen local authorities' powers to deal with the particular problems in houses in multiple occupation.

Anti-social Tenants

26. Sir John Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to help local authorities deal with anti-social tenants. [25698]

Mr. Curry: The Government have included in the Housing Bill a substantial package of measures to help local authorities to deal more effectively with anti-social tenants. We have also issued guidance to all local authorities to help them make better use of the court system when evicting troublemakers.

Energy Efficiency

27. Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on improvement in energy efficiency in the domestic, industrial and transport sectors of the economy since 1970. [25699]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: My Department actively promotes energy efficiency through a wide range of initiatives across all sectors, including information and advice, voluntary schemes, and selective use of grants, incentives and regulation. My Department's recent publication, "Sustainable Development Indicators", shows that primary energy consumption in the UK has remained fairly constant since 1970, despite the 60 per cent. rise in gross domestic product. The UK expects carbon dioxide emissions to be 4 to 8 per cent. below 1990 levels by the year 2000.

Built Environment (London)

28. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to improve the built environment in London. [25700]

Mr. Gummer: My over-arching objective is to raise the standard of urban design in London, as elsewhere in the country. I have a number of initiatives in hand to achieve this.

I shall shortly be publishing "Strategic Guidance for London Planning Authorities", which has a chapter devoted to policies to protect and improve the quality of London's environment to ensure that the capital maintains its attractiveness and competitiveness.

Similarly, "Strategic Guidance for the Thames" will increase awareness of the importance of raising design standards in the sensitive river corridor and will contain a set of design principles which local planning authorities will be required to take account of when considering development proposals.

Earlier this year, the Government office for London published a research document on London's urban environment, "Planning for Quality", which identifies the principal components of urban quality and illustrates how they can be enhanced as planning policies are developed.

This is all part of the wider quality in town and country initiative that I launched last year, which seeks to encourage debate and action about what government and others can do to achieve quality in the built environment. Out of this grew last summer's urban design campaign to promote greater consideration of design issues at local level. Out of 21 schemes being supported by my Department nationwide, two are in London-at Borough market and Wimbledon town centre. They will feature in a major exhibition on urban design later this year and the results will help to inform the preparation of good practice on design.

My Department is also reviewing existing planning policy guidance on design in the context of a general review of planning policy guidance note No. 1.

Mine Water Discharges

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he has taken to ensure that the criteria employed by the Environment Agency in deciding how many cases of mine water discharges in England and Wales should be selected for remediation funding are consistent with the EC limits set out in the freshwater fisheries directive. [26880]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: I am advised that some of the chemical parameters set out in the Fresh Water for Fish Directive, 78/659/EEC, are used by the Environment Agency in assessing the state of waters affected by discharges from abandoned coal mines.

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will obtain from the Environment Agency a copy of the full list of sites of mine water discharges in England and Wales which were considered for possible remediation funding, together with the criteria used in the decision as to the cases to be put forward; and if he will place the list in the Library. [26881]

Mr. Jones: So far as mine water discharges from coal mines are concerned, the Environment Agency has considered a large number of sites affected by mine water discharges, using the following criteria:

Biological impact

Area biologically affected

Area visually affected

Length visually affected

Substrate quality

Iron deposition

Total iron downstream of discharge

pH, dissolved oxygen levels and aluminium concentration.

As a result of the application of these criteria, 35 sites have been identified for further study in order to consider the practicability and cost of potential remedial work. I am arranging for a list of these sites to be placed in the Library of the House.

Out-of-town Superstores

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will announce his decision with regard to the planning proposals for four out-of-town-centre food superstores at Daventry, Northamptonshire. [27388]

Sir Paul Beresford: I expect to be able to issue decisions shortly.

House Building

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met representatives of the house building industry to discuss house building in England; and if he will make a statement. [26129]

Mr. Clappison: The Secretary of State met members of the volume housebuilders study group on 13 February 1996. This was followed by more detailed discussions with the chairman of the group. In addition, my hon. Friend the Minister for Planning, Construction and Energy Efficiency and I hold regular meetings with representatives of the construction industry including, where appropriate, those from the housebuilding industry.

There were 135,700 private housing starts in 1995; that is 13 per cent. higher than in 1992, which was the lowest point in the recent housebuilding cycle. In the three months to February 1996, starts rose 6 per cent. compared with the previous three months. Mortgage interest rates are now at their lowest for nearly 30 years and house purchase is unusually affordable. The Government believe that there is every reason to have confidence in the present and future health of the housing market.

Environment Agency

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the role of the board of the Environment Agency and its regional committees. [26358]

Mr. Clappison: The board is directly responsible to Ministers for all aspects of the agency's organisation and performance. We expect the board to ensure that the agency fulfils its statutory duties and to ensure propriety, regularity, economy, efficiency and effectiveness in the operation of the organisation.

Within each of its regions, the agency is required to establish an environment protection advisory committee and a fisheries advisory committee and to consult them about the manner in which it carries out relevant functions in the regions.

Each region also has one or more flood defence committee, which are responsible for carrying out all the agency's flood defence functions other than the issuing of levies, making drainage charges or borrowing money.

Channel Tunnel Rail Link

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Dartford (Mr. Dunn) of 18 March, Official Report, column 9, on the establishment of an interdepartmental working group in respect of perceived blight (a) what is the membership of the group, (b) when it is due to report to him, (c) when its findings will be published, (d) what representations will be allowed from local authorities and affected residents and (e) if it will take into account views expressed by any Select Committee of the House of Lords on the Channel Tunnel Rail Link Bill. [27105]

Sir Paul Beresford: The interdepartmental working group on blight is chaired by the head of the Department of the Environment planning directorate. The membership of the group is drawn from the Departments for Education and Employment, the Environment, National Heritage, Trade and Industry and Transport and the Ministries of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, and of Defence, Her Majesty's Treasury, the Welsh and Scottish Offices, the Department of the Environment for Northern Ireland, the Highways Agency, the Prison Service, NHS Estates and the Valuation Office.

The working group will circulate a paper shortly summarising the main issues for consideration and inviting comments. A copy will be placed in the Library. Until we see what evidence is submitted and are able to analyse the options that may arise, it is premature to say when a final report will be submitted, but the working group will proceed as quickly as possible and I have already undertaken that there will be a progress report in September.

Evidence from affected residents, local authorities or other interested parties is welcome at any time through one of the professional bodies or interest groups, or direct to the working group. Representations should be sent to the secretary, room C16/08a, 2 Marsham street, London SW1P 3EB.

The working group will, of course, take full account of all views expressed by any Select Committee of the House of Lords on the Channel Tunnel Rail Link Bill, alongside those already expressed by the Select Committee in the House of Commons and by hon. Members during the Commons Standing Committee on the Channel Tunnel Rail Link Bill.

Butterfly, Bat and Toad Habitat

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what new proposals he has to improve the habitats of butterflies, bats and toads. [25682]

Mr. Clappison: The biodiversity steering group, chaired by my Department, with members drawn from all sectors, published its findings on 13 December 1995. "Biodiversity: The UK Steering Group Report", identifies some 25 butterfly, 15 bat and two toad species whose populations should be monitored where possible. The report includes costed action plans for seven of the butterflies, three of the bats and one of the toads and recommends that costed action plans for a further three butterflies, one bat and one toad be produced within three years.

In addition, many of the species concerned would benefit from the proposals for costed action plans for 14 key habitats included in the report and the recommendation that costed plans for a further 24 key habitats be produced within three years.

The Government intend to publish their response to the report shortly.

Home Energy Efficiency Scheme

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how may householders are currently on a waiting list for assistance under the home energy efficiency scheme; how long he estimates it will take for these householders to have work under the scheme carried out; and if he will make a statement. [27556]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: I estimate that installers now have, on average, about 36 weeks' work from the 310,000 expressions of interest recorded by Eaga Ltd, the scheme managers. The queue will be tackled efficiently to return average waiting times to the lengths for which the scheme is rightly well regarded.

Council Tax (Kingswood)

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was (a) the total sum, (b) the amount paid to Kingswood borough council, (c) the percentage of the total paid to Kingswood borough council and (d) the amount paid per dwelling in Bristol, in transitional relief in respect of the council tax in each year from 1993–94 to 1995–96. [27450]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Total amount of transitional relief

1993–94: £378,652,826

1994–95: £111,283,108

1995–96: £27,178,179[1]

(b) Amount of transitional relief paid to Kingswood borough council

1993–94: £164,456

1994–95: £28,416

1995–96: £6,125[1]

(c) Percentage of total amount of transitional relief paid to Kingswood borough council

1993–94: 0.04 per cent.

1994–95: 0.02 per cent.

1995–96: 0.02 per cent.[1]

(d) Amount paid per chargeable dwelling in Kingswood

1993–94: £4.59

1994–95: £0.78

1995–96: £0.16[1]

These figures are averages. The actual amount of transitional relief varied according to a household's council tax banding, its composition and its previous liability for community charge.

[1] Information for 1995–96 is provisional and is subject to final grant claims to be made during 1996–97.

Council Tax (Bristol)

Mr. Berry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was (a) the total sum, (b) the amount paid to Bristol city council, (c) the percentage of the total paid to Bristol city council, and (d) the amount paid per dwelling in Bristol, in transitional relief in respect of the council tax in each year from 1993–94 to 1995–96. [27449]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is as follows:

(a) Total amount of transitional relief

1993–94: £378,652,826

1994–95: £111,283,108

1995–96: £27,178,179[1]

(b) Amount of transitional relief paid to Bristol city council

1993–94: £2,061,364

1994–95: £529,832

1995–96: £148,666[1]

(c) Percentage of total amount of transitional relief paid to Bristol city council

1993–94: 0.54 per cent.

1994–95: 0.48 per cent.

1995–96: 0.54 per cent.[1]

(d) Amount paid per chargeable dwelling in Bristol

1993–94: £12.94

1994–95: £3.32

1995–96: £0.93[1]

These figures are averages. The actual amount of transitional relief varied according to a household's council tax banding, its composition and its previous liability for community charge.

[1] Information for 1995–96 is provisional and is subject to final grant claims to be made during 1996–97.

Cable Companies (Access)

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy in respect of permitting access by cable companies (a) across local authority land, (b) to install their services to local authority builders and (c) to install their services to listed buildings and in conservation areas; and if he will make a statement. [27057]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I have been asked to reply.

Cable television operators are granted special powers under section 10 and schedule 2 of the Telecommunications Act 1984 to assist with the installation of their systems in the public highway and, with the appropriate consents, on private land.

A cable operator does not have the automatic right to carry out works on private land unless it has first obtained the written agreement of the owner, be it a local authority or a private individual. If a cable operator were to be refused agreement to install its apparatus in these circumstances, it could apply to the courts for the necessary rights to be granted, on terms to be decided by the court.

The powers given to cable operators, through the terms of their individual licences under the Act, do not override the obligation imposed by section 7 of the Planning (Listed Buildings and Conservation Areas) Act 1990 to obtain listed building consent for any works which affect the character of a listed building.

Fluoridation

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what recent representations his Department has received concerning the expansion of water fluoridation; and if he will make a statement; [26994]

(2) what plans he has for legislation to require water companies to extend the provision of fluoridated water; and if he will make a statement. [26993]

Mr. Malone: I have been asked to reply.

The Department of Health regularly receives correspondence expressing opinions both for and against water fluoridation. Our professional and scientific advisers continue to advise us of the safety and effectiveness of optimal water fluoridation as a means to improving the oral health of the nation, and we therefore support fluoridation, especially in areas of poor dental health. This remains, however, a local matter for agreement between health authorities and water undertakers after local public consultation. There are no plans for changes to current legislation.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Crime (Clear-ups)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what percentage of the recorded crimes which were cleared up in each of the past five years were cleared up by secondary means. [25603]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is given in table B of Home Office statistical bulletin 3/96, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the post of chairman of the Criminal Cases Review Commission was advertised; when the interviews took place; how many candidates were interviewed; why no appointment has yet been made; and if he will make a statement. [26883]

Mr. Kirkhope: The post of chairman of the Criminal Cases Review Commission was advertised on 3, 5 and 8 September 1995. Six candidates were interviewed on 12 and 20 December 1995. It was announced on 3 April that the chairman will be Sir Frederick Crawford. He will be appointed formally when section 8 of the Criminal Appeal Act 1995 is brought into force.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects the Criminal Cases Review Commission to be established; what is the reason for the delay; when he is proposing to advertise for members of the commission; and if he will make a statement. [26884]

Mr. Kirkhope: We expect the Criminal Cases Review Commission to start work later this year. Work to establish it is proceeding as quickly as possible. Advertising for the members of the commission will begin on 5 May.

Mr. Brian Parsons

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he first received representations on behalf of Mr. Brian Parsons; when he expects to complete his considerations; and if he will make a statement. [26886]

Mr. Kirkhope: Representations were first made between March 1991 and January 1993, but on the basis of these it was decided in May 1993 not to refer the case to the Court of Appeal. Further representations were made following television documentaries shown in 1994 and 1995. As a result of these, the entire case was re-examined by the Devon and Cornwall police. Once we have finished considering their report, we shall aim to reach a conclusion about the case as quickly as possible.

Driving Licence Fraud

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions driving licences have been used fraudulently in each of the last five years. [26902]

Mr. Maclean: The available information relates to the number of findings of guilt for fraud, forgery and similar offences associated with driving licences in England and Wales, and is as follows:

Findings of guilt in England and Wales for fraud, forgery and similar offences associated with driving licences.

1990: 1,436

1991: 1,200

1992: 1,015

1993: 944

1994: 1,344.

Figures for 1995 are not yet available.

James Hanratty

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to receive a report from Superintendent Roger Matthews on his inquiry into the James Hanratty case; and if he will make a statement. [27155]

Mr. Kirkhope: We expect to receive shortly a report from the Metropolitan police on certain matters raised in the representations in this case.

Asylum and Immigration

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce measures to register and regulate individuals and organisations offering legal advice and representation to applicants for asylum and immigration. [27248]

Mr. Kirkhope: I have no plans to introduce such measures. Discussions are continuing with the Law Society and other interested parties on the question of regulation.

Immigration Complaints System

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has received the annual report for 1995 of the complaints audit committee of the Immigration and Nationality Directorate; and if he will make a statement. [27768]

Mr. Kirkhope: A copy of the report has been placed in the Library. It is a wide-ranging, informative and encouraging document and I am grateful to the committee for its comments and recommendations. These are already receiving careful consideration.

UK Passport Agency

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how the UK Passport Agency performed against its targets in 1995–96; and what performance targets he has set for the agency in 1996–97. [27769]

Mr. Kirkhope: I am pleased to say that the UK Passport Agency achieved all its targets in 1995–96. The targets for processing properly completed straightforward applications were met despite a 20 per cent. increase in demand for passport services with an average turnround time for the whole year of 6.1 working days, well within the average target of seven working days. The Passport Agency's financial target was to reduce its unit cost by 5 per cent. in real terms. The latest indications are that the agency has achieved a 7.25 per cent. real terms reduction in its unit cost. Another notable achievement was the re-award of the chartermark in December 1995.

During 1996–97, I shall expect the Passport Agency to continue to improve its standard of service to the public, while seeking further efficiency savings in its operations.

Euro 96

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will ensure that all police forces will have adequate equipment and manpower available to control unruly behaviour at European nations cup football matches; [27390]

(2) if he will ensure that water cannons will be available to police authorities in the United Kingdom to control unruly spectators attending the European nations cup football matches; [27392]

(3) if he will list the steps that have been and will be taken to ensure the safety of spectators at the European nations cup football matches to be held in the summer in England; and if he will make a statement. [27391]

Mr. Maclean: Decisions about the deployment of officers and the allocation of resources to police Euro 96 are the responsibility of the chief officers of the eight forces concerned. They must decide how many officers need to be deployed at matches and in surrounding public places. Chief officers are well used to policing football throughout the ordinary football season and are thus best placed to make decisions of this kind.

A joint Home Office and police working party has concluded that water cannon should not be added to the range of public order equipment available to the police This is because they are heavy and cumbersome and cannot be mobilised quickly to deal with spontaneous disorder.

The Association of Chief Police Officers has developed extensive plans for the policing of Euro 96, in conjunction with the Football Association and Government Departments. There will be police intelligence centres adjacent to the grounds with a national co-ordinating centre in central London. Police "spotters" will be used to identify troublemakers from home and abroad: very close liaison with the police forces of the participating countries is taking place and will continue throughout the period of the tournament. The latest technology is now in place and will be used to ensure that local police have up-to-date information about the movements of known and suspected hooligans.

The police strategy is aimed at ensuring the safety and well-being of the great majority of genuine and law abiding football supporters who will be coming to enjoy Euro 96. However, anyone intending to disrupt the competition and spoil the enjoyment of others can be assured they will be swiftly dealt with by the police, the prosecuting authorities and the courts.

Asylum Seekers

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Ahmadi muslims (a) in Pakistan and (b) elsewhere have sought asylum each year since 1984; and how many such applications in each year have been successful. [26042]

Mr. Kirkhope: Asylum applications are recorded on the basis of nationality rather than religious beliefs, so therefore, applications lodged by Ahmadi muslims are not separately identifiable in the statistics.

Tables 2.1 and 3.1 to 3.3 of the Home Office statistical bulletin "Asylum Statistics United Kingdom 1994", issue 15/95, give asylum application and decision figures for nationals of Pakistan and other Muslim countries, for the years 1986 to 1994. Equivalent information for 1985 is given in issue 17/94 of this publication, both of which are available in the Library.

Raghbir Singh

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for how long Raghbir Singh has been detained; for what reason he has been detained; what recourse to appeal he has against his detention; and if he will make a statement. [26210]

Mr. Howard: Raghbir Singh has been detained since 29 March 1995, when he was served with a notice of intention that he should be deported on the ground that his deportation would be conducive to the public good for reasons of national security.

The lawfulness of my decision to detain Mr. Singh under Immigration Act powers and to initiate deportation action against him has been the subject of judicial review proceedings before both the High Court and the Court of Appeal. On both occasions, the courts concluded that the action was lawful.

Nigeria

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the safety of pro-democracy supporters being returned to Nigeria; and if he will make a statement. [27136]

Mr. Kirkhope: Our assessment of the general situation in Nigeria is summarised in the December 1995 country information document which has been placed in the Library. That assessment is kept under review. Each asylum application is, however, considered in the light of its particular individual circumstances.

Chief Constables

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what direction he has given to chief constables in relation to activities not related to their duties in managing and supervising the police force in their area, and the amount of time to be spent on such activities not related to the immediate duties for which they are employed; and if he will make a statement; [26809]

(2) if he will list for all chief constables the amount of time each has spent out of force over the past 12 months; where this has exceeded one week, what clearance has been given from the Home Office for such out-of-force activities; and if he will make a statement; [26810]

(3) what guidance he has given to chief constables and police authorities in relation to the amount of leave out of force for any one chief constable in a given 12-month period; what provision has been made for cover to be provided in the light of such absence; and if he will make a statement. [26811]

Mr. Maclean [holding answers 26 April 1996]: These matters are for chief constables and their police authorities to manage within the provisions of the Police Regulations 1995. During periods of absence, an assistant chief constable, who is designated under the terms of section 6 of the Police Act 1964, as amended by section 6 of the Police and Magistrates Courts' Act 1994, will exercise all the powers and duties of the chief constable.

Police Officers

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many police officers there are in each member state of the Council of Europe; [26356]

(2) what is the current ratio of police officers per 1,000 population in each member state of the EU. [26357]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 29 April 1996]: This information is not centrally collected.

Learmont Report

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Home Office report on the Learmont recommendations will be published; for how long he has had the report; what are the reasons for the time taken to publish the report; and if he will make a statement. [26668]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 29 April 1996]: My right hon. and learned Friend gave his initial response to the report on 16 October 1995, when he dealt with the key recommendations. He agreed that the Prison Service should take forward the policy reviews recommended by Sir John Learmont. My right hon. and learned Friend said that he would come back to the House with a full report in due course. He will do so when he receives the findings of these major reviews.

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what extra funding is being made available to meet the cost of implementing the recommendations arising from the Learmont report; and if he will make a statement. [26669]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 29 April 1996]: The cost of implementing recommendations arising from the Learmont report is being examined as part of the preparation of my right hon. and learned Friend's response to the report.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

"The Panshangar Fra Bartolommeo"

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what action she intends taking to ensure the retaining in the United Kingdom of the painting "The Panshangar Fra Bartolommeo" by Fra Bartolommeo; and if he will make a statement. [27265]

Mr. Sproat: The Secretary of State has deferred a decision on the export licence application for Fra Bartolommeo's "Holy Family" until after 8 May 1996. The purpose of the deferral is to allow time for a potential purchaser to come forward to keep the painting in the UK, and my Department is aware of the serious intention to make a purchase offer. It is for the owner of the painting to decide whether to accept any forthcoming offer. If such an offer were made and accepted, the licence application would lapse, the painting would become the property of the purchaser and would be retained in the UK. If such an offer were refused, the Secretary of State would take into account the existence of the purchase offer in making a decision on the licence application.

TREASURY

Private Finance Panel Executive

Mr. Derek Foster: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will name the 24 seconded staff in the Private Finance Panel Executive; and if they are employed on civil service pay and conditions. [25360]

Mr. Jack: There are 25 members of the Private Finance Panel Executive: 13 are seconded; the remaining 12 are employed directly by the PFPE. Panel executive members on secondment from other organisations are:

Mr. Douglas Hogg (Chief Executive)
Mr. Rees Griffiths (Deputy Chief Executive)
Mr. Alisdair Evans
Ms Catherine Clarke
Ms Philippa Roe
Ms Nathalie Norminton
Mr. Chas Johnson
Mr. Neil Carey
Mr. David Goldstone
Mr. Andrew Neil
Mr. David Cain
Ms Angela Brewis
Mr. Alex Harris.

Secondees to the PFPE remain under contract to their employer and their pay and conditions are a matter for them and their employer. The PFPE negotiates with employer organisations an agreed level of reimbursement.

The PFPE is also subject to an overall budgetary constraint. Within this, it fulfils its remaining staffing requirement through direct employment on the basis of short-term appointments. The PFPE, as a limited company, has management responsibilities for its staff which are unconnected with civil service terms and conditions.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the revenue spending estimated by his Department in connection with the private initiative for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26633]

Mr. Jack: The estimated revenue spending in connection with the private finance initiative by Departments responsible to the Chancellor of the Exchequer is:

1995–96: £0 million
1996–97: £2 million
1997–98: £7 million.

Income Tax

Mr. Forman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 18 March, Official Report, column 52, what would be the estimated full-year costs at 1996–97 income levels of introducing a single positive rate of income tax at 23 per cent. assuming transferable personal allowances of £5,000 per person and the abolition of all other tax expenditures, exemptions and reliefs now allowable against income tax. [27242]

Mr. Jack: The estimated full-year cost of introducing a single 23 per cent. rate of income tax at 1996–97 income levels would be about £3 billion. This assumes a personal allowance of £5,000 transferable between spouses and the abolition of all other income tax allowances, mortgage interest relief, tax relief on employer's contributions to occupational and personal pension schemes, reliefs for TESSAs, PEPs and profit-related pay, national savings certificates, employee share schemes and charitable giving.

This estimate does not take into account the substantial behavioural effects which might result from the introduction of such a change nor do they allow for any subsequent changes to the tax system, such as changes to tax relief on employer's contributions to pension schemes or relief for investment income in pension funds.

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of the change in revenue to the Exchequer resulting from a rise in the top rate of income tax from (a) 40 per cent. to 50 per cent. and (b) from 40 per cent. to 60 per cent. [26762]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 25 April 1996]: Estimated full-year yields at 1996–97 income levels are given in the table. The estimates do not take account of any behavioural effects which might result from the introduction of such changes. The figures include consequential effects on the yield of capital gains tax.

Higher rate at:	Yield £ billion
50 per cent.	4.7
60 per cent.	9.3

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the yield from higher rate income tax charged by direct assessment on investment income received net of lower rate income tax in the latest year for which figures are available. [27033]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 26 April 1996]: In 1995–96, £1.2 billion tax was collected via assessments for additional tax on investment income from which tax had already been deducted at source.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Forman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the (a) identifiable and (b) non-identifiable public expenditure per head in (i) England and (ii) the United Kingdom in the latest year for which figures are available. [27109]

Mr. Waldegrave: The latest available figures are for 1994–95:

£ per head

	Identifiable	Non-identifiable
England	3,614	n/a
Scotland	4,505	n/a
Wales	4,208	n/a
Northern Ireland	4,976	n/a
United Kingdom	3,760	688

The term "non-identifiable expenditure" is used to refer to spending which cannot be attributed to the benefit of any one part of the Union.

Landfill Tax

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the current estimate of the revenue to be expected from the landfill tax; [27378]

(2) what is his estimate of the revenue available for environmental trusts from the landfill tax. [27413]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory: The estimated net revenue yield from landfill tax is £450 million in a full year. However, because precise figures about the amount of waste sent to landfill are not available centrally, the revenue estimate for the tax is open to a greater than usual margin of error. The estimate assumes that credits of tax amounting to £50 million will be given to site operators in respect of voluntary contributions they make to environmental trusts, although, on the basis of the revenue projection for the tax and the maximum credit entitlement, as much as £100 million is potentially available for trusts in a full year.

Privatisation Issues

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what reasons led him to offer shares to the market (a) in tranches and (b) in one complete issue for each privatisation since 1979. [27343]

Mr. Jack: Decisions on offer structure are matters for each vendor Department, taking account of such issues as the size of the company being sold and market conditions at the time of each sale.

International Monetary Fund

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the recent spring meetings of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank. [27709]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I attended meetings of the IMF's interim committee and the IMF/World Bank development committee in Washington on 22 and 23 April, where progress was made on several issues of importance for the world economy and for developing countries. As usual, the IMF and World Bank meetings were preceded by meetings of the G7 and G10 Finance Ministers and central bank governors.

The G7, the interim committee and the development committee all discussed the joint IMF/World Bank proposals on the multilateral debt of the poorest, most indebted countries which was one of my top priorities for the meetings. I first launched this initiative at Valletta 18 months ago, and good progress is now being made. In Washington, all agreed that there is a problem which must be tackled. A substantial number of countries now agree with us that, as the managing director has now proposed, the IMF should sell a small part of its gold and invest it to produce commercial returns, which could be used for contributing to the ongoing enhanced structural adjustment facility. The G7 countries all agreed that the resources of the international financial institutions themselves must be mobilised for the purpose of relieving multilateral debt.

With the support of other Ministers, I asked the IMF and World Bank last autumn to produce proposals by the spring. These were delivered in outline form and, last week, we agreed on the principles and a framework for action. We have now called on the IMF and World Bank, in co-operation with the regional development banks, swiftly to put forward more specific proposals, making the fullest use of their own resources to finance them. Our aim is to take final decisions by the time of the annual meetings which will be held from 29 September to 3 October.

At the G7 meeting, we reviewed economic and financial market developments in the world economy and assessed the outlook for the G7 economies, concluding that, despite the recent pause in growth in some countries, the underlying fundamentals in the G7 were promising, particularly in light of progress in reducing inflation. We agreed that policies should continue to be directed at sustaining non-inflationary growth and, where necessary and appropriate, at strengthening recovery. We welcomed the call from the Lille employment conference for continued reduction of structural obstacles to jobs growth. We had a useful discussion of the Russian economy with the Finance Minister and central bank chairman of Russia. We welcomed their 1996 economic reform programme and encouraged the authorities to continue with its full implementation.

We reviewed the progress achieved and the considerable work underway to implement the initiatives arising from the Halifax summit last June, and this discussion was continued in the G10 and interim committee.

The G10 commended the report of the working party on the resolution of sovereign liquidity crises, and agreed that the report should be released to the public. A copy of the executive summary containing the conclusions of the report, which has not been released, has been placed in the Library of the House. It contains some important messages about the handling of future crises of the kind that occurred in Mexico.

We discussed the work being done by the Basle committee on banking supervision, the International Organisation of Securities Commissions and other bodies to improve the soundness of financial institutions and markets, and welcomed the efforts to increase co-operation among supervision authorities which will provide a good basis for the further work to be done in this important area.

Further progress has been made in developing new financing arrangements which would double the resources currently available to the IMF under the general arrangements to borrow, and we urged the discussions to come to a successful conclusion as soon as possible. I stressed the importance in this work involving a wider range of countries, including some of the emerging market economies, recognising their interest in the stability of the international financial system.

At the IMF interim committee, I strongly supported the recent publication of the IMF's special data dissemination standard, and I am delighted to say that the UK was the first country to subscribe to this demanding standard.

In the development committee, in addition to the discussion of multilateral debt, I welcomed the good outcome of the International Development Association replenishment, which was achieved in difficult circumstances. The committee also commended the report of the task force on multilateral development banks.

Copies of my speeches to the interim and development committees, and the communiqués of those meetings and the G10 Finance Ministers' meeting, have been placed in the Library of the House. The G7 did not on this occasion issue a communiqué.

Hand Rolling Tobacco

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will estimate the annual revenue losses which are due to the importation of hand rolling tobacco as a consequence of (a) smuggling and (b) the implementation of the duty-free/duty-paid regulations. [26438]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 29 April 1996]: Customs does not have any reliable estimate of the extent of revenue losses due to smuggling of hand rolling tobacco. It is working closely with the tobacco and alcoholic drinks industries with the aim of achieving an objective measurement of smuggling of excise goods.

Customs' estimate of tax revenue—excise duty and VAT—lost from legitimate personal importation of duty-paid tobacco products for the year ending 30 June 1995 is £150 million. There are no separate figures available for hand rolling tobacco, and no official estimate of the extent of duty-free sales of hand rolling tobacco.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will commission a study of the sales of hand rolling tobacco and of cigarette papers with a view to establishing the extent of tobacco smuggling; and if he will make a statement. [26373]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 29 April 1996]: No. I have already told the Treasury Committee, in response to the report on its 1995 inquiry into cross-border shopping, that Customs and Excise is having discussions with the trade to find an agreed methodology for deriving credible estimates of the level of smuggling in tobacco products. Factors such as sales of hand rolling tobacco and of cigarette papers may form part of the methodology, or may be used to validate it.

VAT Avoidance Schemes

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what action Customs and Excise has taken to counter well known, widely used and successful VAT avoidance schemes. [27271]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 29 April 1996]: Countering successful VAT avoidance schemes normally requires changes to the law. These are proposed in the annual Finance Bill, as with the recent changes to the VAT group registration provisions, or introduced by secondary legislation.

Ms Primarolo: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how Customs and Excise is proposing to counter well-known VAT avoidance schemes that use VAT place of supply rules to ensure VAT costs are avoided. [27272]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 29 April 1996]: Customs and Excise, as part of its normal functions, is active in identifying VAT avoidance schemes, including those involving the manipulation of the rules on place of supply, and in suggesting and implementing measures to combat such avoidance. It would not be appropriate to specify in advance what any new measures might be.

Iraq (UN Special Commission)

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what investigations are planned in respect of suspected breaches of United Kingdom export controls following the UNSCOM report on the involvement of British companies in supplying Iraq with the components of chemical and biological weapons. [25663]

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory [holding answer 29 April 1996]: Any information from UNSCOM reports passed to Customs and Excise is carefully examined and given appropriate attention. It is not, however, the practice of that department to provide information on any planned investigations lest disclosure should prejudice the effectiveness of any inquiries.

Investments (Hong Kong, China and India)

Mr. Shore: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimates he has made of United Kingdom (a) direct and (b) portfolio investment in each year since 1990 in (i) China and Hong Kong and (ii) India. [26298]

Mr. Oppenheim: I have been asked to reply.

The available information on direct investment is published by the Office for National Statistics in Business Monitor MA4, "Overseas Direct Investment". Information on portfolio investment, broken down by country, is not available.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if a claimant issued with jobseeker's direction to attend an employment or training programme will suffer benefit sanction if (a) he leaves the programme early and (b) is asked to leave by reason of misconduct. [27104]

Mr. Forth [holding answer 29 April 1996]: The only employment programmes and training schemes in connection with which claimants will normally receive a benefit sanction if they leave early without good cause or as a result of misconduct will be those prescribed for the purposes of section 19 of the Jobseeekers Act 1995. These are jobplan workshops, 1-2-1, workwise, restart courses and, in two pilot areas, project work. However, it may on occasion be appropriate to give an individual a jobseeker's direction to take up a place on a non-prescribed programme to which sanctions will not normally be applicable. Such a direction would be given only if it were reasonable in the jobseeker's circumstances, if it were given with a view to assisting him to find employment or improving his prospects of being employed, and if other prescribed employment programmes and training programmes were not appropriate. Whether such a claimant received a benefit sanction if he left the programme early or through misconduct, having been directed to attend, would depend on the specific terms of the direction.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the number of local education authorities which (a) will and (b) will not benefit in (i) financial and (ii) qualitative terms in respect of nursery education from her nursery voucher proposals. [26422]

Mr. Robin Squire: All local education authorities have the opportunity to benefit from extra funding via the nursery education voucher scheme if more four year-olds attend their schools or attend for more terms before compulsory school age; and all LEAs have the opportunity to build upon existing good practice and raise standards in the context of the desirable outcomes for children's learning developed by the School Curriculum Assessment Authority.

Postgraduate Bursary and Studentship Rates

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will announce the postgraduate bursary and studentship rates for the academic year 1996–97. [27707]

Mr. Forth: The main maintenance rates under the Department's own postgraduate awards scheme for certain professional and vocational courses in the academic year 1996–97 will be as follows (1995–96 rates are shown in brackets):

	1996–97 £
Bursaries
London	3,460 (3,375)
Elsewhere	2,735 (2,665)
Parental home	2,065 (2,015)
Studentships
London	5,845 (5,695)
Elsewhere	4,645 (4,525)
Parental Home	3,420 (3,335)

These represent increases of 2.6 per cent. on the current year's rates. The relevant supplementary allowances will be increased broadly in line.

Investors in People

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many small firms (a) are currently participating in investors in people and (b) have achieved the standard (i) in total and (ii) in each parliamentary constituency. [27008]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 29 April 1996]: At 29 February 1996, a total of 13,987 small firms in the UK—that is those employing fewer than 200 employees—had made a formal commitment to achieve the investors in people standard; 2,385 small firms are already recognised as having achieved the standard. This gives a total of 16,372 small firms participating in investors in people.

A breakdown of the figures by parliamentary constituency is not available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, a regional breakdown is provided in the following table:

Investors in People Commitments and Recognitions in Small Firms (organisations with fewer than 200 employees)

Region	Commitments	Recognitions
East Midlands	1,315	150
Eastern	1,248	110
London	1,926	142
Merseyside	424	102
North West	1,923	246
Northern	472	126
South East	1,837	219
South West	1,280	380
West Midlands	1,305	252
Yorkshire and Humberside	1,089	217
Wales	633	145
Scotland	457	203
Northern Ireland	61	25

Dental Services

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what steps are being taken by her Department to develop postgraduate training and continuing medical education in dentistry; and if she will make a statement. [26992]

Mr. Malone: I have been asked to reply.

Since October 1993, it has been a requirement that all new graduates who wish to enter the general dental services take part in one year's vocational training. The continuing professional development of the 18,500 dentists who provide general dental services is organised by dental postgraduate deans and directors. Subject to certain conditions, GDS dentists who attend courses approved by postgraduate deans and directors may claim a postgraduate education allowance for up to two courses per financial year.

TRANSPORT

Shipping (English Language)

Mr. Peter Robinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what factors underlay his decision not to require that passenger and freight ships operating in British waters should use English as a single designated working language. [26296]

Mr. Norris: Our legislation requires that crews on passenger ships on domestic services understand English or that there are adequate arrangements for transmitting orders in a language they understand. Further legislation is being considered, for all UK ships and all other passenger ships operating to or from the UK, requiring effective oral communication between all crew members and adequate means of communication, in the English language, between the ship and shore-based authorities. The ability of crew members to communicate effectively with each other is already monitored by the Marine Safety Agency.

Many ships which operate in UK waters do not call at UK ports, and international action is, therefore, also needed. The revised international convention on standards of training, certification and watchkeeping for seafarers, which will be implemented by 1 February 1997, builds on existing international standards and requires every master, mate and officer in charge of watchkeeping on a vessel of 500 gross tonnes and over to have an adequate knowledge of the English language to communicate with other ships and with coast stations.

Aviation Standards

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the countries that have been visited by (a) his Department and (b) the Civil Aviation Authority to assess that country's compliance with International Civil Aviation Organisation standards; and if he will make a statement. [26753]

Mr. Norris: At the Department's request, the CAA visited Belgrade in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia in 1995 and Bulgaria earlier this year. We have increased the Department's budget to allow for about three such visits this financial year.

Visits to assess compliance with International Civil Aviation Organisation—ICAO—standards can be arranged only with the agreement of the foreign aviation authority concerned. The need for the UK to arrange such a visit will depend on whether assessments have been, or are being, undertaken in the country concerned by other organisations, such as the Joint Aviation Authorities. In addition, ICAO, has recently launched its own assessment programme. The Department is paying for CAA inspectors to join ICAO teams to visit a number of countries later this year; the details have yet to be finalised.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of inspections which have been undertaken by the Civil Aviation Authority in (a) Jamaica, (b) Colombia, (c) Dominican Republic, (d) Gambia, (e) Peru, (f) Philippines, (g) Poland, (h) Swaziland, (i) Trinidad and Tobago, (j) Turkey, (k) Uruguay, (l) Venezuela, (m) Zaire and (n) Zimbabwe. [26752]

Mr. Norris: None.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the United Kingdom airports serviced by airlines flying to or from (a) Jamaica, (b) Colombia, (c) the Dominican Republic, (d) Gambia, (e) Peru, (f) the Philippines, (g) Poland, (h) Swaziland, (i) Trinidad and Tobago, (j) Turkey, (k) Uruguay, (l) Venezuela, (m) Zaire and (n) Zimbabwe. [26752]

Mr. Norris: The United Kingdom airports currently serviced by airlines flying to or from those countries are listed in the table. In addition, charter services may operate from UK airports to those countries on an ad-hoc basis, as and when applications are made.

(a) Jamaica

London Heathrow (Air Jamaica), London Gatwick (British Airways)

(b) Colombia

London Heathrow (British Airways)

(c) The Dominican Republic

None

(d) Gambia

None

(e) Peru

None

(f) the Philippines

London Heathrow (British Airways), London Gatwick (Philippine Airlines)

(g) Poland

London Heathrow (British Airways, British Midland and LOT Polish Airlines)

(h) Swaziland

None

(i) Trinidad and Tobago

London Heathrow (BWIA, British West Indies Airways)

(j) Turkey

London Heathrow (British Airways and THY Turkish Airlines), London Gatwick (British Airways), London Stansted (THY Turkish Airlines)

(k) Uruguay

None

(l) Venezuela

London Heathrow (British Airways and Viasa)

(m) Zaire

None

(n) Zimbabwe

London Gatwick (British Airways and Air Zimbabwe).

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the consultations being undertaken by (a) his Department and (b) the CAA with (i) Jamaica, (ii) Colombia, (iii) the Dominican Republic, (iv) Gambia, (v) Peru, (vi) the Phillippines, (vii) Poland, (viii) Swaziland, (ix) Trinidad and Tobago, (x) Turkey, (xi) Uruguay, (xii) Venezuela, (xiii) Zaire and (xiv) Zimbabwe concerning the commencement or increase in flights to and from the United Kingdom. [26751]

Mr. Norris: Air service negotiations undertaken by the Department of Transport with these countries are listed in the table. A representative from the CAA is usually present at such negotiations.

(i) Jamaica

Negotiations were held on 24 to 26 January 1996 and it is expected that a further round will be held later this year.

(ii) Colombia

Negotiations were held in September 1995. No talks are currently planned.

(iii) The Dominican Republic

Negotiations were held in 1951. No talks are currently planned.

(iv) Gambia

Negotiations were held in February 1992. No talks are currently planned.

(v) Peru

Negotiations were held in 1969. No talks are currently planned.

(vi) the Philippines

Negotiations were held on 7 to 8 March 1996 and it is anticipated that a further round will be held later this year.

(vii) Poland

Negotiations were held in January 1995. No talks are currently planned.

(viii) Swaziland

We have no record of negotiations with Swaziland and none are currently planned.

(ix) Trinidad and Tobago

Negotiations were held in December 1987. No talks are currently planned.

(x) Turkey

Negotiations were held in June 1992. No talks are currently planned.

(xi) Uruguay

Negotiations were held in 1970. No talks are currently planned.

(xii) Venezuela

Negotiations were held in March 1992. No talks are currently planned.

(xiii) Zaire

Negotiations were held in 1974. No talks are currently planned.

(xiv) Zimbabwe

Negotiations were held in July 1989. No talks are currently planned.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to introduce an inspection system of auditing a country's aviation infrastructure similar to that operated by the US Federal Aviation Authority. [26759]

Mr. Norris: My reply to the hon. Lady on 7 March 1996, Official Report, column 309, set out our procedures for checking that foreign aircraft operating in the UK comply with international safety standards set by the International Civil Aviation Organisation.

In addition, we are participating in the safety oversight programme established by the International Civil Aviation Organisation, and in discussions on possible actions to be taken by the European Civil Aviation Conference and the EC.

In some circumstances, the Civil Aviation Authority is prepared to audit overseas regulatory authorities outside the framework of international programmes.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the revenue spending estimated by his Department in connection with the private finance initiative for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26623]

Mr. Watts: Revenue spending by my Department in connection with the private finance initiative for the years in question is estimated at roundly: (a) zero, (b) £50 million, and (c) £160 million.

Newbury Bypass

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the road-building contractors will meet the costs of security for the work carried out on the Newbury bypass; and if the Government will take into account the cost of security for road-building projects when considering other road schemes in the future. [26797]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Laurie Haynes to Mr. Graham Allen, dated 30 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question asking if the road building contractors will meet the costs of security for the work carried out on the Newbury Bypass; and if the Government will take into account the cost of security for road building projects when considering other road schemes in the future.

Under the terms of the contract, the cost of security on this scheme will be borne by the Agency.

With regard to the second part of your question, the Department's standard scheme appraisal methods (principally COBA) take into account all expenditure incurred as a result of a decision to go ahead with a scheme. Thus, the costs of normal security precautions (to protect contractors' equipment for example), are already included. Where it is apparent that exceptional security measures are likely to be required, estimates of these costs will be made and taken into account in future studies.

Railway Rolling Stock

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the average age of railway rolling stock in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) France in 1993. [26972]

Mr. Watts: This information is not available.

A40 Gloucestershire

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve the bridge on the A40 trunk road in Cheltenham near the junction of Lansdown road and Gloucester road; and if he will make a statement. [27059]

Mr. Watts: The existing brickwork parapets on the Lansdown road bridge do not comply with modern standards. It is proposed that they be upgraded and at the same time the bridge be widened to accommodate a shared cycle and pedestrian facility on the south side and a segregated facility on the north side. The provision for cyclists will form part of the Tennyson road to Shelburne road facility.

The timing of construction will depend upon the availability of funds.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received concerning improvements to the A40 trunk road between Cheltenham and Gloucester; what estimate he has made of the cost of each improvement scheme; in what order of priority he has placed each scheme; what plans he has to implement the improvements before detrunking this part of the A40; and if he will make a statement. [27060]

Mr. Watts: Gloucestershire county council has asked the Highways Agency to fund the following schemes on the A40 through Cheltenham before the road is detrunked. The schemes are listed in priority order.

(1) Lansdown road railway bridge—Parapet strengthening and widening to cater for pedestrians and cyclists. (Cost £860,000).

(2) Tennyson road to Shelburne road cycleway—Provision of a cycle track and footway along the northern side of the A40. The scheme has been the subject of public consultation. (Cost £120,000).

(3) Old Bath road/Sandford road—Provision of a roundabout. (Cost £44,000).

(4) Gordon lamp junction improvement—Scheme has been progressed to tender document stage. (Cost £9,000).

(5) Lansdown road/Lansdown walk junction—Closure of the side road. (Cost £5,600).

(6) West Green—Signing improvements, completed in 1995–96. (Cost £2,000).

Gloucestershire county council has also asked for certain maintenance works to be carried out on the A40.

The Highways Agency is close to finalising agreement with Gloucestershire county council on the package of works related to the detrunking of the A40, subject to satisfactory completion of the statutory procedures.

We expect to publish draft orders this summer.

Aircraft Leasing

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list, by grade, the number of staff employed (a) in his Department and (b) in the Civil Aviation Authority who have responsibility for administering the requests for leasing of aircraft. [26913]

Mr. Norris: Four administrative officers in the Department's international aviation negotiations directorate have day-to-day responsibility for processing aircraft leasing applications as part of their duties. However, more senior officers in the directorate give final approval.

The economic regulation group of the CAA advises the Department on all lease applications except for substitution flights. This accounts for a small proportion of the overall work of three staff graded JMG1, JMG4 and JMG7.

The safety regulation group of the CAA is responsible for issuing safety approval for leased aircraft. Administering lease applications involves two staff, one leasing co-ordinator and one assistant leasing co-ordinator.

Aircraft Operating Licences

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which airlines are licensed to operate in or out of the United Kingdom, together with their country of registration. [26905]

Mr. Norris: The airlines that have seasonal permits for summer 1996 to operate scheduled and charter services to the United Kingdom are listed, by geographical region. In addition, ad hoc charters may be given permission as and when applications are made. Airlines from the European Economic Area countries are able to operate into the UK without a permit for services operated in accordance with the EC third aviation package. Therefore, only those EEA airlines with permits from the Department for services which are outside the scope of EC regulations are included in the list.

Road Congestion

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if his Department will publish the report on congestion on the trunk road network. [27402]

Mr. Watts: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 26 February, column 340, my hon. Friend the Member for Bournemouth, West (Mr. Butterfill).

Transport Strategy (London)

Mr. Carrington: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he proposes to publish a statement on his transport strategy for London. [27770]

Mr. Norris: I have today placed in the Library of the House copies of "A Transport Strategy for London". In this document, we set out our overall objectives for transport in London and an integrated strategy to achieve them.

Performance Targets

Mr. John Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what targets he has set for the executive agencies in his Department. [27767]

Sir George Young: The following key targets have been set for the Department of Transport's executive agencies. The targets are set out in the agencies' business plans, which also include management objectives, performance indicators and key tasks, where appropriate to the agencies' businesses. Copies of the business plans are placed in the Library.

The key targets for the Coastguard Agency are to:

discharge the Secretary of State's responsibility for maritime search and rescue, through its own or dedicated assets by:

maintaining a 24 hours search and rescue—SAR—co-ordinating capability within, and including the coasts and shoreline of, the UK search and rescue region;

maintaining a comprehensive radio reception and transmission coverage of the UKSAR which enables SAR co-ordination action for the duration of incidents without interruption or equipment malfunction; testing contingency plans for major maritime SAR incidents, particularly those involving passenger carrying vessels/merchant shipping and the offshore oil/gas industry by undertaking six major live exercises and 35 seminars.

consider how the upward trend in SAR incidents might be arrested and reversed and to report to the Department by December 1996, meanwhile implementing a strategy designed to promote sea and shore safety awareness.

implement ministerial decisions following the interdepartmental review on SAR helicopter coverage.

maintain a fully operational 24 hours channel navigation information service (CNIS) covering the Dover strait traffic separation scheme (TSS), in concert with the appropriate French authorities.

discharge the Secretary of State's responsibility for dealing with marine pollution by the maintenance of a national contingency plan and in particular;

activate the plan within 30 minutes of notification of an incident; and commence action at sea to deal with a spill of dispersible oil within four hours of notification of an incident; testing the effectiveness of the plan by undertaking a major exercise and to report on the outcome by 31 March 1997.

carry out a minimum of 625 hours a year aerial surveillance of the sea area for which the UK has responsibility to detect or deter incidents of marine pollution, including illegal discharges from ships.

discharge the agency's functions while remaining within its 1966–97 running costs budget.

implement phase 1 of the proposed reorganisation of the HMCG operational structure "Focus for Change" by 31 March 1997.

The key targets for the Driving Standards Agency are to:

achieve unit costs not exceeding £28.30 for car practical tests, and not exceeding £15.00 for theory tests.

achieve a national average waiting time for car tests of nine weeks between April and September 1996 and six weeks between October 1996 and March 1997, and for appointments to be available within 10 weeks at 90 per cent. of permanent test centres between April and September 1996 and 99 per cent. of centres between October 1996 and March 1997.

ensure that appointments cancelled by DSA less than two days before the date of a test average 1 per cent. between April and September 1996, and average no more than 0.5 per cent. of appointments between October 1996 and March 1997.

answer 90 per cent. of telephone calls to booking offices within 60 second between April and September 1996. From October 1996 to March 1997 the target will be to ensure that:

four out of five calls will be answered on their first dialling attempt;

90 per cent. of calls which have been answered by an automatic system will then be answered by a human voice within 30 seconds; and an average of no more than 5 per cent. of calls in the queue will be abandoned before being answered.

Ensure that the theory test contractor has created the required density of test venues and frequency of test sessions in line with the services specification by 1 July 1996, and that theory tests are available to the public from that date.

The key targets for the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency are to:

make an efficiency gain—on the basis of an overall efficiency index—of 2.4 per cent.

complete successfully 495,000 vehicle excise duty enforcement cases by imposition of penalties and to recover, through penalties and duty from licensing, at least £2.80 for every £1 full cost spent by DVLA on vehicle excise duty enforcement.

deliver 95 per cent. of ordinary driving licences to customers within 11 working days, 95 per cent. of vocational driving licences within 10 working days, and 95 per cent. of first provisional driving licences within nine working days.

deliver 95 per cent. of registration documents for new vehicles within 12 days, and 95 per cent. of changes to vehicle registration documents within 13 days.

deliver answers to 95 per cent. of written inquiries within eight working days, and answer 90 per cent. of telephone inquiries within 30 seconds.

ensure that at least 97 per cent. of driving licences, 98 per cent. of registration documents for new vehicles, and 96 per cent. of changes to registration documents, are issued without a DVLA-induced error.

The key targets for the Highways Agency are to:

achieve 80 per cent. of the national schemes milestones and design, build, finance and operate tender invitations and contract awards listed in annex D to the business plan, or other milestones as may be substituted or added by Ministers.

maintain the trunk road network cost effectively by undertaking a programme of capital maintenance aimed at ensuring that the percentage of the trunk road network past the critical condition remains at 7 to 8 per cent. by 2000, with the minimum disruption to traffic, and ensuring that roads are safe, reliable, and offer an acceptable quality of ride; and to ensure that from 1 January 1999, all vehicles up to and including the new 40-tonne maximum gross vehicle weight standard can use all structures supporting trunk roads and other important routes over trunk roads by completing in 1996–97:

the renewal of 50 nearside lane kilometres (nlks) of motorway and 80 nlks of all purpose trunk road; and assessments of the structural capacity of 670 structures and completing the strengthening of 17 structures network management and maintenance division.

contribute to the Government's target of reducing road casualties by one third by 2000 (compared to the annual average for 1981–1985) by limiting accident rates between 1996 and 1998 on the motorways and all-purpose trunk road network to 21 accidents involving personal injury for every 100 million vehicle kilometres of travel.

develop and agree, with the Central Transport Group, systems for monitoring congestion on motorways and high standard all-purpose trunk roads by 31 December 1996.

publish, as part of the agency's annual report, a report covering:

environmental aspects of new schemes, and network management and maintenance activities, demonstrating that the agency has given full weight to environmental issues in carrying out its function and has struck a balance according;

the agency's contribution to the follow-up to "Transport: the Way Ahead"; and the measures taken by the agency to contribute to the implementation of the Government's air quality strategy.

improve the effectiveness of the agency by:

developing an aggregate unit cost indicator (formula) embracing the full range of the agency's outputs, but with inputs limited initially to administration and preparation and supervision costs;

determining and agreeing with the Central Transport Group by 30 September 1996, the values of that indicator for 1995–96 (to be based on 1995–96 outturn) and for 1996–97 (to be based on 1996–97 business plan budgets and targets); and to perform, in outturn, no worse than the agreed ratio.

Applications to the National Roads Scheme Committee in 1996–97, to increase the cost of schemes are not to exceed 2 per cent. of the total programme value.

The key targets for the Marine Safety Agency are to:

implement the international safety management code for ro-ro ferries by 1 July 1996.

report to shipping policy by 31 October 1996 with proposals to implement, for ro-ro passenger ships operating to and from UK ports, the relevant amendments to the safety of life at sea convention and the regional agreement on the application of higher stability standards.

complete all necessary work by 31 March 1997 to implement the under 12 m fishing vessel safety code.

agree with shipping policy, by 31 May 1996, a programme of implementation for the Government's initiative on reducing illegal discharge of wastes from ships and review the waste reception facility provision for marine pollutants from ships in UK ports by 31 December 1996.

make arrangements for the implementation of the revised standards of training, certification and watchkeeping convention by 1 February 1997 taking account of deregulation and the introduction of vocational qualifications.

complete the work on the consolidation of existing secondary legislation resulting from the MSA deregulation review by 30 September 1996.

inspect between 25 and 30 per cent. of foreign flagged vessels using UK ports including ro-ro ferries and fish factory ships.

achieve an average output of survey and inspection work per marine office surveyor of 3 per cent. greater than the outturn for 1995–96, while delivering the planned programme of surveys and inspections.

discharge the agency's functions while remaining within its 1996–97 running costs budget.

The key targets for the Vehicle Inspectorate are to:

meet the requirements on level and types of activity laid down in the memorandum of agreement on each scheme.

distribute its resources between each activity so as to achieve at least the minimum number of road safety/environment values laid down for the roadworthiness and MOT schemes and to increase the number of HGV designated premises.

meet the quality and general effectiveness levels as specified in the business plan measures set for 1996–97.

implement a system of annual surveys and/or structured interviews to be carried out with all principal customers and evaluated to determine score as the basis of measuring future improvement in performance.

achieve an aggregated cost efficiency index outturn of +3 per cent.

break even while achieving an average 6 per cent. real rate of return on capital, over the period 1 April 1991 to 31 March 1998.

secure the long-term development of the organisation through working for the investors in people award, achieving 70 per cent. of the assessment indicators set out in the standards of the investors in people award and through implementing the three elements of the IS strategy defined in the business plan measures for 1996–97.

The key targets for the Vehicle Certification Agency are to:

achieve a net unit cost target of £78.86.

issue at least 98 per cent. of approval certificates error free.

issue at least 97 per cent. of invoices error free.

issue corrected documents where errors do occur within three working days in 95 per cent. of cases involving certificates and in 90 per cent. of cases involving invoices.

audit at least 75 per cent. of the agency's approved quality procedures.

receive a satisfactory appraisal report from the Department's chief mechanical engineer.

Hackney Council

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next plans to visit Hackney council to discuss transport policy. [25681]

Mr. Norris: My right hon. Friend has no plans to visit Hackney council.

Sea Empress Oil Spill

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the chief inspector of the marine accidents investigation branch intends to interview the right hon. Members for Peterborough (Dr. Mawhinney), for South Norfolk (Mr. MacGregor) and for Ealing, Acton (Sir G. Young) and Lord Goschen in connection with his investigation into the Sea Empress disaster. [27185]

Mr. Norris: The question of who MAIB inspectors should interview, and when, in the course of any investigation is a matter for the chief inspector of marine accidents.

Esso Mersey Explosion

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what steps were taken by the marine accidents investigation branch to contact Mill Bay Engineering concerning the inquiry into the explosion on board the Esso Mersey on 4 September 1991. [27184]

Mr. Norris: The marine accidents investigation branch has been in correspondence with Mill Bay Engineering Co. Ltd. on a regular basis in connection with the Esso Mersey investigation since 1993. The investigation was re-opened in September 1994 after the emergence of new evidence. Mill Bay Engineering Co. Ltd. was sent an advance copy of the report of the re-opened investigation in accordance with section 9(4) of the Merchant Shipping (Accident Reporting and Investigation) Regulations 1994.

Marine Accidents Investigation Branch Reports

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the usual procedure for submitting draft reports of the marine accidents investigation branch to those individuals and organisations that are referred to or criticised in marine accidents investigation branch reports. [27186]

Mr. Norris: The procedures for submitting draft reports of inspector's inquiries undertaken by the marine accidents investigation branch to individuals and organisations which are criticised in them are governed by regulations 9(4) of the Merchant Shipping (Accident Reporting and Investigation) Regulations 1994. There is no requirement relating to those who are only referred to in reports.

The regulations require that if, in the opinion of the chief inspector of marine accidents, the reputation of any person is likely to be adversely affected by the report, that person shall be served with a copy of the draft report or that part which affects him. That person is allowed a 28-day period to make representations to the chief inspector who must then consider the representations and notify the person(s) concerned of his conclusions and any changes he intends to make to the report. A further 28-day period is then allowed for the submission of alternative text by the person(s) where passages remain in dispute. Where alternative texts have been submitted, these are to be published as an appendix to the report unless the Secretary of State considers that there is good reason not to do so.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Social Security Agency

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what performance targets have been set for the Social Security Agency for the current financial year. [27710]

Mr. Moss: The targets are included in the agency's 1996–97 business plan, which was published today. A copy of the plan will be placed in the Library. The targets are in line with the Government's policy of improving the service provided to customers and fully support the standards established in the Northern Ireland citizens charter. I am satisfied that the targets present a demanding challenge for the agency. They are as follows:

1. Benefit Clearance Times[1]

Social fund crisis loans

On the day the need arises[2]

Income support

71 per cent. in five days

90 per cent. in 13 days

Incapacity benefit

65 per cent. in 10 days

85 per cent. in 30 days

Child benefit

68 per cent. in 10 days

94 per cent. in 30 days

Family credit

60 per cent. in 13 days

95 per cent. in 42 days

Disability living allowance

65 per cent. in 30 days

85 per cent. in 53 days

Unemployment benefit

75 per cent. in 12 days

85 per cent. in 53 days

2. BENEFIT ACCURACY

Income support

to pay the correct amount in at least 87 per cent. of cases

Incapacity benefit

to pay the correct amount in at least 94 per cent. of cases

Child benefit

to pay the correct amount in at least 98 per cent. of cases

Family credit

to pay the correct amount in at least 93 per cent. of cases

Disability living allowance

to pay the correct amount in at least 98 per cent. of cases

Unemployment benefit

to pay the correct amount in at least 97 per cent. of cases

3. CUSTOMER SATISFACTION

[3]90 per cent. of customers to regard the agency's service as satisfactory or better

4. FINANCIAL RECOVERY

recovery of social fund loans—£23.06 million

recovery of income support overpayments—£1.80 million recovery of centralised benefits overpayments—£0.46 million benefit savings from detection and prevention of fraud—£14 million sign-offs as a result of anti-fraud activity—4,000[4] to carry out 3,000 national insurance contributions surveys, including 600 employer educational visits identify £1.50 million class 1 arrears as a result of compliance work

recovery of social fund loans—£23.06 million

5. RESOURCE MANAGEMENT to live within a gross allocation of £36.61 million for social fund loans and community care grants to live within the agency's gross budget allocation to achieve cash efficiency savings of the order of £5.5 million

Notes

[1] In all cases, clearance time is measured from the date of receipt of a claim or application in the office to the date on which the claim or application is decided. The measure, therefore, excludes the time taken to issue notification of the decision and any payment.

[2] Monitored against 95 per cent. in one day.

[3] The customer satisfaction target covers a two-year period and will be measured by independent survey in 1996–97.

[4] New target.

Free Bus Passes

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the annual cost of free bus passes in each education and library board area in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [26594]

Mr. Ancram: The annual cost of concessionary tickets for use on public transport to each education and library board in the last five years is set out in the following table:

Expenditure £000

	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
Belfast	598	750	851	935	984
North-eastern	4,722	4,790	5,215	5,448	5,786
South-eastern	3,727	4,340	4,736	5,095	5,454
Southern	3,360	3,761	4,005	4,221	4,510
Western	1,894	2,544	3,009	3,040	3,144
Total	14,301	16,185	17,816	18,739	19,878

Pig Feed Plant, West Belfast

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement concerning the health implications of the blockage in the pig feed plant of Andrews Mill in west Belfast in February. [26541]

Mr. Moss: The problem was investigated by the Eastern health and social services board and Belfast city council environmental health department, who are satisfied that there are no health implications.

Local Government

Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps are currently being taken to revise and develop local government in Northern Ireland. [26542]

Mr. Ancram: Our aim is to strengthen democracy by returning more responsibility and accountability to locally elected representatives in Northern Ireland on a basis which is widely acceptable. The all-party negotiations commencing on 10 June offer an opportunity to move in this direction.

Prisons (Library Facilities)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what were the costs of providing library facilities broken down by (a) books and (b) other costs at (i) the Maze prison and (ii) Maghaberry prison, in each of the last five years. [26732]

Sir John Wheeler: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Prison Service under its chief executive, Mr. Alan Shannon. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Alan Shannon to Mr. Robert McCartney, dated 30 April 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the cost of providing library facilities at HMP Maze and HMP Maghaberry in each of the last 5 years.

The information is as follows:

	1991–92 £	1992–93 £	1993–94 £	1994–95 £	1995–96 £
HMP Maghaberry
Books	nil	nil	nil	nil	nil
Other costs	45,358	44,739	60,713	62,411	64,659
HMP Maze
Books	nil	nil	nil	nil	3,019
Other costs	48,628	53,012	59,086	61,942	63,798

The cost of books is normally met by the South Eastern Education & Library Board. The charge of £3,019 to the Prison Service in 1995/96 was to cover the replacement cost of stock damaged during a riot at Maze in March 1995.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people recruited to full-time membership of the RUC during the period 1 October 1995 to 31 March 1996 had previously served as members of (a) the RUC reserve (b) Her Majesty's armed forces. [26548]

Sir John Wheeler: Records for recruitment to the RUC regular force during the period 1 October 1995 to 31 March 1996 are as follows:

	Number
Recruits with previous RUCR full-time service only	28
Recruits with previous RUCR part-time service only	13
Recruits with both RUCR full-time and RUCR part-time service	4
Recruits with previous HM forces service only	6
Recruits with both HM forces and RUCR service	5
Recruits with no previous HM forces or RUCR service	55

Mr. Mallon: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were recruited to full-time membership of the RUC during the period 1 October 1995 to 31 March 1996. [26549]

Sir John Wheeler: The total number of people recruited to full-time membership of the RUC regular force during the period 1 October to 31 March 1996 was 111.

Health and Safety Agency

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money has been spent on the Health and Safety Agency for Northern Ireland in each year since 1990–91. [26221]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 April 1996]: The Department of Economic Development has funded the Health and Safety Agency for Northern Ireland in accordance with the following table:

Financial year	Amount of funding £
1990–91	146,000
1991–92	165,500
1992–93	173,000
1993–94	222,000
1994–95	261,000
1995–96	314,000

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Procedural Changes

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Lord President of the Council what representations urging procedural changes he has received since publication of the Scott report. [24703]

Mr. Newton: The Government deposited in the Library of the House on 25 March 1996 a document entitled "The Timetable for Taking Forward Recommendations of the Report of the Inquiry into the Export of Defence Equipment and Dual-Use Goods to Iraq and Related Prosecutions". As this document indicates, the Government are currently inviting comments on a range of the issues covered by the Scott report, and a number of representations have now been received. These will be given careful consideration and changes to current Government procedures will be made where there would be benefit in doing so. If any such changes have implications for House of Commons procedures, these too would of course be considered in the appropriate way.

Northern Ireland Legislative Committees

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Lord President of the Council which hon. Members representing Northern Ireland constituencies have been appointed since January 1995 to Standing Committees on delegated legislation nominated to consider Northern Ireland Orders in Council. [25768]

Mr. Newton: The following Northern Ireland Members have been appointed to Delegated Legislation Committees relating to NI orders:

Member	Dates
	Appointed	Attended
Beggs, Mr. Roy	7 June 1995	7 June 1995
	7 December 1995	7 December 1995
	7 January 1996	17 January 1996
Forsythe, Mr. Clifford	17 October 1995	17 October 1995
	31 October 1995	31 October 1995
Hendron, Dr. Joe	—	—
Hume, Mr. John	—	—
McCartney, Mr. Robert	—	—
McCrea, Rev. William	—	—
McGrady, Mr. Eddie	—	—
Maginnis, Mr. Ken	16 February 1995	16 February 1995

Taylor, Mr. John D.	7 February 1996	7 February 1996
Trimble, Mr. David	4 July 1995	4 July 1995
Walker, Mr. A. Cecil	—	—

The right hon. Member for Lagan Valley (Sir J. Molyneaux) was appointed to the Chairmen's Panel this Session, but this has not been reflected in the table.

SCOTLAND

Machine Guns

Mr. George Robertson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the number of exemptions under the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1994 in respect of machine guns in each of the last five years; and apart from royal ordnance, what is the total number of machine guns covered by these exemptions. [26428]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: There are no exemptions under the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1994.

Judicial Statistics

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will publish the civil judicial statistics relating to the Scottish courts for the years 1994 and 1995. [26965]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The statistics for 1994 will be published shortly; those for 1995 are still in preparation.

Victoria Hospital, Glasgow

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 will apply in respect of staff at the Victoria hospital, Glasgow following the award of the contract in respect of support services. [27063]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This is a matter for the trust and the company winning the contract to consider with their legal advisers. In most cases where employment is transferred as a result of market testing, TUPE usually applies.

Cancer

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many registered cases of cancer there were in Scotland in (a) 1985, (b) 1989, (c) 1992 and (d) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [27030]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of registered cases of cancer—malignant neoplasms—in each of these years is as follows:

1985: 26,161

1989: 26,657

1992: 28,827

1995[1]: 21,997.

[1]1995 data not yet complete.

National Health Service Trusts

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list those core services which NHS trusts in Scotland may contract out through the competitive tendering process. [27048]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Since 1983, the Government's policy has been for domestic, cleaning, catering, laundry and similar non-core support services to be routinely market tested. It is for NHS trusts to decide which other services would benefit from being subjected to market testing in response to local circumstances, ensuring that the best quality health care and use of resources is achieved.

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many NHS trusts in Scotland have put support services out to competitive tender; and in how many of these cases an in-house tender was received. [27051]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: By 1991, virtually all hospital ancillary services in the NHS in Scotland had been put out to tender by health boards. As NHS trusts were established, the trust boards assumed responsibility for the management of the existing contracts and for the market testing of such other services as they considered appropriate. Comprehensive information on the number of in-house tenders received is not centrally available, but from a total of 410 contracts awarded following market testing since December 1987, 65 per cent. were won by in-house teams.

Male Rape

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many cases of male rape were reported in Scotland in (a) 1985 and (b) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [27013]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is not available in the form requested. The term "male rape" is not used in Scots law. The act which that term describes, namely non-consensual anal intercourse with a man, can be prosecuted in Scotland either as the common law crime of sodomy or as a statutory offence under section 13 of the Criminal Law (Consolidation) (Scotland) Act 1995, that is, commission of a homosexual act other than in private or without the consent of both parties or with a person under the age of 18.

It is not possible to identify within the statistics for the statutory offence those which would equate with the term "male rape". Figures for the number of allegations of the common law offence of sodomy reported to the police are not available, but figures for the number of prosecutions are available from 1988 onwards. In 1988 there were 11 such prosecutions and in 1994, the latest year for which such figures are available, there were 15 prosecutions.

Sheriff Court Fees Order

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to amend the Sheriff Court Fees Order to provide that no sheriff court dues shall be payable under the order for a party, who would otherwise be liable to pay, who is in receipt of income support under part VII of the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992. [26966]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend has no plans to extend current arrangements for exemption from court dues. The vast majority of people on income support will qualify for legal aid, which would include the payment of court fees.

Scottish Arts Council

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the future of the Scottish Arts Council arts collection. [27882]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: As part of the Scottish Arts Council's collecting initiative, one of the aims of which is to increase public access to works in its art collection, the council, with the agreement of the Treasury, will now begin to donate works from its collection to museums, galleries and other public bodies in Scotland for display to the public.

Pensions Agency

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what key performance targets he has set for the Scottish Office Pensions Agency for 1996–97. [27883]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I have set the Scottish Office Pensions Agency the following key targets for 1996–97, which cover important areas of service delivery and steps to improve efficiency and effectiveness:-

- to ensure that awards and transfer payments are accurate to within 1 per cent. of their value in 99 per cent. of cases;
- to pay on time 99 per cent. of all pensions and lump sums where the target date for receipt of claims is met;
- to make transfer payments within four weeks of members' final instructions to transfer pension rights;
- to analyse the results of a survey to measure customer satisfaction with administration of the teachers' pension scheme and produce an action plan, by December 1996;
- to complete the development and implementation of a new pensions administration IT system, by December 1996;
- to reduce total identified operating costs per member/beneficiary by 8 per cent.;
- to amend all schemes for which SOPA is responsible to take account of the Pensions Act 1995.

Hospital Consultants

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many vacancies for consultants there are in each NHS trust hospital in Scotland; what discussions he has had with the medical profession with respect to these vacancies; and what steps he has taken to overcome the shortage. [27239]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 29 April 1996]: The information requested is shown at NHS trust level in the table. Data are not collected centrally for individual hospitals. My right hon. Friend met representatives of the medical profession in September 1995 and discussed medical work force issues generally. To increase the number of candidates for consultant posts, we have continued to increase the number of doctors in higher training.

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received on the shortage of consultants in NHS trust hospitals in Scotland; and if he will make a statement. [27238]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 29 April 1996]: My right hon. Friend has received various representations on medical work force issues in Scotland. The number of hospital consultants in Scotland rose from 2,216 in 1990 to 2,490 in 1995, an increase of over 12 per cent.

Film Industry (Hydra Associates)

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when and by whom the decision was made to commission Hydra Associates to report on the film industry in Scotland. [27269]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 29 April 1996]: Hydra Associates was chosen from a short list of four consultants on 30 October 1995 by a panel consisting of representatives of Scottish Enterprise/Glasgow development agency, Highlands and Islands Enterprise and the Scottish Office.

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the remit for the report of Hydra Associates into the film industry in Scotland; and how much it cost. [27270]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 29 April 1996]: The Hydra Associates report "Scotland on Screen: the Development of the Film and Television Industry in Scotland", which was published on 18 April, cost £125,000. Its terms of reference are reproduced as appendix O of the report.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Parcelforce

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will review the procedures adopted by Parcelforce for dealing with complaints and claims for loss or damage to parcels posted to the United Kingdom from overseas. [23404]

Mr. Oppenheim: No, these procedures are an operational matter for Parcelforce. If the hon. Member has a particular complaint, he should contact the managing director of Parcelforce.

Land Mines

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what plans he has to ban the manufacture, export and supply of land mines by British companies, and when; [24997]

(2) if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy on the manufacture, supply and export of land mines. [24996]

Mr. Oppenheim: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by my hon. Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office to the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley) on 23 April 1996, Official Report, column 84.

British Energy

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will limit the extent to which pay for directors of British Energy can be increased after privatisation; [26621]

(2) what discussions have taken place between his Department and British Energy regarding directors' remuneration after privatisation; [26619]

(3) if he will list the share options and other bonuses available to directors of British Energy after privatisation; [26618]

(4) if he will name the top 10 paid employees of British Energy with their (a) pay and (b) other remuneration (i) currently and (ii) a year ago. [26620]

Mr. Lang: Policy on executive remuneration for the future will be given in the pathfinder prospectus for British Energy, to be published in the summer, and will include full details of current executive pay. The current basic annual salaries of the executive directors of British Energy plc are:

Dr. Robert Hawley (Chief Executive): £200,000

Mr. Michael Kirwan (Finance Director): £179,137 (inclusive of 14.1 per cent. contribution for personal pension)

Basic salaries paid to Dr. Hawley and Mr. Kirwan in 1995–96 were £190,485 and £171,496 respectively. The latter figure also includes 14.1 per cent. pension contribution. Full remuneration details in respect of 1995–96 for Dr. Hawley and Mr. Kirwan will be included in the annual report and accounts of Nuclear Electric plc.

Export Promotion

Mr. Harvey: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the revisions to his Department's objectives for export promotion since those listed in table 1.3 of "Overseas Trade Services: Assistance to Exporters a report by the Comptroller and Auditor General" (HC 293); and if he will make a statement. [26704]

Mr. Oppenheim: The revisions referred to by the Comptroller and Auditor General affect only the objectives of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. My Department's objectives for exports remain as listed in his report. I refer the hon. Member to the annual report of the Department of Trade and Industry, which is in the Library of the House.

Current Account Outturns

Mr. Shore: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the current account outturn of (a) the United Kingdom, (b) Germany and (c) France in each year since 1990; and what is the estimate of the current account outturns for each of these countries for 1996. [26887]

Mr. Oppenheim: Information on Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries' current account balances is published in "OECD Economic Outlook". The UK's current account balance for 1995 was published by the Office for National Statistics in "First Release CSO (96)68". Both of these publications are available in the Library of the House.

Coal Mining Areas Recreation Facilities

Mr. Pendry: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will list the sites in the British Coal recreational package which were intended to be transferred to the National Playing Fields Association and the Coal Industries Social Welfare Organisation together with the parliamentary constituency in which they lie; [27258]

(2) if he will list separately how many football, cricket, rugby and hockey pitches, bowling greens, tennis courts and children's play areas stand to be preserved within British Coal's recreational package; and what area of land each of these represents. [27257]

Mr. Page: These are matters for British Coal.

Certification Fees

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his reason for increasing the fee payable to the certification officer on application for approval of a proposed instrument of amalgamation or transfer of engagements. [27172]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The increase in fee is required to recover the full cost of providing a service to process applications for approval of proposed instruments.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his reason for increasing the fee payable by a trade union for a certificate of independence. [27171]

Mr. Taylor: The increase in fee is required to recover the full cost of providing a service to process applications for certificates. In 1993–94, when the fee covered just 10 per cent. of the full cost, the Government decided to move in stages to full cost recovery. The level of fee has subsequently risen in steps and 1996–97 will be the first year in which the full cost will be recovered.

British Telecommunications

Mr. Renton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the judgment of the Director General of Telecommunications in relation to the proposed pricing regime for British Telecommunications plc; and if he will make a statement. [27397]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Director General of Telecommunications has not yet made final proposals relating to the future price cap to be applied to BT's prices, so I am unable to comment on the judgment displayed by the outcome. I am, however, satisfied that the director general has conducted a full and wide-ranging consultation, taking comments from those in the industry as well as users, and seeking advice from a specially convened panel of advisors. The fullness of the consultation process is a sign that the outcome will be based on all relevant considerations, and will be consistent with liberalisation and competition, which have delivered lower prices and higher quality services to consumers.

Mercury

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total production of mercury in the United Kingdom; and how much mercury was (a) imported and (b) exported in the last year for which figures are available. [27401]

Mr. Oppenheim: There was no recorded primary or mine production of mercury within the United Kingdom in 1995. No statistics are available for secondary mercury production recovered from scrap. In 1995, 3.9 tonnes of mercury—£39,000 by value—was imported into the United Kingdom, and 224.3 tonnes of mercury—£108,000 by value—was exported from the United Kingdom.

Lead

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much lead was produced in the United Kingdom; and how much was (a) imported and (b) exported in the last year for which figures are available. [27399]

Mr. Oppenheim: Details of the quantities of production, imports and exports of unwrought lead in the United Kingdom in 1995 are given below.

United Kingdom lead production, exports and imports, 1995, (in thousand tonnes)

	Production	Exports	Imports
Ore/concentrates (lead content)	1.0	0.1	52.7
Lead bullion	38.3	55.8	121.1
Refined lead	317.7	76.2	45.8
of which—primary	150.2	—	—
—secondary	167.5	—	—

Note:
In the UK, lead bullion is produced from imported ores and concentrates. Primary refined lead is produced from imported bullion. Secondary production is refined from secondary and scrap material and domestic ores. Production and trade of semi-manufactures is excluded from the above figures.

Council for Science and Technology

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the members who serve on the Council for Science and Technology. [27180]

Mr. Ian Taylor: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade chairs the Council for Science and Technology on behalf of the Prime Minister. The chief scientific adviser, Sir Robert May, is deputy chairman, and I also attend. There are 10 independent members of the council:

Members
Professor S. Kumar Bhattacharyya FEng	Professor of Manufacturing Systems, University of Warwick
Professor Sir Aaron Kluge OM PRS	Director, Medical Research Council Laboratory of Molecular Biology; President of the Royal Society
Sir Robin Nicholson FRS FEng	Director, Pilkington plc
Dr. Bridget Ogilvie FIBiol FRCPath	Director, The Wellcome Trust
Sir Ralph Robins FEng FRAeS	Chairman, Rolls Royce plc
Dr. Alan Rudge CBE FRS FEng	Deputy Chief Executive, BT plc; Chairman, Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council
Professor Sir Stewart Sutherland FBA	Principal and Vice Chancellor, University of Edinburgh
Sir Richard Sykes	Deputy Chairman and Chief Executive, Glaxo Wellcome plc
Mr. John Towers CBE	Managing Director, Rover Group Ltd.
Dr. Peter Williams CBE	Chairman and Chief Executive, Oxford Instruments plc; Chairman, Particle Physics and Astronomy Research Council

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what dates the Council for Science and Technology has held meetings since it was set up; and what subjects were discussed at each of those meetings. [27182]

Mr. Taylor: The Council for Science and Technology has met, and discussed subjects, as follows:

Research Establishments (Redundancies)

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the redundancy costs associated with the future options being considered for each of the public sector research establishments. [27183]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The prior options reviews of public sector research establishments are being undertaken in accordance with the guidance placed in the Library of the House on 26 January 1996. This requires the Departments and research councils carrying out the reviews to consider a range of options, including abolition, privatisation, contractorisation, rationalisation and, implicitly, no change.

Ministers are currently considering the steering group reports of the first tranche of reviews. The overall purpose is to achieve high-quality research that represents the best value for money. Any potential redundancy costs would be taken into account in this consideration. Decisions will be announced as soon as possible.

EU Consumers Council

Mr. Waller: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the outcome of the EU Consumers Council held on 23 April. [27771]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The Council agreed on priorities for EU consumer policy. The agreement underlined the need for proper enforcement of existing legislation and, where possible, its review and simplification. Some member states also attached importance to work on consumer concerns in relation to public utilities, financial services and informative labelling of products.

The Council reached political agreement on a proposal for a directive on the indication of prices of products offered to consumers. This follows the Commission's commitment to review existing directives on subsidiarity grounds. The agreed proposal represents an important deregulatory measure which will permit member states to exempt small shops from the burden of unit pricing. It fully meets the UK objective of providing necessary protection for consumers while minimising the burden on small businesses.

There was an orientation debate on two proposals related to consumer access to justice. The first was the proposed action plan for non-legislative initiatives to enable cheaper and quicker redress for consumers involved in cross-border disputes. There was general support for the principle of this initiative, though more work would be needed on the details. Secondly, a directive was proposed to improve protection of consumers in cross-border transactions by co-ordinating national provisions relating to injunctions against unlawful practices under a list of existing directives. The proposal would secure mutual recognition of the entities qualified to bring such actions in other member states. Again, there was considerable support for the principle, though I and a number of other representatives made clear that it was based on the proviso that a method of implementation could be found which would respect national legal procedures and modalities of law enforcement.

There was an informal discussion of consumer confidence in relation to foodstuffs, particularly with regard to bovine spongiform encephalopathy—BSE. I set out the steps the United Kingdom Government had taken to protect consumers and explained why we regarded an export ban as unjustified and disproportionate.

Electricity Industry

Mr. Waller: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to liberalise the electricity regime. [27772]

Mr. Eggar: I propose to amend the provisions governing supply licence exemptions so as to enable local generators to offer their electricity to communities and to commercial and industrial customers without the additional burdens imposed by licences. This will put combined heat and power schemes and businesses who generate their own electricity predominantly for their own use in a better position to offer customers innovative alternatives to established suppliers.

On 1 April 1998, all customers of the public electricity suppliers will be able to choose their supplier. As we prepare for that new era of competition and choice, we need to ensure that local suppliers can also play their part by offering their services to small communities and local industry and commerce.

Following extensive consultation with the Director General of Electricity Supply, electricity companies, consumer groups, and other interested parties, we have reached preliminary conclusions on the strategic objectives which will be pursued in the drafting of a new Electricity (Class Exemptions from the Requirement for a Licence) Order.

I propose, first, to allow generators to supply on-site to any commercial or industrial customers, up to a maximum limit of 100MW on each site. Secondly, I propose that exempt on-site supply to domestic customers should be permitted, up to a maximum of 1MW on each site, subject to a maximum price to be set in the new exemptions order. Discussions are under way on a voluntary code of practice for those suppliers who will benefit from the exemptions, and who want to supply electricity to domestic customers. The new exemptions would be in addition to existing exemption for on-site suppliers.

It is proposed that the current geographical definitions of a site would be retained, with an additional alternative site definition based on local electricity networks, where the wires between the supplier and the customers are owned by either party, or by both jointly.

Other changes to the current order will reflect the need to remove distinctions between electricity from the public electricity suppliers and that from second tier suppliers after 1 April 1998 for the purposes of resale. No changes are envisaged to exemptions for electricity generators or offshore generators and suppliers.

As the process of drafting the new order progresses, further consideration will be given to whether any of the provisions should be brought into force before 1998.

These principles commanded widespread support in our public consultation at the beginning of the year. I believe that they should provide a balance between the need to encourage local community and industrial suppliers by reducing the regulatory burden on them, and the need to maintain the integrity of the integrated electricity network.

Exports (Iraq)

Mr. Waller: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what conditions apply to companies wishing to supply Iraq in respect of (a) humanitarian goods and (b) services. [27810]

Mr. Nelson: Discussions about the supply of humanitarian goods to Iraq after sanctions have been relaxed require a licence from my Department before they can take place. Applications for such licences will be considered according to the circumstances of each particular case. Discussions now about the provision of services to Iraq after sanctions have been relaxed would not require a licence unless those discussions also constituted an act calculated to promote the supply of goods to or from Iraq. Such acts require a licence and applications for licences are also considered according to the circumstances of each particular case.

Coal Reserves

Mr. Hardy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his present estimate of accessible and proven coal reserves in the United Kingdom; and what reduction of such reserves has been recorded following the loss of collieries over the last decade. [26359]

Mr. Page: The remaining reserves of coal at existing mines were estimated in 1994 to be around 1 billion tonnes. Comparable figures for subsequent or earlier years are not available.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what stocks of British coal were held by (a) British Coal and (b) the generating companies at the end of each quarter over the last five years; and what guidance he offers as to the level which should be maintained. [26374]

Mr. Page: Information on coal stocks is set out in the table.

Compliance Unit

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many staff are employed in the single market compliance unit. [27073]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 29 April 1996]: The single market compliance unit, which was relaunched as action single market on 28 March, has three full-time staff helping UK businesses overcome single market trade barriers. Action single market now incorporates work on tackling illegal state aids in other member states. It has two additional staff who spend part of their time on this, as well as dealing with more general state aids matters. Furthermore, action single market draws on a wider network of staff, including those in British embassies overseas, in assessing and pursuing complaints, involving senior officials and Ministers where the opportunity arises.

EU Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the directives which have affected his Department in each of the past three years and (a) the United Kingdom legislation introduced as a result of the directives, (b) the United Kingdom legislation which goes beyond the minimum standards set out in the directives and (c) the clauses within each piece of United Kingdom legislation which amplify the minimum standards set out in the directives. [27083]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 29 April 1996]: I have placed information on the directives and their implementing regulations, for which the DTI is responsible, in the Library of the House.

Technology Foresight

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much money has been allocated to the technology foresight programme; and over that time period. [27007]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 29 April 1996]: New initiatives worth £200 million over four years from public and private funding are already in place. This figure comprises £36 million to fund research equipment in foresight priority areas during 1996–97, £60 million for the foresight challenge extending over the next four years, and £70 million for new LINK programmes responding to foresight priorities. The balance is made up of new components of mainstream research programmes in research councils and Government Departments, such as 14 new Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council programmes for which £15 million of grants have been awarded, and the DTI's information society initiative—£35 million over four years—which addresses several priority areas identified in the foresight programme. I expect further initiatives to be reported.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Severe Disability Premium

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will list by local authority (a) the number of cases where arrears of severe disability premium have now been paid and (b) the average amount of the arrears paid by each authority; [20272]

(2) when the hon. Member for Burnley will receive an answer to his question of 8 March on cases of arrears of severe disability premiums. [27050]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Peter Pike, dated 29 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question of 8 March asking if he will list by Local Authority (LA), (a) the number of cases where arrears of severe disability premium (SDP) have now been paid; (b) the average amount of arrears paid by each authority; and your further question of 23 April.

I apologise for the delay in responding to your original question.

The information is not available in the format requested. Income Support (IS) statistics are collated by Benefit Agency (BA) Districts and not by LA areas. Statistics are not routinely collated on the number of IS awards which include premiums. This information could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

However a statistical sampling exercise was undertaken in 26 offices within 25 BA Districts. From this it is estimated that nationally arrears of SDP amounting to £88.67 million have been paid on approximately 24,000 cases with ongoing entitlement to IS.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the average length of time for (a) an incapacity benefit appeal submission to be sent to the independent tribunal service and (b) an incapacity benefit appeal to be heard; [25794]

(2) how many appeals against the disallowance of incapacity benefit are currently outstanding; [25796]

(3) how many incapacity benefit appeals have been heard, and how many were successful. [25793]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

Incapacity benefit appeals

	Figures
Average time between lodgement and submission to ITS	5 weeks
Average time between submission to ITS and hearing	12 weeks
Number outstanding	21,460
Number heard	4,906
Number of decisions in favour of appellant	2,270

1. Figures are to the end of February.
2. Figures are for all incapacity benefit appeals.

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (a) how many medical examinations for the all-work test of capacity have been scheduled but have not taken place, (b) how many examinations have been performed, (c) how many people have failed to attend an examination without good cause and (d) how many people have been found capable of work for (i) February and (ii) March 1996. [26341]

Mr. Burt: The available information is in the table.

	February 1996	March 1996
Examinations scheduled, but which did not take place[1]	25,143	23,624
Examinations performed	56,247	59,121
Failed to attend examination without good cause	413	472
Found capable of work[2]	14,289	15,490

[1] Excludes cases in which scheduled appointments were re-allocated following advance notice from a customer that he would be unable to attend.

[2] Includes cases found capable following failure to return the questionnaire without good cause or failure to attend examination without good cause.

Severe Weather Payments

Mr. Shore: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many households in the London borough of Tower Hamlets qualified for severe weather payments during the period 1 November 1995 to 1 April 1996; and on how many occasions. [26297]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of the social fund is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the right hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Peter Shore, dated 29 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many households in the London Borough of Tower Hamlets qualified for severe weather payments during the period 1st November 1995 to 1st April 1996; and on how many occasions.

The information is not available in the form you have requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

However I am able to provide you with the number of Cold Weather Payments (CWPs) made by each Benefits Agency (BA) District in your constituency, during the period 1 November 1995 and 1 April 1996. Statistics are kept for BA Districts and not for specific geographical areas. BA customers living in the London Borough of Tower Hamlets are dealt with by the City East District or Hackney and Islington District. Postal codes within the areas covered by these Districts are linked to the weather station at Heathrow Airport.

During the period 1 November 1995 to 1 April 1996, Heathrow Airport weather station identified one recorded period of cold weather from 24 December 1995 to 30 December 1995 inclusive.

The information available is shown in the attached Annex.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will provide a month-by-month breakdown of the number of temporary staff employed by the CSA at its Brierly Hill centre since the CSA was set up. [26447]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. John Heppell, dated 29 April 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency staffing.

The table attached shows a monthly breakdown of casual staff and also those appointed on fixed term contracts at the Agency's Brierley Hill Centre for the periodApril 1993 to March 1996 inclusive.

I hope this is helpful.

State Pensions

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a table indicating for each of the last 17 years (a) the level of the basic state pension, (b) average weekly earnings and (c) the percentage of average weekly earnings as represented by the basic state pension. [26816]

Mr. Heald: The available information is in the table. The information for April 1996 earnings is not yet available.

Date of uprating	Rate of basic retirement pension (£pw)	Average earnings[1] (£pw)	Rate as a percentage of average earnings

Disability Working Allowance

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 14 March, Official Report, column 760, what assumptions underlay the answer to the hon. Member for Exeter (Sir J. Hannam) of 5 March 1991, Official Report, columns, 693–94, concerning the impact of using the functional test for disability working allowance for initial claims where no qualifying benefit is in payment. [26365]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The written answer to which the hon. Member refers was given before the introduction of disability working allowance and, as stated, the estimates were tentative.

The estimates were based on data from the 1985 Office of Population Censuses and Suveys disability survey, which contains detailed information about individuals' disability and other characteristics. Using these data, it is possible to construct a scale of the severity of individuals' disability. The estimates assume that, in order to qualify for DWA, disabled people had to be above a certain threshold on this disability scale.

The estimates took account of two groups of potential DWA recipients: those currently in work who score above the threshold on the OPCS scale and are not in receipt of a qualifying benefit; and disabled people not currently in work or in receipt of a qualifying benefit who might be induced to go back to work. The estimates provided in 1991 also assumed, as did other estimates at the time, that the number induced to go back to work would be substantial in relation to those already in work.

It is not possible to produce revised estimates. The 1985 OPCS disability survey is still the most recent comprehensive survey of disabled peoples' characteristics, but the information about individuals' employment situation, earnings and benefit receipt is out of date and cannot now be used to produce reliable estimates of people who might qualify through a functional test but are not currently in receipt of a qualifying benefit. Any estimate of the size of a behavioural effect is speculative, and depends heavily on the state of the labour market and individuals' personal and other circumstances.

Disabled People (Incapacity for Work)

Mr. Bradley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people who (a) were previously claiming invalidity benefit, (b) have claimed incapacity benefit since April 1995, (c) receive severe disablement allowance, (d) receive the income support disability premium on incapacity grounds and (e) receive incapacity credits only, have been treated as incapable of work since April 1995 by virtue of (i) receipt of the highest rate of the disability living allowance care component, (ii) being aged over 58 years on 13 April 1995 and received an incapacity benefit between 1 December 1993 and 12 April 1995, (iii) suffering from a progressive disease, (iv) being registered blind, (v) tetraplegia, (vi) persistent vegetative state, (vii) dementia, (viii) paraplegia (ix) a severe learning disability, (x) a severe and progressive muscle-wasting disease, (xi) an active and progressive form of inflammatory polyarthritis, (xii) a progressive impairment of cardio-respiratory function, (xiii) dense paralysis of upper limb, trunk and lower limb on one side of the body, (xiv) multiple effects of impairment of function of brain or nervous system, (xv) a severe and progressive immune deficiency state and (xvi) a severe mental illness. [26726]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

We estimate that 738,000 people are not subject to the all-work test because they were aged 58 or over on 13 April 1995 and have been continuously in receipt of invalidity benefit since 1 December 1993.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his policy on extending exemption from the restrictions to housing benefit from October to all young people who have been looked after by local authorities and to whom local authorities have a duty to provide a service up to the age of at least 21 years, pursuant to section 24 of the Children Act 1989; and if he will make a statement. [27047]

Mr. Roger Evans: It would be unreasonable to expect the taxpayer to subsidise rents which are above those for the sort of accommodation which single young people expect to occupy where they meet rent from their own resources merely because a social service department owes duties under the Children Act. The arrangement whereby people aged under 22, who were previously subject to a care order, will be exempt from some housing benefit changes to be introduced in October, is a concession which recognises the particular vulnerability of young people for whom a court considers it necessary for a social service department to assume parental responsibility. Other young people will not be affected by the new arrangements if they live in exempt accommodation, including that provided by a housing association, voluntary body or registered charity where care, support or supervision is provided to the tenant by, or on behalf of, the landlord.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what advice he will give on obtaining housing for young people in housing need in Gloucestershire after the introduction of restrictions to housing benefit in October 1996; and if he will make a statement. [27043]

Mr. Evans: Housing benefit will remain available to help young single people in Gloucestershire and elsewhere meet the general level of rents for the sort of accommodation which they tend to occupy if they meet rent from their own resources. It would be unreasonable to expect the taxpayer to subsidise rents above this level. Young people will have access to a pre-tenancy determination to indicate the likely level of rent which would be used to assess benefit.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many young people aged at least 15 years, who were looked after by Gloucestershire's social services department in March 1996 but who were not subject to a care order, pursuant to section 31(1) (a) of the Children Act 1989, will not be exempt from the housing benefit restrictions for young people from October 1996, if they remain in the care system through and beyond their 16th birthdays; and if he will make a statement. [27045]

Mr. Evans: The information requested is not yet available.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of young people in Gloucestershire who will be in housing need in the county in the year following the introduction of restrictions to housing benefit in October 1996; and if he will make a statement. [27044]

Mr. Evans: The October 1996 housing benefit rules for single young people should not lead to housing need. Housing benefit will remain payable after that date based on rent levels for the sort of dwellings which young single people tend to occupy if they meet rent from their own resources. Local authorities will have discretion, and some additional funding, to pay higher levels of benefit to prevent exceptional hardship in individual cases.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his policy on exemption from the restrictions to housing benefit from October 1996 for those young people in contact with Barnados leaving care project in Gloucestershire, while looked after by Gloucestershire's social services department (a) who are subject to care orders under section 31(1)(a) of the Children Act 1989, and towards whom the local authority maintains duties until at least their 21st birthday, pursuant to section 24 of the said Act and (b) who are not subject to such care orders, but towards whom the local authority maintains duties until at least their 21st birthday; and if he will make a statement. [27046]

Mr. Evans: Young people who are "looked after" by social services departments cannot receive housing benefit if the terms by which they are provided with accommodation under the Children Act means that they cannot be liable to pay for it. Guidance covering this area will be issued shortly.

Children who cease to be "looked after" may be entitled to housing benefit if they become liable to pay for their dwelling. It would be unreasonable to expect the taxpayer to subsidise rents for single young people which are above the level for the sort of accommodation which they expect to occupy where they meet rent from their own resources simply because they were previously looked after, or assisted by, a social services department. The concession whereby people aged under 22 who were previously subject to a care order will be exempt from some housing benefit changes to be introduced in October recognises the particular vulnerability of young people for whom a court considers it necessary for a social services department to assume parental responsibility. Other young people will not be affected by the new arrangements if they live in exempt accommodation, including that provided by a housing association, voluntary body or registered charity where care, support or supervision is provided to the tenant by, or on behalf of, the landlord.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Chickens and Pigs

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what monitoring of his Department's Veterinary Laboratories Agency has carried out into the hormone residues in (a) pigs and (b) chickens with particular reference to strains of disease similar to bovine spongiform encephalopathy; what have been the results to date; and if he will make a statement; [24223]

(2) what monitoring his Department's Veterinary Laboratories Agency has carried out into the hormone residues in (a) chickens and (b) pigs which are used in the manufacture of pet foods with particular reference to strains of disease similar to bovine spongiform encephalopathy; what have been the results to date; and if he will make a statement; [24224]

Mrs. Browning: Certain residue testing has been carried out in pigs and chickens; no samples taken showed any residues above the action level. The testing for hormone residues has no relationship with BSE.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the revenue spending estimated by his Department in connection with the private finance initiative for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26622]

Mr. Boswell: The revenue spending estimated in connection with the private finance initiative is estimated at up to the following amounts:

1995–96: nil

1996–97: £1 million

1997–98: £5 million.

Livestock Group Head

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures his Department took in respect of the head of his Department's livestock group to ensure there was not a conflict of interest when he was appointed as a non-executive director of Lucas Ingredients; if he is still associated with that company; and if he will make a statement. [26690]

Mr. Boswell: The position of staff holding non-executive directorships or similar appointments is safeguarded by the general requirement binding on all civil servants that they must not take part in activities which might conflict with the interests of their Department, or impair their usefulness as public servants, or be inconsistent with their position as such.

Civil servants acting as directors remain subject to the Official Secrets Acts and the need to preserve the confidentiality of departmental business and information received in confidence from others. In relation to any particular appointment, individuals and their line managers must consider whether there is a present or potential conflict of interest and, if appropriate, an appointment may not be proceeded with, or restrictions may be placed on the kinds of discussion that the individual can take part in.

Where necessary, departmental checks would also be made to ensure that the prospective director is not in possession of commercially sensitive information relating to the company's competitors which might give rise to criticism. The company concerned has a right to expect the director to preserve the confidentiality of its corporate affairs.

The appointment of the head of the livestock group was made with due regard to these principles. The appointment has now lapsed and the person concerned no longer has any association with the company.

Chernobyl

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the total cost to the United Kingdom of the Chernobyl accident on 26 April 1986. [27096]

Mrs. Browning: The main economic effect to the United Kingdom of the Chernobyl accident has been on the UK sheep industry. The introduction of sheep controls on certain areas of upland grazing land contaminated by radioactive fallout from Chernobyl has been mitigated by the introduction of the sheep compensation scheme. This was introduced in July 1986 to compensate farmers whose enterprises had been disrupted as a consequence of the sheep controls. To date, more than £12 million has been paid to farmers who were affected. The compensation has been primarily to recompense farmers for the inconvenience of controls; payments for market losses have been comparatively small.

Agri-environment Schemes (Birds)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what plans he has to initiate and fund a whole-farm project for arable farmers under the countryside stewardship scheme for the benefit of skylarks; [27158]

(2) what further plans he has to introduce measures for arable extensification as required under the EU agri-environment regulation EEC 2078/92. [27161]

Mr. Boswell: EC agri-environment regulation 2078/92 requires member states to introduce a number of different categories of schemes, including one "to change to more extensive forms of crop, including forage, production, or to maintain extensive production methods introduced in the past, or to convert arable land into extensive grassland".

This is implemented in England through the environmentally sensitive areas, countryside stewardship and some options of the habitat scheme.

We have recently reviewed our agri-environment schemes and, in particular, the future of countryside stewardship following extensive and detailed public consultations. We relaunched the countryside stewardship scheme this month and our objectives and decisions on priorities for the scheme have been widely welcomed. We have no plans at present to alter our priorities for stewardship or to introduce any new agri-environment schemes.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what plans he has to stem the decline of birds of the open field; [27159]

(2) what plans he has to replace the environmental benefits of set-aside by a new arable extensification scheme in the event that the percentage of land currently in set-aside is reduced. [27160]

Mr. Boswell: Following a suggestion made at the national agri-environment forum on 25 March, I agreed that officials should set up a working group to look at ways of enhancing the conservation value of cropped arable land, focusing particularly on promoting environmental benefits in the centre of fields for birds and other wildlife. This group will include representatives of key farming and conservation organisations and I expect it to commence work in the near future.

In addition, the Ministry sponsored the recent farmland bird management guidelines prepared by the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds, which I sent to all farmers in England with more than 100 hectares of arable land. These set out a number of practical ways in which farmers can encourage birds on their farms.

Specified Bovine Offals

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the State Veterinary Service's surveillance of the handling of specified bovine offals in January, February and March 1996; and if he will make a statement. [27884]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: The controls on specified bovine offals—SBO—now termed specified bovine material—SBM—are central to the protection of public health from any risk from BSE. They require the removal of all those tissues known potentially to harbour BSE infectivity from all cattle at slaughter. Compliance with these controls is of paramount importance, as I have made clear on a number of occasions in the House and directly to slaughterhouse operators.

The State Veterinary Service carried out regular unannounced visits to all plants handling SBM to monitor their compliance with the controls. The results of the surveillance visits in January, February and March 1996 are as follows:

	January 1996			February 1996			March 1996
	Number of visits	Number of unsatisfactory visits	Percentage unsatisfactory	Number of visits	Number of unsatisfactory visits	Percentage unsatisfactory	Number of visits	Number of unsatisfactory visits	Percentage unsatisfactory
Slaughterhouses	321	16	5.0	274	17	6.2	264	10	3.8
Hunt kennels and knackeries	242	15	6.2	187	7	3.7	219	14	6.4
Rendering plants[1]	6	1	16.7	6	1	16.7	5	1	16.7
Incinerators[1]	28	0	0	15	2	13.3	25	1	4.0

[1] Rendering plants and incinerators have to be specifically approved to handle SBOs; only a small number of such plants are so approved.

These results show that there has been a significant and sustained improvement in the handling of SBM since the most recent intensive surveillance programme began in September 1995. It is disappointing, however, that deficiencies are still being found in a small number of slaughterhouses and hunt kennels and knackeries. I expect all plants to continue to work hard to ensure they fully comply with the controls.

It is important to note that many of the failings in SBM handling found were comparatively mild—for example, problems with staining SBM or with record keeping, which would not present a direct risk to public or animal health. There were, however, four further instances of the most serious failing, three in which small pieces of spinal cord were left attached to carcases after dressing and one in which the entire spinal cord was left attached, from mid-January to mid-March. There have been no such instances since the middle of March. A total of 25 instances in which spinal cord was left attached to carcases have now been detected since the summer of 1995. In this same period, over 2 million cattle were slaughtered.

The Meat Hygiene Service has the responsibility of enforcing the SBM controls in slaughterhouses. It does this most rigorously and we have made available extra resources to ensure that the agency can discharge its responsibilities effectively. The agency's staff are fully aware that they may face disciplinary action as a result of their failure fully to enforce the controls. Since the summer, 22 MHS officials have been subject to full disciplinary investigation as a result of their failure to ensure full compliance with the SBM controls. One officer has been dismissed, 12 have received formal disciplinary warnings, and no formal action has been taken against the other nine, although they have been issued with a written caution. In addition, two inspectors are currently under investigation. Before any of these staff have been allowed to begin their work again they have undergone retraining. In one of these cases, the MHS has referred the plant to MAFF's legal services for investigation.

Slaughterhouses face prosecution for significant breaches of the SBM controls, when sufficient evidence is available. At present, one such case is before the courts and several more are under investigation with a view to prosecution.

The SVS will continue its regular unannounced visits to all plants handling SBM. The MHS will continue to enforce rules most vigorously, and press for prosecutions where there is sufficient evidence to support a case.

Nuclear Contamination (Soviet Submarine)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what assessment he has made of the effect on the food chain of contamination from the nuclear reactors and weapons on board the Soviet November class submarine which sank in the western approaches to the United Kingdom on 12 April 1970; and if he will make a statement; [26707]

(2) what action he has taken on the report by the International Atomic Energy Authority of July 1991, "Inventory of Radioactive Material into the Marine Environment", with particular respect to the sinking of a Soviet November class nuclear submarine on 12 April 1970; for what reasons the report has not been published; and if he will make a statement. [26706]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 25 April 1996]: Publication of this report is a matter for the IAEA. A draft of the report was circulated to contracting parties to the convention on the prevention of marine pollution by dumping of wastes and other matter—the "London convention, 1972"—including the United Kingdom, in November 1991. Copies of this version have been placed in the Library.

The reported submarine incident on 12 April 1970 is noted in the draft report. The draft does not identify a specific location but it is given elsewhere as approximately 1,000 km south-west of Land's End, in 4,500 m of water. There is no suggestion the incident took place in the western approaches. Contemporary and subsequent results from MAFF's extensive programme of monitoring for radioactivity in fish, shellfish, sea water and sediments around the British Isles have shown no indication of contamination from this or any other confirmed or reported accidental loss. Reports of the MAFF monitoring programme are also available in the Library.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department has undertaken to assess the susceptibility of different cattle breeds to BSE (a) by epidemiology and (b) by experiment. [23368]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: Epidemiological studies of the epidemic suggest that all breeds of cattle are susceptible to BSE, and that the numbers of cases confirmed by breed reflect the population of that breed in the country, and the extent to which compound feed containing meat and bone meal has been consumed. Experimental exposures of cattle to BSE have not been intended to determine breed susceptibility, but have used calves of several breeds, including cross-bred animals. Breeds involved include Friesian/Holstein and crosses, Jersey and Jersey cross, Limousin and Limousin cross, Simmental cross, Belgian blue and cross, Charolais, Hereford cross. All appear equally susceptible.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the prion-related protein genes in different cattle have been sequenced in the research into BSE evaluated by his Department. [23357]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: Extensive PrP gene sequencing of cattle of several breeds in Britain has revealed no polymorphisms that are associated with susceptibility to BSE. Recognised polymorphisms are five or six copies of an octapeptide repeat sequence, with PrP alleles encoding proteins of 256 and 264 amino acids respectively; a cytosine/thymine switch at base 576 which does not change the amino acid encoded; an adenine/guanine switch at base 234, also without an amino acid change.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evidence he has assessed in respect of (a) maternal and (b) lateral transmission of BSE. [23200]

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the most recent scientific advice evaluated by his Department concerning the likelihood of vertical transmission in cattle of the agent causing bovine spongiform encephalopathy; and if he will make a statement. [24118]

Mrs. Browning [holding answers 28 March and 2 April 1996]: I refer the hon. Members to the answer that I gave on 25 April 1996, Official Report, column 274.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many transgressions of BSE regulations there have been (a) in Scotland, (b) in the rest of the United Kingdom and (c) in each of the regions of (a) and (b). [23365]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: Enforcement of the Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy Order 1991, as amended, is the responsibility of local authorities. Until 1 April 1995, local authorities were also responsible for enforcement of the controls on specified bovine offals in slaughterhouses and head-boning plants. Information on enforcement before that date is not therefore held centrally. It is not possible, without disproportionate costs, to collect and collate this information from local authorities.

Since 1 April 1995 the Meat Hygiene Service has been responsible for enforcement of the controls on specified bovine materials. To date, there is one case before the court. A number of other cases are under investigation.

The State Veterinary Service regularly monitors the enforcement of the controls in slaughterhouses and elsewhere on specified bovine offals, which are required to be separated and disposed of by incineration or burial. The results of recent surveillance of slaughterhouses and head-boning plants were announced in the House on 19 July and updated on 22 November, 18 January and 30 April.

Mr. David Porter: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to provide for the dumping of BSE-infected carcases in the sea; what scientific studies he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on the impact on the marine food chain; and if he will make a statement; [26855]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 29 April 1996]: In his statement of 16 April, Official Report, columns 513-29, my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food announced that the waste material, offals and carcase meat resulting from the over 30 months bovine cull scheme will be treated primarily by rendering with the resultant material to be disposed of by the best practicable environmental option. Dumping at sea of BSE-infected carcase or any other bovine material is not an option under consideration.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Serco Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what contracts his Department, his agencies and the Cabinet Office have with Serco Ltd.; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [26640]

Mr. Willetts: My Department has two contracts with Serco Ltd., one for the provision of office services and another for the provision of a technical helpline. The Department also has an enabling contract for the provision of security-related maintenance of royal property with Serco Services (Scotland) Ltd. The annual cost of the contracts is some £800,000. The expiry dates for all these contracts is 31 March 1997, with the Department having the option to extend them. There are no penalties involved should the Department seek early termination.

Deregulation

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what was the outcome of the meeting on 10 April with the deregulation unit concerning the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995; and if he will make a statement. [27087]

Mr. Freeman: As a result of this meeting, the Parliamentary Secretary has written to Viscount Goschen reporting the concerns that have been expressed. With the Department of Transport, we propose to review the provisions of the regulations, particularly where they impact on small business, and the scope for improvements. I hope to make a further statement shortly.

Archway Tower

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what is the annual cost to his Department of the lease of Archway tower; who is the head lessee; who is the owner of the freehold; and what future use he plans for the building. [27135]

Mr. Freeman: As these are purely operational matters, I have asked the chief executive of Property Advisers to the Civil Estate to write directly to the hon. Member.

Letter from N. E. Borrett to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 29 April 1996:

The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster has asked me to reply to your Question about Archway Tower.

PACE has responsibility for Archway Tower which is leased to the Secretary of State for the Environment and needs extensive modernisation and refurbishment.

It was formerly occupied by the Benefits Agency as a public caller office and for other purposes but was operationally unsuitable and these functions transferred to another property in March 1995. The annual rent payable is £913,400.

Letting Agents are appointed to dispose of the lease by whatever means are possible but the building is considerably over-rented and there is little serious interest. Efforts are continuing to find a Government Department to occupy. Constructed in the 1970's, the building now requires complete refurbishment prior to re-occupation but in view of the depressed rental levels in the area, the capital expenditure is unlikely to be justified in the absence of a firm demand.

The freehold is owned by London Underground Limited and the head lessees are K P & B P Shah and A M Patel.

WALES

Coal and Steel Workers

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many persons are employed in (a) the steel industry and (b) the coal industry in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [26828]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: About 15,700 people are currently employed in steel manufacturing operations in Wales.

At 31 December 1995, approximately 2,500 people were employed in the coal industry in Wales.

I recognise the importance of both industries to the Welsh economy. In British Steel, we have one of the most efficient steel producers in the world and, in the short time since privatisation, the new coal companies have made great strides in developing their businesses.

Raytheon Corporate Jets

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has held concerning job prospects at Raytheon Corporate Jets, Broughton, Flintshire; and if he will make a statement. [26833]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend visited Raytheon Corporate Jets last September. All possible assistance has been given to the company to support the development at its facility in Broughton. The first instalment of regional selective assistance has already been paid.

Small and Medium-sized Businesses

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of employees employed in work in small and medium-sized businesses in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [26824]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Different definitions of small and medium-sized businesses are used in various contexts. A breakdown of business units in Wales—roughly corresponding to workplaces—by employment size bands is available from the 1993 census of employment. The data are on the NOMIS database which can be accessed by the staff of the Library of the House.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has had with representatives of small and medium-sized businesses; and if he will make a statement. [26822]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend has, in recent months, met the Institute of Directors (Wales), the Wales Confederation of British Industry and the Cardiff chamber of commerce. Other meetings are planned. In addition, the Welsh Office has supported the recent series of "Your Business Matters" conferences attended by small firms and their representative bodies.

Road Congestion

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what measures he proposes to eliminate road congestion in north-east Wales; and if he will make a statement. [26830]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Plans for future improvements to the trunk road network in north-east Wales and the level of local authority expenditure on major schemes supported by transport grant are included in chapter 6 of the Welsh Office's departmental report, Cm 3215, published on 25 March. Improvements to the local road network are the responsibility of the new unitary authorities.

Steel Industry

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement concerning prospects for the steel industry in Wales in respect of hot-rolled coil and coated products. [26858]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Prospects for the steel industry in Wales are good. Companies have made significant investments to improve quality and are seeing the benefits through increased orders. The Government are working closely with the industry to improve competitiveness further.

Small Businesses (Rural Areas)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to stimulate small businesses in rural areas; and if he will make a statement. [26826]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The White Paper "A Working Countryside for Wales" published in March by my right hon. Friend outlines a comprehensive programme of measures to assist small businesses in rural areas. Copies of the White Paper are available in the Library of the House.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the revenue spending estimated by his Department in connection with the private finance initiative for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26635]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There are no revenue costs for the Welsh Office resulting from the one project it has approved so far under the private finance initiative.

British Aerospace

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what discussions he has held concerning job prospects at British Aerospace, Broughton, Flintshire; and if he will make a statement. [26834]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend visited British Aerospace last September and the Under-Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for Clwyd, North-East (Mr. Richards), visited the company in March this year. During the visits the company outlined its plans for the future.

Engineering Jobs

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of jobs in Wales provided by engineering; and if he will make a statement. [26825]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The latest available figures are for 1993, when some 85,400 employees were employed in engineering-related industries—SIC(92) divisions 28 to 35—in Wales, according to the census of employment. This represented an increase of 0.5 per cent. on the 1991 figure.

Since 1993, the Welsh Office has introduced designated funding for training and enterprise councils to support modern apprenticeships in manufacturing. In 1994–95, some 500 people started such apprenticeships. In 1995–96 and 1996–97, starts are expected to be 1,200 and more than 1,600, respectively.

Serco Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what contracts his Department and his agencies have with Serco Ltd.; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [26689]

Mr. Hague: The only current contract between Serco Ltd. and my Department—including the Cadw agency—relates to the M4, south Wales, communications emergency telephone systems. It was awarded in February 1995 at a cost of £384,368, and the expected completion date is August 1996. I am able to seek early termination of the contract only in the event of default by Serco Ltd., in which case I would arrange for the outstanding work to be completed by another contractor following normal tendering procedures, and seek recovery from Serco Ltd. of any excess cost incurred as a result.

Research and Development

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much cash has been earmarked for research and development matters in Welsh industry for each of the years 1990 to 1995; and if he will make a statement. [26827]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The following sums were allocated for small firms merit award for research and technology, support for products under research and regional enterprise grant—innovation—research and development support schemes in Wales:

1990–91: £2.53 million
1991–92: £2.935 million
1992–93: £2.422 million
1993–94: £3,186 million
1994–95: £3.751 million.

Welsh industry has also received support from Department of Trade and Industry and European Union research and development schemes.

Travelling People

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the number and location of sites for travelling people in each county in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [26986]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The most recent survey of gipsy sites in Wales relates to 17 January 1996. The information is on a county and district basis. I have arranged for a copy to be placed in the Library of the House.

Road Accidents

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will publish the latest road accident figures for Wales by county; and if he will make a statement. [26866]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested will be published in "Road Accidents: Wales No. 16 1995" on Wednesday 1 May 1996. A copy of the publication will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many children were killed in road traffic accidents in each of the counties in Wales in the most recent year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [26868]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is shown in the following table. The figures relate to children killed in accidents recorded by the police.

Children killed in road accidents during 1995

River Dee Crossing

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects the River Dee crossing and associated works to be completed; what is the estimated cost; and if he will make a statement. [26870]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This scheme is the responsibility of Flintshire county council. It expects completion in July 1997 at an estimated total cost of some £63 million.

Road Schemes (Air Quality Reports)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to improve the reports on air quality when public inquiries are held on major road schemes; and if he will make a statement. [26862]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member for Normanton (Mr. O'Brien) Official Report, column 1, on 22 April by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport.

Road Links

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to improve road communications from Kelsterton, Deeside, to Point of Ayr. [26872]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: This is the responsibility of Flintshire county council.

Hawarden Airport

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the future of Hawarden airport. [26874]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The future development of Hawarden airport is a matter for British Aerospace, its owners.

Chernobyl

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the cost to the Welsh economy of the radioactive fallout from the Chernobyl accident of 26 April 1986. [26916]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Estimates of the overall cost to the Welsh economy resulting from the Chernobyl accident are not currently available. However, the direct cost to farmers, measured in terms of disruption to their enterprises and for which compensation has been paid since 1986, is estimated to be just over £8 million.

Disabled People

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to provide guidance to the franchising director in respect of train operating companies in Wales to ensure guaranteed access to services for those with disability. [26967]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 23 April by my hon. Friend the Minister for Railways and Roads to the hon. Member for Eastleigh (Mr. Chidgey), Official Report, columns 75–76.

A550

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects the grade interchange A550 road improvement and associated works to be completed; what is his estimate of the total costs; and if he will make a statement. [26869]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The contract completion date of the A550 Deeside park interchange improvement is November this year. The contract sum is £10.247 million.

Bus Companies

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his estimate of the number of bus companies currently operative in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [26873]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: There is uncertainty about the number of bus companies operating in Wales because of the rapid rate at which smaller operators enter and leave the industry. It is estimated that there are around 600 companies currently operating in Wales.

Ambulance Service

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has received in relation to the setting up of an all-Wales ambulance service. [27505]

Mr. Hague: None.

Severn and Queensferry Bridges

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many vehicles per hour cross the current Severn bridge and the Queensferry A550 bridge; and if he will make a statement. [26876]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The following tables show the average hourly flows calculated from all the available data from 1995.

Regional Railways

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the levels of investment in regional railways as they affect the Wrexham-Birkenhead and Holyhead-Chester-Crewe lines; and if he will make a statement. [26863]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The level of investment in railway lines in north Wales is a matter for Railtrack. I intend to meet the company soon to discuss its investment plans for all lines in Wales.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the effect of privatisation on the regional railways that serve north Wales; and if he will make a statement. [26864]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The Government's proposals for franchising the operation of regional railways are designed to improve the quality of passenger rail services. North West Regional Railways will be franchised as soon as is practicable.

Railways (Safety)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement concerning safety on railways in Wales. [26871]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given on 22 April by my hon. Friend the Minister for Railways and Roads to the hon. Member for Nottingham, East (Mr. Heppell), Official Report, column 33.

Speed Cameras

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the benefits of speed cameras; and if he will make a statement. [26865]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Results from an initial trial of fixed site speed cameras in Llanidloes confirm that they can be effective in controlling excessive speeds close to camera sites.

However, speed cameras are likely to be justifiable only at sites with a history of accidents associated with excessive driving speeds.

The Welsh Office is planning a further set of trials in conjunction with Welsh police authorities using portable or semi-portable camera equipment to determine the effectiveness and benefits of such systems.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent consultations he has had with each of the farming unions in Wales concerning BSE. [26875]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: My right hon. Friend and I have met farmers' leaders to discuss this subject on a number of occasions, most recently my right hon. Friend met the Farmers Union of Wales, the National Farmers Union and the Country Landowners Association on 22 April.

Home Energy Conservation Act 1995

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which local authorities in Wales will be eligible during 1996–97 for grants under the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995 action scheme. [27244]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: No, the Home Energy Conservation Act does not make provision for grants.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he plans to issue guidelines in respect of the Home Energy Conservation Act 1995 in Wales. [27243]

Mr. Jones: In Wales, guidance on implementation of the Home Energy Conservation Act will be issued this summer.

M4 Relief Road

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received concerning the proposed M4 relief road; and if he will make a statement. [27420]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Various views have been received about proposals for the M4 Magor to Castleton relief road as a result of public consultation in 1993 and 1994. My right hon. Friend announced his preferred route for this scheme in July last year.

HEALTH

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what meetings took place between his Department and the manufacturers of third generation oral contraceptives between July and the end of September 1995; and if concerns about the safety of their products were discussed at those meetings. [25589]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 16 April at column 488.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which company his Department employed in October 1995 to print, collate and post the letter to general practitioners informing them of safety concerns about third generation oral contraceptives; and if he will make a statement. [25810]

Mr. Malone: The Medical Direct Mail Organisation.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines subcommittee briefed on 10 October 1995 about third generation oral contraceptives were not members of the committee. [25590]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 19 December 1995 at column 1151. The ad hoc working group which met on 10 October 1995 included members of the Committee on Safety of Medicines and invited experts who were not members of the committee.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the safety of oral contraceptives following the most recent meeting of the Committee on Safety of Medicines; and if he will make a statement. [27332]

Mr. Malone: Ministers rely on their advisory committees for an assessment of such issues.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what attachments were enclosed with the letter of 11 October 1995 relating to oral contraceptives containing desogestrel or gestodene in order to inform consideration of the relevant issues by the Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products. [27354]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 2 April at column 185.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who represented the United Kingdom at the three meetings of the Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products held on (a) 17-18 October 1995, (b) 26-27 October 1995 and (c) 16 to 18 April 1996. [27355]

Mr. Malone: The two members of the Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products nominated by the United Kingdom, supported as necessary by experts relevant to the items under consideration.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the consideration of safety issues by the Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products relating to oral contraceptives containing desogestrel or gestodene took place on the basis of article 8 of directive 75/319/EEC. [27357]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 8 February at column 344. The Medicines Control Agency made a written request that the Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products include the matter for discussion at its meeting of 17-18 October 1995. The subsequent CPMP position statement dated 27 October 1995 makes reference to article 8 of directive 75/319/EEC.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice the Committee on Safety of Medicines communicated to the relevant pharmaceutical companies about the product licences relating to desogestrel or gestodene, following its meeting on 13 October 1995; [27368]

(2) what advice the Committee on Safety of medicines gave regarding action on the product licences relating to desogestrel and gestodene at its meeting on 13 October 1995. [27362]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 8 February at column 343. The advice of the Committee on Safety of Medicines to the licensing authority is confidential.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 19 December, Official Report, column 1153, on what date the final report of the World Health Organisation study on oral contraceptives was produced; and if he will make a statement. [27370]

Mr. Malone: A number of reports of the World Health Organisation's findings were provided to the Medicines Control Agency between July and October 1995; the report referred to in the answer given on 19 December 1995 at column 1153 provided the final results on venous thromboembolism of the WHO study. The MCA subsequently received a copy of the manuscript which was submitted to The Lancet for publication, dated 13 October. This document was not different in any important way from the previous report received by the MCA.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column 185, if clinical trials with oral contraceptives containing gestodene were terminated in October 1995. [27364]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 8 February at column 346.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column 185, if the referral to the Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products of 11 October 1995 was made by one of the United Kingdom's representatives on the Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products. [27365]

Mr. Malone: Yes. The written request that the Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products include the safety of oral contraceptives on the agenda of its meeting of 17-18 October was made by one of the United Kingdom's representatives on the committee.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 2 April, Official Report, column 184, if the then Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Bolton, West (Mr. Sackville), was consulted prior to the written request that the Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products consider safety issues relating to oral contraceptives containing desogestrel or gestodene; and if he authorised the request to the CPMP. [27366]

Mr. Malone: Disclosure of information such as that requested would be in breach of the long-established convention, observed by successive Governments, protecting the confidentiality of the internal decision-making process.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the chief executive of the Medicines Control Agency authorised the request of 11 October 1995 to the Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products relating to desogestrel and gestodene. [27367]

Mr. Malone: The chief executive of the Medicines Control Agency agreed with the United Kingdom delegate to the Committee for Proprietary Medicinal Products that this would be an appropriate issue for the committee to consider at its meeting of 17–18 October 1995.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Committee on Safety of Medicines has made a re-assessment of the safety of desogestrel and gestodene in the light of evidence in December 1995 and January 1996. [27369]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 25 April at column 281.

Mortality Statistics (Doncaster)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the five most common causes of death for women in the Doncaster health authority in the last year for which figures are available; and what were the figures for each of the previous four years. [26645]

Mr. Horam: The information is shown in the table.

Office for National Statistics: Top five causes of death in females in Doncaster health authority 1990–94

Cause	Number of deaths
1990
Ischaemic heart disease (ICD[1] 410–414)	344
Cerebrovascular disease (ICD 430–438)	173
Malignant neoplasm of trachea, bronchus and lung (ICD 162)	76

Malignant neoplasm of trachea, bronchus and lung (ICD 162)	72
Breast cancer (ICD 174)	69

[1] International Classification of Diseases, 9th revision. For 1992 and earlier years, the number of deaths represents the deaths registered annually. Figures from 1993 onwards are those which occurred annually; prior to 1993, the date on which deaths were registered and occurred differed, e.g. a death on 31 December 1991 would probably have been registered in 1992.

Non-prescription Medicines

Sir John Hannam: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average cost in 1995 of medicines bought without a doctor's prescription in the United Kingdom, France, Germany, Holland, Ireland, Italy and Spain. [26792]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available.

Grant Aid Funding

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many successful applications for section 65 grant aid funding for HIV-specific applicants were made by (a) non-London organisations and (b) new applicants in 1996–97. [27011]

Mr. Horam: Two successful grant applications were made by non-London organisations in 1996–97. There have been five new grants awarded in 1996–97.

British Dental Association

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has recently received from the British Dental Association; and if he will make a statement. [26995]

Mr. Malone: We are in regular contact with the British Dental Association on a wide range of current issues.

Dental Services

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to re-introduce free dental examinations under the national health service; and if he will make a statement. [26983]

Mr. Malone: There are no plans to re-introduce free dental examinations for all. Certain groups, including all those under 18 years, are exempt from all dental charges, including those for examination. Others on a low income may get free dental treatment or help with the cost. In all, some 25 per cent. of adult courses receive full or partial relief from charges.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many people in the United Kingdom currently have private dental plans; and if he will make a statement; [27021]

(2) how many people were registered with private dentists in (a) 1984, (b) 1989, (c) 1992 and (d) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [27113]

Mr. Malone: Information on the number of people with private dental plans or who receive dental treatment outside the national health service is not available centrally.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what recent representations his Department has received concerning the re-introduction of free dental check-ups; and if he will make a statement. [26977]

Mr. Malone: The Department of Health has received a small number of letters concerning the re-introduction of free dental examinations.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans his Department has to develop the role of the community dental services as a safety net; and if he will make a statement. [26981]

Mr. Malone: On 5 April 1995 the Government announced their proposals for the reform of national health service dentistry. These reforms included the Government's intention of strengthening the role of the community dental service.

Water Tower Mental Hospitals

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the location by health authority of the water tower mental hospitals in England which were open in March 1994 giving their planned date of closure; and if he will list those hospitals which were open in March 1995 and March 1996 together with the number of patients in each of those dates. [27092]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave her on 1 April at columns 48–50.

Abortions

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the East London and City health authority's instruction to Newham Healthcare NHS trust in respect of (a) patients other than those deemed clinically urgent and (b) women requiring abortions. [27145]

Mr. Horam: Agreement has now been reached between East London and City health authority and Newham Healthcare NHS trust on a contract for services for 1996–97. The health authority's instructions concerning patients other than clinically urgent cases and women requiring termination of pregnancies ceased to apply on 25 April.

GP Fundholders

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the total amounts of money given to the National Association of Fundholding Practices in each year since 1990; what amounts are proposed for 1996–97 and 1997–98; and if he will list the individual amounts given and what they were given for. [27400]

Mr. Malone: The National Association of Fundholding Practices does not receive central funding to support the administration or management of its association. In 1994, the National Association of Fundholding Practices received a project grant of £50,000 in response to a bid it made to the Department to develop, on behalf of the national health service, a national mentorship scheme available to all general practitioners considering entering fundholding.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a copy of the NHS executive letter sent to family health services authorities in May 1990 in respect of management allowances for general practitioner fundholders; and if subsequent alterations of that letter's contents were communicated to the family health services authorities. [27509]

Mr. Malone: Yes. Health service guidelines are issued to all relevant health service authorities and copies are normally placed in the Library.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all representations received from family health services authorities between 1991 and 1995 in relation to the lawfulness of their payments of management allowances to general practitioner fundholders. [27506]

Mr. Malone: No such representations were received.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps he has taken to implement the recommendations of the internal inquiry into the circumstances leading to the delay in obtaining parliamentary approval for the payment of management allowances to general practitioner fundholders. [27504]

Mr. Malone: A team has been set up to produce an action plan to implement the recommendations of the inquiry.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he received from the National Audit Office in respect of the independent inquiry into the circumstances leading to the failure to enact secondary legislation in respect of the payment of management allowances to general practitioner fundholders. [27507]

Mr. Malone: None. Officials from the Department have kept the National Audit Office informed about the independent inquiry and provided them with all relevant papers.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place in the Library a copy of the outline clause drafted in January 1991 to provide parliamentary approval for the payment of management allowances to general practitioner fundholders; and when the decision was taken to cease progress on it. [27508]

Mr. Malone: No. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 25 April, Official Report, columns 282–83.

Long-term Care

Mr. French: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he is now ready to publish his consultation paper on making provision for long-term care. [27640]

Mr. Dorrell: The consultation paper will be published shortly.

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will meet the Alzheimer's Disease Society to discuss the Government's consultation paper on long-term care; and what other voluntary organisations he will be consulting. [27451]

Mr. Bowis: When it is published, we shall welcome comments on the consultation paper from all those who have an interest in the proposals it makes.

Drug Abuse

Mrs. Lait: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he will publish the report of the task force to review services for drug misusers. [27840]

Mr. Bowis: The report of the task force, which was chaired by the Reverend Dr. John Polkinghorne, President of Queen's college Cambridge, will be published tomorrow. Copies will be placed in the Library.

Pre-payment Prescriptions

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what evaluation his Department has carried out of the awareness among people with severe asthma of the availability of pre-payment certificates for prescriptions; what steps are being taken to encourage general practitioners and pharmacists to promote the pre-payment scheme; and what assessment he has made of the benefits of the introduction of a weekly pre-payment stamp. [26815]

Mr. Malone: No evaluation has been made, but we are aware of the research being carried out by the National Asthma Campaign and will be interested in the results. Information about the pre-payment certificates is available in the Department's new leaflet HC11 "Help with Health Costs", which is available from general practitioners, pharmacists and national health service trusts. All prescription forms refer to the availability of pre-payment certificates, as does a poster about NHS prescription charges which has been sent to all pharmacists.

We have no plans to introduce a weekly instalment system as this would be costly to administer and would as a result increase the overall cost of the pre-payment certificate. This would defeat the object of ensuring that pre-payment certificates are good value for money for those who need regular medication.

Malcolm Hurlston Corporate Consultancy

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many contracts the Malcolm Hurlston Corporate Consultancy has had from his Department; and if he will provide details. [27275]

Mr. Bowis: Two. I refer the hon. Member to the reply that my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State gave him on 23 April, Official Report, column 104.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 23 April, Official Report, column 104, on Mr. Nigel Whittaker, what level of remuneration the Malcolm Hurlston Corporate Consultancy will receive; and for how long its services will continue to be provided. [27285]

Mr. Bowis: The level of remuneration is commercial in confidence. The contract is for a project and not a period of time.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 23 April, Official Report, column 104, on Mr. Nigel Whittaker, how the Malcolm Hurlston Corporate Consultancy was employed; and if there was competition for the contract. [27284]

Mr. Bowis: The contract was placed in accordance with departmental guidance and a number of other teams were considered.

Beccles and Lowestoft Hospitals

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the impact of eligibility criteria for NHS continuing care on the viability of Beccles and Lowestoft hospitals. [27277]

Mr. Bowis: Health authorities were required to consult key local interests in developing policies and eligibility criteria for meeting continuing health care needs. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of Suffolk health authority for information relating to Beccles and Lowestoft hospitals.

"Choosing with Care"

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many of the recommendations of the Norman Warner report "Choosing with Care" have been carried out. [27279]

Mr. Bowis: Local authorities have reported significant progress on implementing all of the recommendations addressed to them.

All the recommendations addressed specifically to central Government and local authority associations have been implemented or are under longer-term consideration.

Nurses

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his estimate of the shortfall in nurses in each specialty. [27281]

Mr. Horam: There is not a general nationwide shortage of nursing staff but there are some local nurse shortages in some specialties in some parts of the country. The national health service executive issued annual national education and training planning guidance EL(95)96 on 23 August 1995 to inform education commissioning in 1996–97. Further guidance will be issued this summer.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many student nurse places have been vacant in each of the last five years; [27280]

(2) if he will publish figures on the nursing student intake for each of the last five years by region. [27282]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact the English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting, which records data relating to student nurse numbers.

Surplus Property

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 21 March, Official Report, column 321, if he will provide a regional breakdown of the number and value of surplus NHS properties. [27283]

Mr. Horam: The information is shown in the table.

Region	Number	£ million
Anglia and Oxford	71	112
Northern and Yorkshire	182	148
North Thames	113	269
North West	70	89

Region	Number	£ million
South Thames	99	255
South and West	105	104
Trent	57	80
West Midlands	179	146
Total	876	1,203

NHS Trusts (Finance)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health which trusts were placed on a red light status in relation to their finances in each region in 1995–96. [27274]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave him on 22 March, Official Report, column 382.

Social Services (Contracting Out)

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what services provided by local authority social services departments it is his policy not to have contracted out to the independent sector. [27278]

Mr. Bowis: Social services authorities may contract out particular services if the relevant law permits it. Subject to that, our policy is that authorities should arrange for the provision of all services in the most cost-effective way.

Extra-contractual Referrals

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 19 April, Official Report, column 640, if he will publish figures for total expenditure on extra-contractual referrals for each year for which figures are available. [27286]

Mr. Malone: The national health service executive's estimates of outturn expenditure on extra-contractual referrals in England is shown in the table. As the data have been collected on a fast-track basis and for management purposes they are not subjected to the normal validation checks and definitions.

Year	Estimated total ECR expenditure £ million	Estimated ECR expenditure as a percentage of total health authority expenditure Percentage
1992–93	295	1.5
1993–94	350	1.7
1994–95	386	1.8

Deregulation

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the consultation document, "Deregulation: a Model Appeals Mechanism, Model Provisions with Regard to Appeals against Enforcement Action" applies to residential care homes and services for children under eight years. [27276]

Mr. Bowis: In "Moving Forward", the consultation document for the current review of regulation and inspection of social services, we have asked for views on what changes are necessary to current regulatory arrangements to ensure that enforcement mechanisms are fair and effective with particular reference to the principles set out in section 5 and schedule 1 of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994.

Safety of Medicines

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the Licensing Authority, the Medicines Control Agency, the Medicines Division of the Department of Health or the Committee on Safety of Medicines have sought to prevent publication in peer-reviewed journals of information derived from yellow card data. [27351]

Mr. Malone: Yes. Permission to publish information derived from yellow card data might be refused if it were considered that inappropriate use was being made of the data.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all legal actions relating to the anti-depressant Mianserin in which the Licensing Authority or Committee on Safety of Medicines has been involved; and for each action if he will indicate whether the Licensing Authority or the CSM initiated the action, what was the legal basis of the action, what was the outcome and what were the legal costs incurred by the Licensing Authority or the CSM. [27352]

Mr. Malone: The Licensing Authority, the Medicines Commission and the Committee on Safety of Medicines were involved in judicial review proceedings in connection with Mianserin in 1988 and 1989. The actions were initiated by the pharmaceutical company Organon Laboratories Ltd. in 1988 under section 107 of the Medicines Act 1968 and included applications for several interim orders between 20 December 1988 and 3 January 1989, prior to judicial review proceedings which took place in February 1989. Two applications for review were sought by Organon. The Licensing Authority lost the case on appeal in January 1990. Details of the legal costs are no longer held.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list all legal actions relating to Triazolam in which the Licensing Authority or the Committee on Safety of Medicines has been involved; and for each action if he will indicate whether the Licensing Authority or CSM initiated the action, what was the legal basis of the action, what was the outcome and what were the legal costs incurred by the Licensing Authority or CSM. [27353]

Mr. Malone: The Licensing Authority is currently involved in judicial review proceedings in connection with Triazolam. The action was initiated by Upjohn Ltd. in 1993 under section 107 of the Medicines Act 1968. The case has not yet been concluded.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the members of the pharmacovigilance subcommittee of the Committee on Safety of Medicines for the period from 1 January 1996. [27363]

Mr. Malone: The membership of the sub-committee on pharmacovigilance is as follows:

Professor A. Breckenridge (Chairman): professor of clinical pharmacology, Liverpool university

Professor Darbyshire OBE: head of the Medical Research Council's HIV clinical trials centre, University college London medical school

Dr. K. Beard: consultant physician in geriatric medicine, the Victoria infirmary, Glasgow

Ms A Lee: principal pharmacist, drugs and poisons information centre, regional drugs and therapeutics centre, Newcastle

Dr. T. MacDonald: senior lecturer, department of clinical pharmacology, Dundee university

Professor K. MacPherson: professor of public health epidemiology, London school of hygiene and tropical medicine

Dr. M. Pirmohamed: lecturer in clinical pharmacology and therapeutics Liverpool university Professor L. Ramsay: consultant physician at Hallamshire hospital and professor of clinical pharmacology and therapeutics, Sheffield university.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those medicines whose licence has been (a) suspended, (b) revoked by the Licensing Authority or (c) withdrawn by the licence holder as a result of information from the yellow card system indicating the year in which the change in licence took place; who prompted the action; and what were the adverse effects identified by the yellow card system. [20505]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 21 March 1996]: Information about the safety of medicines is obtained from numerous sources of which the United Kingdom's yellow card scheme is only one. It is unusual for licensed medicines to be withdrawn from the market solely on the basis of information from yellow cards.

The information shown in the table lists those medicines licensed and marketed in the UK after the Medicines Act 1968 came into effect whose licence has subsequently been (a) suspended or (b) revoked by the Licensing Authority, or (c) withdrawn by the licence holder, as a result of information from the yellow card scheme.

The table does not include those medicines whose licence was suspended, revoked or withdrawn before the product was marketed in the UK. Nor does it include medicines which were granted a product licence of right when the Medicines Act 1968 came into force, or those with safety hazards identified primarily through other sources of information such as spontaneous adverse drug reaction schemes outside the UK.

Brand name (drug substance)	Year action taken[1]	Major safety concerns
(a) Medicines whose licence has been suspended by the Licensing Authority
Opren (benoxaprofen)	1982	Hepatotoxicity, serious skin reactions
Flosint (indoprofen)	1983	Gastrointestinal toxicity, multi-system toxicity
(b) Medicines whose licence has been revoked by the Licensing Authority
Zomax (zomepirac)	1983	Anaphylaxis, renal failure
(c) Medicines whose licence was withdrawn by the licence holder
Osmosin (indomethacin— modified release)	1983	Small intestinal perforations
Zelmid (zimeldine)	1983	Neuropathy, convulsions, hepatotoxicity
Methrazone (feprazone)	1984	Serious skin reactions, multi-system toxicity
Pexid (perhexiline)	1985	Neuropathy, hepatotoxicity
Merital (nomifensine)	1986	Haemolytic anaemia, renal failure
Glauline eye drops 0.6 per cent. (metipranolol)	1990	Uveitis
Micturin (terodiline)	1991	Cardiac arrhythmias
Roxiam (remoxipride)	1994	Aplastic anaemia

[1] The year the action was taken relates to the year in which the product was removed from the market.

Medicines Control Agency

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what is the scheduled retirement date for the chief executive of the Medicines Control Agency; [27356]

(2) what is the scheduled retirement date of the head of the post-licensing business of the Medicines Control Agency. [27361]

Mr. Malone: Personal information about individual members of staff is confidential.

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the key business targets for the Medicines Control Agency for 1996–97. [27885]

Mr. Malone: I have today placed a copy of the 1996–97 key business targets of the Medicines Control Agency in the Library. The agency's business plan will be placed in the Library in the near future.

DEFENCE

Serco Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment he has made of the risks of a conflict of interest arising in respect of his Department's permanent secretary and his relationship with Serco Ltd.; and if he will make a statement; [26699]

(2) what contracts his Department and his agencies have with Serco Ltd.; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [26677]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The permanent secretary has no relationship with Serco Ltd.

My Department's central contracts records show that there are about 150 current contracts with various Serco companies, including Serco Ltd. The total value is approximately £125 million. These do not include contracts placed by various defence agencies, which are the subject of separate replies from chief executives. To provide details of the values of each individual contract and to research details of the end dates could be carried out only at disproportionate cost.

Although each contract will probably contain the Ministry's standard "break" condition which enables the Ministry to terminate the contract after a given period without penalty, there may be other termination provisions tailored to the circumstances of a particular contract. Again, details of these could be researched only at disproportionate cost.

I have asked the chief executives of the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency, the Meteorological Office and the Hydrographic Office to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from J. P. Clarke to Mr. M. Redmond, dated 30 April 1996:

You recently asked the Secretary of State for Defence a Parliamentary Question relating to contracts placed by the Ministry of Defence and Defence Agencies with Serco Limited. As your question relates in part to the Hydrographic Office and such issues fall within my responsibility as Chief Executive of the Hydrographic Office, I have been asked to reply to you.

The Hydrographic Office currently does not have any contract with Serco Limited.

I hope this information has been helpful.

Letter from John Chisholm to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 30 April 1996:

The Secretary of State for Defence has asked me as Chief Executive of the Defence Evaluation & Research Agency to reply to your question about contracts with Serco Ltd.

DERA currently has about 240 contracts and enabling arrangements with Serco Ltd at a total value to £76M. All these contracts will have an early termination clause but I am afraid that it would involve disproportionate costs to check the precise terms of each and also to list the normal end date of each contract.

I am sorry I could not be more helpful.

Letter from J. C. R. Hunt to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 30 April 1996:

As Chief Executive of the Meteorological Office I am replying to your recent question to the Defence Secretary concerning contracts with Serco Ltd.

Currently we have no such contracts.

Marine Collisions (Liability)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what liability for compensation under which international conventions Her Majesty's Government have in respect of accidental collisions between Royal Navy submarines and oil industry installations in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) other waters. [26915]

Mr. Soames: We are not aware of any international conventions stipulating a liability on Her Majesty's Government in the event of a Royal Navy submarine accidentally colliding with an oil industry installation. In the highly unlikely event of such an incident occurring, liability for compensation would be determined on the basis of the particular circumstances of the incident.

RAF Jets

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list those companies with maintenance contracts to repair and service RAF fast jets. [27303]

Mr. Soames: Four fast jet types remain in service with the Royal Air Force: Hawk, Tornado, Harrier and Jaguar. Contracts for major airframe and major component maintenance including repair and overhaul on those aircraft are held by the following UK companies:

Major airframe maintenance

British Aerospace

Major components/equipments

Rolls-Royce

Lucas Aerospace

Fairey Hydraulics

Hunting Aviation

Computing Devices (Hastings)

W. Vinten

Moog Controls

Microturbo

Gas Turbine Company

GEC-Marconi

Smiths Industries

Dowty

Flight Refuelling

Pilkington Optronics

Aerospace Composite Technologies

Oxley Aviation

BP Chemicals.

In addition, a number of companies in Germany and Italy are involved in work on RAF aircraft and components under sub-contract to Panavia, the Tornado consortium company, notably Daimler-Benz Aerospace and Alenia.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on how many occasions since 1992 penalties have been imposed as a result of poor quality maintenance on Royal Air Force fast jets. [27294]

Mr. Arbuthnot: None.

Infra-red Technology

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if infra-red technology is listed by his Department as a key defence technology. [27168]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We do not keep a detailed list of specific key technologies. Consideration is given periodically to technologies which are important in support of defence research priorities. Infra-red technology is not a separately identified technology in this context. However, it does contribute to other, more broadly defined areas of technology which are considered important.

Defence Secondary Care Agency

Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the creation of the Defence Secondary Care Agency. [27628]

Mr. Soames: The Defence Secondary Care Agency will form on 30 April 1996 when secondary medical care currently provided on a single-service basis will be included within a joint service agency under the control of a chief executive. Until a decision is taken on its final location, the headquarters of the DSCA will be based in London. The DSCA will include:

(a) The Royal hospital Haslar at Gosport;

(b) The Duchess of Kent's hospital at Catterick;

(c) Three Ministry of Defence hospital units within the NHS trust hospitals at Derriford, Plymouth, Frimley Park, Camberley, and Peterborough;

(d) The Princess Mary's hospital at Akrotiri, Cyprus;

(e) The defence service medical rehabilitation unit at RAF Headley Court in Surrey.

In addition, DSCA personnel will be stationed in smaller facilities at other locations, both at home and overseas.

Each service will continue to recruit to its own medical branch and will be responsible for issuing appointments and posting orders for personnel of their particular service into, within and out of the agency after agreement with the chief executive and for an agreed duration. It is expected that uniformed secondary care personnel will spend the major part of their career working within the agency.

The aim of the agency is to make available to commanders in chief appropriate medically trained secondary care service personnel, when required for training, exercises and deployments. In support of this aim the agency will deliver timely and effective treatments consistent with expected outcomes by providing the best possible medical care to all agency patients.

The chief executive, Mr. R. G. Smith, will be afforded greater responsibility and flexibility to build upon the professional ability and reputation for excellence of secondary care personnel from all three service medical branches. This will ensure that the MOD retains the capacity to deploy trained secondary care staff on military operations, to provide the best possible medical care to all agency patients, and at the same time maximise value for money in the delivery of secondary care for service personnel in order to maintain their operational readiness during peacetime.

The chief executive has been set the following key targets for the first year of the operation:

(1) From within available personnel resources, to meet the services' requirements for secondary care skill mix in support of operations.

(2) To maintain the most appropriate clinical environment for all staff to ensure professional recognition and accreditation by statutory bodies in the light of their continually improving standards.

(3) To meet all milestones for phase 1 of project ICE—improving clinical excellence.

(4) To assess the agency against investors in people criteria, within year one and produce an action plan for full accreditation.

(5) To develop average prices for finished consultant episodes for each specialty, and at each site.

(6) To meet an efficiency target of 4 per cent. for financial year 1996–97.

I have arranged for copies of the agency's framework document to be placed in the Library of the House.

HEALTH

Northern and Yorkshire Region (Chairman's Expenses)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date a banker's card for the payment of expenses was supplied to the chairman of the Northern and Yorkshire region; how much has been charged to this card; and how much has been reimbursed by the health service. [24968]

Mr. Malone: I will write to the hon. Member on this matter.

St. George's Hospital, Tooting

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people were waiting for operations at St. George's hospital, Tooting, as of 14 April. [26584]

Mr. Malone: The latest published information for St. George's Healthcare National Health Service trust is that 6,404 people were waiting for in-patient or day case treatment on 30 September 1995. Of these, the vast majority—5,373—had waited less than six months and there were no patients waiting over 18 months.

Local Authority Care

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of young people aged 16 years and above who left local authority care (a) in the 12 months ending December 1994, (b) in the 12 months ending December 1995 and (c) for the last 12 month period for which statistics are available; if he will provide a breakdown by (i) the legal status of those young people immediately prior to leaving the care of the local authority and (ii) the length of time in continuous care, by legal status; and if he will make a statement. [27042]

Mr. Bowis: The latest figures available centrally are for the financial year ending 31 March 1994 and are shown in the table.

Children aged 16 or over who ceased to be looked after during the year to 31 March 1994 by length of time in continuous care[1]

Other	50	—	10	20	10	10	—	—	—	—

Note:

[1] Figures exclude agreed series of short-term placements under section 20 of the Children Act 1989.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health for how many young people each local authority has a duty to provide advice, assistance and befriending up to the age of at least 21 years, pursuant to section 24 of the Children Act 1989, in each year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [27061]

Mr. Bowis: Information is available centrally on children who in each year qualify for advice and assistance because they have ceased to be looked after by a local authority at age 16 or over. Figures for the period 14 October 1991 to 31 March 1994 will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the numbers of young people who have been subject to care orders, pursuant to section 31(1)(a) of the Children Act 1989 on or after their 16 birthday, and for whom local authorities have a continuing duty to provide advice, assistance and befriending up to the age of at least 21 years, pursuant to section 24 of the said Act, by local authority area in each year for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement. [27062]

Mr. Bowis: The figures available centrally for the period 14 October 1991 to 31 March 1994 will be placed in the Library.

Listeria

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) deaths and (b) recorded occasions of illness have resulted from listeria as a consequence of eating unpasteurised cheeses in each year since 1990;

what research he has (i) evaluated and (ii) commissioned regarding the incidence and effects of listeria; and what action under public health law he has taken. [26910]

Mr. Horam: During the period 1990–95 there have been no deaths or illness as a result of eating unpasteurised cheesees. However, because of the characteristics of human listeriosis, specified food vehicles are rerely identified.

The Department continues to monitor and evaluate the findings of United Kingdom and international research and surveillance of listeria monocytogenes. The Department has funded projects on L. monocytogenes in foods including seafoods, vegetables and various self-service salad bar foods. Other work which has been funded includes the effect of modified atmospheres on the growth of L. monocytogenes, the effect of thermisation on L. monocytogenes in milk and the carriage of and infection by L. monocytogenes during pregnancy.

The Department is currently funding a microbiological study of raw cows' milk on retail sale in England and Wales includimg surveillance for L. monocytogenes.

No action has been taken under food safety legislation concerning L. monocytogenes in unpasteurised cheeses.

Operations

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the consent of patients is required before non-medically qualified persons are admitted to an operating theatre. [26973]

Mr. Horam: If a patient has consented to a treatment, such as an operation, this will include the involvement of all staff, medically qualified or not,who are required to ensure that the operation is performed safely and effectively. The admission of observers not connected with treatment should be permitted only if the professional in charge of the patient's care believes that it will not be detrimental to the patient and the patient has not objected.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what restrictions govern the entry into operating theatres by non-medically qualified people. [26974]

Mr. Horam: Entry to an operating theatre of non-medically qualified people is permitted if those people are necessary to the safe and effective running of the theatre, the theatre equipment, or are necessary to the delivery of patient care. The admission of observers not connected with treatment should be permitted only if the professional involved in the patient's care believes that it will not be detrimental to the patient and any patient concerned has not objected.

Mental Illness (Homicides)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of homicides in mental illness acute hospitals or other inpatient NHS supported mental illness hostels or places in each of the last three years and in the first three months of 1996 by region of location. [27339]

Mr. Bowis: This information is not available centrally.

Operation Cancellations, Durham

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many operations were cancelled at short notice throughout the Durham hospitals NHS trust over the last 18 months. [27377]

Mr. Horam: The latest information available is as follows:

North Durham Health Authority area

1994–95

Quarter 1: 47

Quarter 2: 27

Quarter 3: 14

Quarter 4: 16.

1995–96

Quarter 1: 13

Quarter 2: 30

Quarter 3: 41.

Note:

Figures represent the number of operations cancelled for non medical reasons on the day the patient is due to arrive or after they have arrived in hospital in North Durham health authority area.

Private Purchasing

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the amount spent on purchasing health care from the private sector by (a) Doncaster health authority, (b) Doncaster royal infirmary and Mexborough Montagu trust, (c) Doncaster health care trust and (d) general practitioner fundholders in each year since 1991–92. [27433]

Mr. Horam: The information available is listed in the tables:

Expenditure on the purchase of health care from commercial (for profit) providers—1994–95

	Expenditure £000
Doncaster district health authority	874
Doncaster Healthcare NHS trust	0
Doncaster Royal and Montagu Hospital NHS trust	0

Notes:

1. The figures are provisional
2. Information is available for 1994–95 only.

Expenditure on purchase of health care from private providers by general practitioner fundholders in the Doncaster family health services area

	Expenditure £000
1991–92	77
1992–93	215
1993–94	415
1994–95	578

Dental Caries

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of five-year-old children in England had dental caries in (a) 1990, (b) 1992 and (c) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [27417]

Mr. Malone: Every two years, the British Association for the Study of Community Dentistry conducts a survey of dental caries prevalence in children aged five throughout Great Britain. It has found that the mean percentage of five-year-old children in England for whom there is evidence of caries experience in 1989–90 was 46.5 per cent. and in 1991–92 was 40.7 per cent. Figures for 1995–96 will not be available until March 1997.

Medium Secure Unit (Bradford)

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review the suitability of a proposed medium secure hospital unit within the Bierley area of Bradford. [27372]

Mr. Bowis: This is a matter for Bradford Community National Health Service trust and Bradford health authority, which will organise public consultation as appropriate. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the trust for details.

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of his Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96. [27529]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Kaymar Studios

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what contracts his Department has entered into with Kaymar Studios; and if he will make a statement. [25926]

Mr. Howard: The Home Office has not entered into any contracts with Kaymar Studios.

Buckley Hall Prison (Escapes)

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what crimes the four prisoners who escaped from Buckley Hall on 23 April had been sentenced; and what was the length of their sentences. [27289]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 1 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question asking for what crimes the four prisoners, who escaped from Buckley Hall prison on 23 April 1995, had been sentenced; and what was the length of their sentence.

The requested information is as follows: (i) robbery, five years; (ii) handling stolen goods, five years; (iii) robbery, seven years; and (iv) burglary, one year and nine months.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the estimated cost to Greater Manchester police force in (a) staff and (b) use of a police helicopter in capturing the four prisoners who escaped from Buckley Hall prison on 23 April. [27290]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from Greater Manchester police that no additional costs were incurred as the resources utilised in the operation were part of the force's normal deployments and contingencies.

Prison Closures

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to close or cluster prisons during the next 12 months; which prisons will be affected; and if he will make a statement. [26663]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 29 April 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 1 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about what plans the Prison Service has to close or cluster prisons during the next 12 months.

The Prison Service has announced the planned closure of Finnamore Wood young offender institution in May 1996 and Oxford prison by the end of 1996. Pucklechurch remand centre closed in March. No decisions have been taken concerning any other prison closures. Consideration is being given, as part of plans for improving cost efficiency, to the possible sharing of some management and support services at prisons where operational and geographical considerations permit.

National Lottery (Medical Research)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received in relation to the categories of medical research which may be supported via the National Lottery Charities Board; what consultations he has had with the chairman of that board concerning the financial compensation via board grants for medical charities which lost income when the lottery introduced scratchcards and other competing fund-raising methods; and if he will make a statement. [27314]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 29 April 1996]: We have received numerous representations about medical research charities receiving grants from the National Lottery Charities Board. Many of these have been concerned with specific types of research. The board announced on 23 April its latest grant round, which will focus on health, disability and care. It will be open to all categories of medical research organisation to make suitable applications.

The national lottery is a major source of new income for the voluntary sector and has had a beneficial effect in raising the profile of lotteries generally. It has led, and will lead, to hundreds of millions of pounds of additional money reaching charitable and voluntary organisations every year. The Home Office has commissioned research, in association with the voluntary sector, on the specific issue of charitable income before and after the introduction of the lottery. Once the results of this research are known, we will consider whether action is required.

From 1 May, responsibility for voluntary services passed to my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for National Heritage.

Dunblane Inquiry

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements he has made to submit evidence on firearms controls to the inquiry being conducted by Lord Cullen into the events in Dunblane. [28021]

Mr. Howard: The Government submitted their evidence on firearms controls to Lord Cullen yesterday. With Lord Cullen's agreement, I and my right hon. Friend, the Secretary of State for Scotland are today publishing the evidence. Copies have been placed in the Library. A copy of the evidence has been submitted to the Home Affairs Select Committee for its use in the separate inquiry which it is undertaking into handguns. Copies of the evidence have also been made available to the press, the police in England and Wales and Scotland, the Firearms Consultative Committee, the British Shooting Sports Council, and other shooting organisations. The Home and Scottish Offices will provide copies on request to other organisations.

ENVIRONMENT

Stray Dogs

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what provisions exist for local authorities to take up responsibility for stray dogs. [27300]

Mr. Clappison: Under section 149 of the Environmental Protection Act 1990, districts and London boroughs have to seize, where practicable, dogs straying in their area. Where the owner can be traced, he must be given the opportunity to reclaim his dog within seven days. If he has not done so in this period, the local authority may sell, give away or destroy it.

Under section 150 of the 1990 Act, districts and London boroughs have to deal with stray dogs taken to them by members of the public. They can allow the finder to keep the dog or they can treat it as if it had been seized.

These provisions came into force on 1 April 1992.

Eland House

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what decision his Department has reached on the placing of solar PV panels on Eland House. [27124]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Department of the Environment considered installing photovoltaic cells at Eland house. The investment was not judged to be justified, given that the potential energy savings were small in relation to the capital cost. A number of other cost-effective energy saving measures were however, included in the design.

Chernobyl

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what expertise will be made available from the British nuclear industry to help mitigate the contamination consequences of the recent fires around Chernobyl. [27095]

Mr. Clappison: The UK Government have received no requests to provide assistance in respect of the Chernobyl fires.

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of his Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96. [27531]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is not held centrally and is available only at disproportionate cost.

Water Supplies

Mrs. Peacock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on water supply arrangements in England and Wales in the light of the Environment Agency's report published on 1 May. [28062]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The Environment Agency's report, "Review of Water Company Plans to Safeguard Summer Water Supplies", underlines the exceptional lack of rainfall and consequent impact on water resources in many parts of the country during the past 12 months. It confirms the extent of the measures which the water companies are taking to maintain supplies even if this summer is as dry as last. Over £400 million of capital expenditure has been announced in England and Wales—investment which will be financed without increasing prices to consumers.

The Environment Agency's assessment is that the companies are taking appropriate measures, and that, despite the present level of many reservoirs and aquifers, these measures should be sufficient to enable essential supplies to be maintained in all areas even through a hot, dry summer. But there is no room for complacency and, should dry weather continue into the autumn, further measures could be required.

On 1 September last year, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced that he was putting in hand, with the agency, the Director General of Water Services and representatives of the water companies, a review of water resources and water supply in the longer term. This work is continuing and we expect to publish a report later in the summer.

Provided, that the costs of supply are met, the environment is properly protected, and waste is avoided, the aim should be to provide consumers with the water they want. Within the framework of sustainable development, it will, however, be necessary to make sometimes difficult choices about the extent to which supply should be guaranteed in extreme droughts for inessential as well as for essential purposes. These are matters on which there is a need for dialogue between companies and their customers, in the light of the costs and benefits of different levels of security of supply.

The work on the review so far suggests that the basic framework for making water resource and supply decisions is sound, and the water companies, the Office of Water Services and the Environment Agency, with the involvement of the Government where necessary, should be able to reach satisfactory decisions on the management of existing resources and the provision of the resources where needed. In planning and managing water resources and supply, particular attention needs to be given to the following points:

- changing patterns and structure of demand for water use: it is essential that present and likely future requirements should be better understood.
- appropriate use should be made of the scope for influencing demand for water through tariff structures and selective metering. The high costs of meeting some water uses, particularly at times of peak demand, should be met directly and fully by those who make use of the water. It should be possible to do this without impacting on charges to meet basic household needs—whereas under present charging arrangements the costs of meeting peak demands are averaged across all consumers.
- water supply systems must be managed efficiently and economically. In particular, in the interests of customers and the environment, leakage levels should be reduced as rapidly as possible to economic levels. Methods of estimating leakage should be fully applied and improved. Ofwat has been discussing leakage reduction programmes with companies and will be publishing information on this shortly.
- increased efficiency in the use of water should continue to be sought. Immediate responsibility for this lies with domestic and industrial consumers, and manufactures of domestic equipment. The Environment Act 1995 gave water companies a new duty to promote efficient water use by consumers, and the Director General of Water Services new powers to supervise the use of the duty; further information on the subject will be published shortly.
- in the light of these factors and in consultation with the Environment Agency, water companies need to review urgently and comprehensively, if they are not already doing so, the reliable yields of each water resource system, with a view to establishing their adequacy and whether additional resources will be needed to meet properly-managed demand. These reviews should take account of the likely impact of climate change so far as it can be predicted. In some locations, new resources may well be needed and plans should be made to provide them in an environmentally-satisfactory manner.

The report will in particular seek to identify the issues on which further work is needed, the timetables for completing it, and who should be responsible for carrying each matter forward.

The director general proposes to put to my right hon. Friend shortly proposals for changes in arrangements for compensation of consumers for failures of supply.

Marsham Street Offices

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what has been the cost to date of the scaffolding provided for the work on his Department's offices in Marsham street; what is the expected total cost; what tendering procedures applied to the contract for the supply of scaffolding; who was the successful tenderer; and if he will make a statement; [27053]

(2) when he expects work to be completed on his Department's offices in Marsham street; and if he will make a statement; [27055]

(3) if he will give an annual breakdown of costs for the work on his Department's offices in Marsham street; and if he will make a statement; [27054]

(4) what has been the cost to date of the work on his Department's offices in Marsham street; what is the expected total cost; and if he will make a statement. [27056]

Mr. Freeman: I have been asked to reply.

As these are purely operational matters, I have asked the chief executive of the Property Advisers Civil Estate to write directly to the hon. Member.

Letter from N. E. Borrett to Mr. Nigel Jones, dated 30 April 1996:

The Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster has asked me to write to you providing information in answer to the points raised in your Ordinary Written Questions which appeared in the House of Commons Order Paper on 25 April numbered 13, 17, 18 and 21.

The main scaffolding to the building was erected in 1991 to provide a means of access to survey the end walls, to enable pieces of concrete debris made loose during freezing weather to be removed safely and to provide protection to those passing beneath the building. This remedy was adopted as the result of a review of the building conducted during 1990 and 1991 which led to the conclusion that it was beyond economical repair and refurbishment.

The cost of the scaffolding for the end walls to the towers of 2 Marsham Street to the end of 1995/96 was £763,000 and the cost by the end of the current financial year will have risen by £134,000 to £895,000. The scaffolding was procured by competitive tender from specialist scaffolding contractors. The successful contractor was Coventry Scaffolding Co. (London) from whom the scaffolding is hired. They are also responsible for conducting fortnightly statutory safety and maintenance inspections, the cost of which is subsumed within the above figures.

The cost of the work for the bi-annual inspection and removal loose concrete debris varies according to the amount of removal required, but the readily available information shows that the costs in 1994/95 and 1995/96 were £14,800 and £13,000 respectively. This service was obtained by competitive tender from specialist contractors. The successful contractor was Rope Technology Ltd.

In addition there have been from time to time, smaller scale requirements for repairs to other parts of the building which have been provided by general contractors whose services have also been procured by competitive tendering and the annual hire and repair costs amount to some £30,000.

All the scaffolding will be removed as part of the planned demolition of the building following the departure of the last of the occupants into their new accommodation in Victoria in the early part of 1997.

TRANSPORT

Ashley Health Underpass

Mrs. Maddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when work on the Ashley Health underpass on the A31 in Dorset began; when it was originally scheduled to be completed; when it is currently scheduled to be completed; and if he will make a statement. [27454]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Ms Diana Maddock, dated 1 May 1996:

As you know the Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the Ashley Health Bypass.

Work on the scheme started on 1 November 1993. It was originally scheduled for completion on 21 July 1995. The road opened in two stages, the westbound carriageway on 21 July 1995 and the eastbound carriageway on 20 September 1995. The official opening ceremony was on 20 September 1995.

We issued a certificate of substantial completion on 5 November to say that the road was fit for its purpose but the contractor is allowed one year from that date to carry out routine maintenance and remedial works required under the contract. Most of that work is now complete but there will be occasions when further work is needed and when that happens, it will be done at off peak times.

LTS Rail Franchise

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress has been made with the re-tendering of the LTS rail franchise. [27894]

Mr. Watts: On 26 April 1996, the Franchising Director announced that he had selected Prism Rail plc as preferred bidder for the LTS rail franchise. Prism plans to bring new rolling stock, lower levels of subsidy and other significant passenger benefits to the line. A formal announcement on the award of the franchise is expected to be made soon.

Airlines

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list, by airline, the number of requests made for (a) dry leasing and (b) wet leasing of aircraft over the last 12 months and the name of the operator providing the leased aircraft together with its country of registration. [26832]

Mr. Norris: Applications from UK Airlines to lease foreign registered aircraft, other than substitution flights, for the period 1 April 1995–31 March 1996, not all of which have been approved.

London Underground

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place a copy in the Library of the report from London Regional Transport on the electrical failure on the London underground on 6 April. [27414]

Mr. Norris: A report about the electrical failure on the London underground on 6 April will be placed in the Library once the investigation has been completed and a report for publication has been approved by London Underground Ltd.

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proportion of his Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96. [27520]

Mr. Norris: This information is not held centrally.

Railtrack

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what reasons led him (a) to sell Railtrack in its entirety and (b) not to sell shares in tranches. [27341]

Mr. Watts: The decision to sell substantially all of the Government's shareholding in Railtrack in a single tranche is in line with the Secretary of State's objectives in the Railways Act 1993.

Highways Agencies

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assistance is available to local authority highways agencies to meet additional redundancy costs; and if he will make a statement. [25474]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the Chief Executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Ms Joan Walley, dated 1 May 1996:

As you know, the Minister for Railways and Roads, Mr. John Watts, has asked me to reply to you Parliamentary Question asking what assistance was available to local authority highways agencies to meet additional redundancy costs and if a statement could be made.

I take this question to be referring to the work carried out by local authorities under their agency agreements with the Highways Agency for managing and maintaining the trunk road network. The current arrangements do not provide for a guaranteed level of work to be carried out by agents. Furthermore, how this work is procured and the management of staff, including redundancies, are issues which we believe are the responsibility of local authority agents. The Agency will of course meet its contractual obligations in relations to these agencies.

We are optimistic that the new agency arrangements will not in themselves give rise to significant redundancies. Although tenders for the first tranche of new-style agencies have not yet been invited, potential bidders have shown considerable interest in employing existing knowledgeable local authority staff.

We have already acquired the statutory powers to enable local authorities to compete for the new agencies and we are keen for them to do so. We are now seeking the necessary powers to enable local authority Direct Labour Organisations to compete for the term and works contracts in the new agencies. We believe that such competition will allow the road user to benefit from the best that the public and private sectors have to offer.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what proportion of his Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96. [27533]

Mr. Willetts: The information is not held centrally and is available only at disproportionate cost.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what guidance has been issued to his Department's purchasing staff regarding the implications of dealing with small and medium enterprises. [27513]

Mr. Willetts: The Office of Public Service and its agencies, HMSO and the Central Office of Information have issued guidance to purchasing staff based on guidelines produced by the Treasury and the Department of Trade and Industry. In addition, copies of the new edition of the "Think Big Buy Small" booklet will be made available to purchasing staff.

Serco Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what contracts his Department has with Serco Ltd; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [26642]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given yesterday by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Television Licences (Blind People)

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the estimated number of blind people who receive a discount for their television licence; what is the level of discount; how long it has remained at this amount; and if he will make it his policy to increase the discount for blind people financed by the extra revenue raised through ending the exemption for a television licence on second homes. [26817]

Mr. Sproat: It is estimated that some 27,000 registered blind people receive the available £1.25 reduction in the television licence fee. The last increase was in 1965 and the Government have no plans to increase the level of this concession. Any such increase would inevitably lead to demands for similar concessions from other groups of people. These demands could not be satisfied without an increase for those who pay the full licence fee, irrespective of their means.

Heritage Sites (Canals)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what estimate he has made of the number of heritage sites which are located alongside or in close proximity to canals. [27337]

Mr. Sproat: No such estimates are possible because information held on listed buildings, scheduled monuments and other heritage sites does not necessarily indicate their relationship to canals.

Voluntary Sector (Ministerial Responsibility)

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she will assume ministerial responsibility for volunteering, the voluntary sector and charity matters; and if she will make a statement. [28030]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister announced on 1 April, Official Report, column 1, that these responsibilities would be transferred to me from my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department as soon as the necessary financial and other arrangements could be made. I have agreed with my right hon. and learned Friend that I shall take over ministerial responsibility from 1 May 1996. At the same date, the staff who currently perform these functions in the Home Office will transfer to the Department of National Heritage.

I have decided that, following the transfer, my hon. Friend the Minister of State will become responsible for the work of the National Lottery Charities Board alongside his existing responsibility for lottery matters; and my noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State will become responsible for work on the voluntary sector, volunteering, charities and community development.

My Department will be seeking parliamentary authority in the summer supplementary estimates to enable it to make payments of grants and for the transfer of resources currently in the Home Office. Until such time as approval is given, the Home Office will remain accountable for the actual physical payment of these grants.

EU Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the directives which have affected her Department in each of the past three years and (a) the United Kingdom legislation introduced as a result of the directives, (b) the United Kingdom legislation which goes beyond the minimum standards set out in the directives and (c) the clauses within each piece of United Kingdom legislation which amplify the minimum standards set out in the directives. [27079]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 29 April 1996]: My Department has implemented only one directive in the last three years in an area for which it has lead policy responsibility. This is directive 93/7/EEC on the return of cultural objects unlawfully removed from the territory of a member state. Implementation was made by means of a statutory instrument, SI 1994/501, The Return of Cultural Objects Regulations 1994, which came into force on 2 March 1994. The regulations do not go beyond the absolute minimum required to comply with the directive.

Playing Fields

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when the Government will announce the results of their consultation process about giving the Sports Council statutory consultee status on the sale of playing fields. [27262]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: I have been asked to reply.

The Government's consultation on the possibility that the Sports Council should become a statutory consultee for development affecting playing fields ended on 15 March. The responses have been analysed and indicate broad support for this proposal. Subject to further consideration of some technical and legal points, we expect to lay the necessary statutory instrument before Parliament in June.

TREASURY

EDS Ltd.

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if the Inland Revenue contract with EDS mentioned in his answer of 19 July 1995, Official Report, column 1264, precluded open tendering for software development for self-assessment of taxpayers; what is the estimated cost of EDS's trial development of self-assessment software; and what is the expected cost over the next five years of full development of the software including delivery and technical support to the public. [27249]

Mr. Jack: As stated in my answer of 19 July 1995, Official Report, column 1264, the contract between the Inland Revenue and the computer company EDS Ltd. was awarded as a result of an open competition to provide all information technology services to the Inland Revenue for the contract period of 10 years. Software development for the self assessment programme falls within that contract.

Information concerning the cost to the Inland Revenue of producing an electronic version of the return which will be distributed to taxpayers is commercial confidential.

Summer Economic Forecast

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the summer economic forecast 1996 will be published. [27330]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The summer economic forecast will be published on Tuesday 9 July.

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proportion of his Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96. [27519]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Treasury does not distinguish between different sizes of supplier. The Department's aim is to award contracts which offer the best value for money, irrespective of supplier size. This follows advice on good procurement practice issued by the central unit of procurement. Small and medium enterprises are encouraged to bid for Government contracts as detailed in the video and booklet package "Think Big Buy Small" which was published in April.

Ministerial Residences

Mr. Hall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which Ministers currently pay tax on their official residences as a benefit in kind. [27515]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Several Ministers do so, but for reasons of confidentiality details of individual Ministers' tax affairs are not disclosed.

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the amount of money paid late to the private sector for goods and services in 1995–96 by each Government department. [27511]

Mrs. Angela Knight: This information is not held centrally.

Trustee Investments Act 1961

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he plans to publish the consultation document on reform of the Trustee Investments Act 1961. [28031]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The consultation document has been published today. It proposes replacement of the Trustee Investments Act by an order under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994. The proposed order would contain provisions designed to achieve the necessary level of continuing protection for beneficiaries of trusts and for trustees. The consultation period will end on 31 August. Copies of the document are available in the Libraries of the House.

Retirement Pension

Ms Corston: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list (i) average annual earnings and (ii) the annual value of the flat-rate retirement pension for a single person, for (a) the latest year for which both figures are available, (b) 2000–01, (c) 2010–11, (d) 2020–21 and (e) 2030–31, assuming that earnings grow at (1) 1½ per cent., (2) 2 per cent. and (3) 2½ per cent. per annum, and (A) that pensions remain price-related and (B) grow at the same rate as earnings. [26444]

Mr. Heald: I have been asked to reply.

The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Notes:

1. The latest year for which information is available on both earnings and basic retirement pension is 1995–96. A single person's basic retirement pension was £3,060.20 per annum, or £58,85 per week. Average earnings for all full-time adult employees in April 1995 were estimated at £17,490 per annum, or £336.30 per week (Source: new earnings survey).

2. The uprating convention for retirement pension has been followed, i.e. the weekly amount of uprated retirement pension is rounded to the nearest 5p and it is this rounded figure that forms the basis of the following year's uprating. Annual average earnings figures have been rounded to the nearest £10.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Legal Aid Board (Payments)

Mr. William Powell: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the 20 solicitors' companies in rank order which have received the most money from the Legal Aid Board and the amount paid to them in each of the last five years. [26742]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The 20 solicitors' firms receiving the most money from the Legal Aid Board in 1993–94 and 1994–95 are listed. Figures for the previous three years can be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The figures shown are based on the main final bills received from solicitors, inclusive of VAT and disbursements, in respect of civil legal aid, criminal legal aid in the magistrates courts, legal advice and assistance, assistance by way of representation and duty solicitors schemes. They do not include counsels' fees, payments on account which would have been paid or recouped, nor adjustment purposes only cases, where the costs are met by the other side and ultimately no payment is made out of the fund. Neither do they take account of amounts received or recovered by way of contributions, costs or damages awarded.

Law on Mishap or Accident

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will take action to review the law with a view to reforms such that the potential for litigation is reduced, in particular with regard to mishap or accident. [26757]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I have no present plans to do so.

Adoption Minutes

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the case for updating the requirement in Home Office Circular No. 37/1968 relating to the destruction, save for a random sample, after 21 years, of adoption minutes or minutes books in the records of magistrates courts so as to respond to subsequent changes in disclosure possibilities to adopted children. [26756]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Lord Chancellor's Department, in consultation with various interested parties, is currently undertaking a review which will address this requirement and wider related issues.

Correspondence (Immigration Appellate Authorities)

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department when the hon. Member for Rugby and Kenilworth can expect replies to his correspondence of 23 February and 4 April addressed to the immigration appellate authorities referring to Mr. Babar Shahzada of Rawalpindi, Pakistan; and what are the reasons for the delay which has so far occurred. [26754]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The immigration appellate authorities replied on 4 March to the hon. Member's letter of 23 February and on 19 April to his letter of 4 April; both within the target of 10 working days. Copies of these replies have been made available to him.

External Legal Advice

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the total cost of the external legal advice received by his Department in relation to transfers of civilian enforcement staff from the police to magistrates courts committees; and when and in what form the contents of that advice will be made available to magistrates courts committees. [26729]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: No external legal advice has been obtained relating to the transfer of civilian enforcement staff from the police to magistrates courts committees. MCCs were again reminded in circular MCD(96)1 on 3 April that whether the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 1981 apply in a particular situation depends on the facts of the case. Each MCC must determine for itself whether, given its particular circumstances, TUPE will apply, and obtain its own legal advice if necessary.

Office Space (Doncaster)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what plans he has to buy or rent office space in the Doncaster metropolitan borough council area. [26695]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Lord Chancellor's Department, including its executive agencies, has no plans to buy or rent office space in the Doncaster metropolitan borough council area.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the revenue spending estimated by his Department in connection with the private finance initiative for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26634]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: For the Lord Chancellor's Department, including the Court Service and the Public Trust Office, no revenue payments were made to the private sector in respect of private finance initiative projects in 1995–96. Current estimates suggest that such payments to the private sector will be £20,000 in 1996–97 and £6.52 million in 1997–98.

Court Service (Conflict of Interest)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what safeguards his Department took in respect of the last head of the civil business branch of the court Service, in relation to a possible conflict of interest when he took up employment as a consultant with the Drakes Group Ltd.; and if he will make a statement. [26696]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 1 May 1996:

PQ 96/467: Former Head of Civil and Family Business

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the former Head of Civil and Family Business in the Court Service.

The Court Service is satisfied that the last Head of Civil and Family Business has complied with the requirements of the Business Appointments Rules in every relevant respect.

Before his departure he applied for permission to seek post retirement consultancy work. Permission was given, subject to the completion of a further application in the event of accepting a commission with a firm with whom he had had previous dealings. This requirement applies for a period of two years following the date of his retirement. Advice on the application was taken from the Cabinet Office.

The former Head of Civil Business had no dealings with Drakes Group Limited during his employment, although he was aware of their existence. His involvement in policy work on the collection of parking fines ended over two ago.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what contracts his Department and his agencies have with Serco Ltd.; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [26639]

Mr. Evans: The Lord Chancellor's Department holds no contracts with Serco Ltd. I have asked the chief executives of its executive agencies, the Court Service, the Land Registry, the Public Records Office and the Public Trust Office to reply direct, as the question concerns operational matters.

Letter from Michael Huebner to Martin Redmond, dated 1 May 1996:

PQ 96/468: Contracts with Serco Ltd

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about Serco Ltd.

The Court Service can find no record of having any current contracts with Serco Ltd.

Letter from Julia C. Lomas to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 1 May 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary has asked me to reply to you as part of the Lord Chancellor's Department's response to your Parliamentary Question, listed on 23rd April 1996, regarding details of contracts made with Serco Ltd.

The Public Trust Office has not entered into any contracts with Serco Ltd.

Letter from Sarah Tyacke to Mr. Martin Redmond dated, 1 May 1996:

I have been asked by the Lord Chancellor's Parliamentary Secretary to reply for the Public Record Office to your question about contracts with Serco Ltd.

The Public Record Office has no contracts with Serco Ltd.

Letter from John Manthorpe to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 1 May 1996:

I have been asked by the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, to reply to your recent question concerning contracts with Serco Ltd. I can inform you that H M Land Registry has granted no contracts to this company.

Small Firms (Access to Government)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the outcome of his Department's review of how to facilitate small firms' access to appropriate areas to Government procurement in the light of good practice. [27512]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Action has been taken in a number of areas to facilitate small firms' access to the Department's procurement procedures. Our contribution to the DTI's booklet "Tendering for Government Contracts", which provides small firms with contact points has resulted in an increase in the number of enquiries. Information provided by suppliers has been distributed to purchasing staff around the Department. It is also practice for all tenders to contain a contact point for dealing with inquiries relating to the contract. An exercise to identify which of the Department's suppliers are small or medium enterprises will be completed shortly as part of the development of a national purchasing system. This will allow trends in the use of small firms to be measured in the future. I have asked my officials to keep the question of access for small firms under review and to introduce further measures where the scope for improvements can be identified.

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what proportion of his Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96. [27527]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

PRIME MINISTER

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Prime Minister what proportion of his Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96. [27524]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my office is part of the Cabinet Office. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given today by my hon. Friend, the Parliamentary Secretary, Office of Public Service.

Civil Servants (Party Policies)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister what representations he has received in the last six months from individual civil servants or their representative bodies expressing concern that civil servants have been asked to cost policies of opposition political parties; and if he will make a statement. [27359]

The Prime Minister [holding answer Tuesday 30 April]: As far as I am aware, none.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Prime Minister if (i) he and (ii) his Departmental colleagues have in the last six months asked civil servants to cost policies of opposition political parties; and if he will make a statement. [27360]

The Prime Minister [holding answer Tuesday 30 April]: Civil servants have, from time to time, been asked to cost Opposition policies, insofar as they can be identified. The guidelines on costing policies of Opposition parties, were submitted as a memorandum to the Treasury and Civil Service Select Committee in 1990, and were published in its fifth report, HC260, Session 1989-90.

WALES

Departmental Staff

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the number of staff employed at the Welsh Office in (a) 1979, (b) 1985, (c) 1990, (d) 1994 and (e) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [26989]

Mr. Hague: The full-time equivalent number of staff employed in my Department was:

Year	Number of staff
1979[1]	2,680
1985	2,402
1990	2,406
1994	2,586
1995	2,480

[1] Nearest available, December 1978.

The figures relate to April for each year except 1979.

The current figure is 2,295, a reduction of 185 since April 1995.

Departmental Advertising

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of his Department's advertising budget was allocated to local weekly newspapers in Wales in (a) 1993–94 and (b) 1994–95; and if he will make a statement. [26990]

Mr. Hague: Of the total which was spent on advertising in 1993–94, some 28 per cent. was spent with local weekly newspapers in Wales, and the corresponding figure for 1994–95 was some 21 per cent.

Community Care

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the new directors of social services in each of the new counties of Wales on community care; and if he will make a statement. [26970]

Mr. Richards: The social services inspectorate Wales has met all the new directors of social services to monitor their progress on delivering community care as part of their overall responsibilities.

Drug Abuse

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to meet the chief constable of North Wales to discuss measures to limit drug abuse; and if he will make a statement. [26971]

Mr. Richards: My right hon. Friend and I met the chief constables of all Welsh forces on 16 January this year to discuss amongst other things, drug and alcohol misuse. He has no plans to do so again in the near future.

Disability

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what he has made of the number of disabled people, by category, in each of the local authorities in Wales. [26969]

Mr. Richards: No estimates have been made of the numbers of disabled people by category in each local authority. Information currently available relating to the number of disabled persons registered under section 29 of the National Assistance Act 1948 in each of the former county councils is given in the following table. Similar information has been requested from each local authority and will be available later in 1996.

[1] The number shown for Clwyd relates to 31 March 1993.

Press Inquiries and Interviews

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales which Welsh Office Ministers will respond to press inquiries or requests for interviews on each portfolio subject in the Welsh Office responsibilities; and what changes or restrictions have been placed on the granting of interviews during recent weeks. [27156]

Mr. Hague: Ministers respond on the basis of their own portfolio of responsibilities. There have been no changes or restrictions placed on granting interviews in recent weeks.

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of his Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96. [27518]

Mr. Hague: The information requested is not held centrally.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of people entering higher education are from ethnic minority groups. [27383]

Mr. Forth: The available information is given in the following table:

Home entrants to higher education in higher education institutions in the UK 1995–96 (provisional)

Ethnic group	Percentage[1]
White	87.4
Black Caribbean	1.4
Black African	1.9
Black other	0.6
Indian	3.0
Pakistani	1.6
Bangladeshi	0.4
Chinese	0.8
Asian other	1.2
Other	1.6
All students	100.0

[1] Based on those students for whom ethnicity information was collected/provided.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to set (a) commitment and (b) recognition targets for TECS for Investors in People with firms of under 50 employees. [27188]

Mr. Paice: I expect training and enterprise councils to offer support to all firms, including those with under 50 employees. I have no plans to set TECs Investors in People targets for firms with fewer than 50 employees.

Government offices agree targets with TECs for Investors in People. The targets are linked directly with the achievement of the national targets for education and training. Lifetime target 3 calls for 70 per cent. of all organisations employing 200 or more employees, and 35 per cent. of these employing 50 or more, to be recognised as Investors in People.

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what proportion of her Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96. [27532]

Mr. Robin Squire: The information requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Student Loans Company

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are the terms of contract the Student Loans Company has with the SHL Systemhouse Europe software computer system; and if she will make a statement. [27637]

Mr. Forth: This is a matter for the Student Loans Company. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member with the information requested.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Diplomats (Fines and Offences)

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will publish figures recording the number of parking fines incurred by diplomatic missions in London during 1995. [26740]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: During 1995, the London diplomatic missions incurred a total of 1,586 unpaid parking fines, which is less than half the 1994 figure of 3,613. In February this year, the Foreign and Commonwealth Office wrote to all diplomatic missions to give them the opportunity to pay off all outstanding parking tickets, or appeal to have the ticket cancelled. Since then, payments totalling £11,600 have been received. The biggest offender is the Nigerian mission, which has appeared at or near the top of the list for the third year running. The attached table shows only missions which have 11 or more fines outstanding.

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many serious offences were allegedly committed in 1995 by persons entitled to diplomatic immunity; and how many foreign diplomats or members of their families were withdrawn from their posts in Britain in the past year as a result of alleged offences. [26741]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: Twenty-eight alleged serious offences by persons entitled to diplomatic immunity were drawn to the attention of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in 1995. "Serious offences" are defined in accordance with the report to the Foreign Affairs Committee "The Abuse of Diplomatic Immunities and Privileges (1985)" as offences which fall into the category which in certain circumstances attract a maximum penalty of six months' imprisonment or more: the majority involved drinking and driving and shoplifting.

Five diplomats or members of their families were withdrawn at our request from post in Britain as a result of alleged offences, compared with six the previous year.

North Korea

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the economic assistance given by Her Majesty's Government to North Korea. [27138]

Mr. Hanley: We have not offered any economic assistance, nor have the North Korean authorities requested any from us.

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps Her Majesty's Government are planning to take to assist the peaceful and democratic reunification of the Korean eninsula; and if he will make a statement. [27139]

Mr. Hanley: The reunification of the Korean peninsula can be achieved only through meaningful dialogue between South and North Korea. We encourage such dialogue at every opportunity and have welcomed the proposal, announced on 16 April by the Presidents of the USA and South Korea, that a four-party meeting be convened to discuss the future of the Korean peninsula. We hope that North Korea will respond positively.

China

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's policy in respect of China's policy on peace in south-east Asia and human rights. [27326]

Mr. Hanley: We continue to monitor carefully developments in south-east Asia, and to urge all sides involved in disputes in the area to pursue settlement of their differences by peaceful means.

We remain deeply concerned about human rights in China. We express our concerns on this subject to the Chinese authorities at every suitable opportunity.

Land Mines

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many countries have announced their support to date for an international ban on the production, stockpiling, sale and use of anti-personnel mines. [27550]

Mr. David Davis: To our knowledge, some 32 countries, including the United Kingdom, have announced their support for a total international ban on anti-personnel landmines.

Mr. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the effect of the upgrading of the Ranger landmines delivery system on his policy of working towards the eventual elimination of anti-personnel mines. [27551]

Mr. Davis: We intend as soon as possible to destroy nearly half of our existing stocks of anti-personnel landmines. We intend to destroy the remainder when an international ban is agreed, or when viable alternatives become available. In the meantime, should it become necessary to replace any of the remaining mines, we shall do so only with self-destruct systems. One possible option to achieve this objective would be to upgrade the existing Ranger landmine delivery system, but not final decisions have been taken. We shall continue to pursue the policy which, in our view, offers the best prospect of addressing the terrible consequences for innocent civilians of the irresponsible use of anti-personnel landmines.

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what proportion of his Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96 in respect of (a) the diplomatic wing and (b) the ODA. [27530]

Mr. Hanley: These figures are not yet available. I shall write to the hon. lady with the information as soon as possible.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Serco Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Attorney-General what contracts his Department and his agencies have with Serco Ltd.; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [26638]

The Attorney-General: The Departments and agencies for which I am responsible have no contracts with Serco Ltd.

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Attorney-General what proportion of his Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96. [27535]

The Attorney-General: The information is not held in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Patent Office

Mr. Luff: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what contractorisation of Patent Office functions has been achieved to date; and if he will make a statement. [28032]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Two contracts have been awarded as a result of the Patent Office's drive to improve quality and efficiency where this is compatible with the office's role and good value for money. These awards were made after two competitive tenders in line with EC procurement rules; they are

(i) for the facilities management of Patent Office accommodation, reception, messenger, post room, porterage and warehouse services. A contract was awarded to WS Atkins Building Management Ltd. and commenced on 1 April 1996 and

(ii) for the facilities management of the Patent Office London front office, including document reception and public search room facilities. A contract has been awarded to Hays Information Management and will begin on 1 June 1996.

Both contracts are for three years with an option to extend for a further two years at the sole discretion of the Patent Office. The bidders were required to demonstrate against a number of predetermined criteria that their bids were the most economically advantageous. The contracts contain provisions to ensure that the appropriate levels of confidentiality and quality are maintained.

Coal Reserves

Mr. Hardy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his estimate of the volume of coal reserves which will be lost if the collieries owned by the Coal Investments Company were to close. [26360]

Mr. Page [holding answer 30 April 1996]: Reports by John T. Boyd, mining engineers, published in 1993, include the following reserves estimates:

Silverdale: 21.9 million tonnes

Annesley Bentinck: 6.4 million tonnes

Markham Main: 23.2 million tonnes

Trentham (now Hem Heath): 31.9 million tonnes

No comparable figures are available for Coventry or Cwmgwilli.

Council for Science and Technology

Mr. Ingram: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library all submissions made by the Council for Science and Technology. [27181]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 30 April 1996]: The Council for Science and Technology gives its advice to Ministers direct across the table. It has made no separate written submissions.

South West Industrial Development Board

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade between what dates Mr. Roger Harris was a member of the industrial development board in the south-west regional office; what was the nature of his work; and what other positions he held in connection with the Department. [24715]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 16 April 1996]: Roger Harris joined the South West industrial development board in January 1983 and became chairman in February 1991. The board advises my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade on applications for selective financial assistance and on industrial opportunities in the south west. Mr. Harris has also been deputy chairman of the Government office for the South-West's competitiveness advisory board since November 1994.

Working Hours

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what measures he has taken to protect employees from being forced to work for unreasonably long hours. [27444]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Hours of work are best agreed between employers and their employees, or their representatives, in the light of their own particular circumstances.

Employees who work long hours are protected under the general duties of the Health and Safety at Work etc., Act 1974. Under the Management of Health and Safety at Work Regulations 1992, employers are required to carry out a risk assessment to identify hazards, such as fatigue, and to evaluate the extent of the risks involved, so that measures can be taken to comply with the general duties of the Health and Safety at Work etc., Act 1974.

Financial Assistance

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what financial assistance has been given by his Department since 1980 to (a) Bowring (South West) Ltd., (b) Cablechief Ltd., (c) Cornish Stairways Ltd., (d) Fivebeat Ltd., (e) Prawn Farm Investments Ltd. and (f) Conosil Ltd. [24713]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 16 April 1996]: Two of the companies have received assistance under the Department's principal regional, enterprise and technology schemes since 1980:

Company	Scheme	Payment £	Date
Cornish Stairways Ltd.	Regional development grant	47,377	1986–88
	Enterprise initiative	1,265	1990
	Regional enterprise grant	25,000	1992
Conosil Systems Ltd.	Microprocessor application project	28,776	1995

Loans to Conosil Systems Ltd., were guaranteed under the loan guarantee scheme in 1983 and 1985.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what financial assistance has been given by his Department since 1980 to (a) M. Squared Technology Ltd., (b) Match Sportswear Ltd., (c) Smart Shape Ltd., (d) Havenfire Ltd., (e) Beares Highland Ltd., (f) Beares Engineering Ltd. and (g) H. Beare and Sons Ltd.

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 25 March 1996]: Only one of the companies has received assistance under the Department's principal regional, enterprise and technology schemes since 1980:

Company	Scheme	Payment £	Year
M Squared Technology Ltd.	Consultancy Initiative	3,000	1992
	Eureka	261,525	1993–96
	General Industrial Collaborative Project	58,843	1993
	Small Firms Merit Award for Research and Technology (SMART)	57,898	1994–95
	Regional Enterprise Grant	25,000	1985

A loan to Smart Shape Ltd. (later trading as South West Leisure Products Ltd.) was guaranteed under the Loan Guarantee Scheme in 1985.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what role was played by (a) Mr. Kenneth Holmes, (b) Mr. Roger Harris and (c) Mr. Michael Jordan in the granting of DTI financial assistance to (i) Pendennis Shipyard Ltd., in 1993 and 1995, (ii) Queensbury International Ltd., (iii) South West Leisure Products, (iv) ModernTask Ltd. and (v) Thimbles Ltd; and which of these individuals (1) were at the time or (2) subsequently became directors of these companies. [24714]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 16 April 1996]: Mr. Kenneth Holmes, acting as an external accountancy adviser, advised the Department on the regional selective assistance application from Pendennis Shipyard Ltd.

Mr. Roger Harris was chairman of the South West industrial development board when it considered the application by Pendennis Shipyard Ltd. but, because of a potential conflict of interest, absented himself from the board meeting in February 1993 which decided to recommend a grant.

In respect of Mr. Michael Jordan's involvement in advising the Department on these cases, I refer the hon. Gentlemen to my answers of 22 March, Official Report, column 373 and 29 April, Official Report, column 364. As well as holding the directorship of Pendennis Shipyard Ltd., Michael Jordan has also been a director of Queensbury International Ltd. since August 1993. No other directorships of the five companies listed have been held by Messrs. Holmes, Harris and Jordan.

Coal Mining

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much coal was produced from deep mines in (a) England, (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) the United Kingdom in each year since 1980; and if he will make statement. [27500]

Mr. Page: British Coal deep-mined production was as follows:

Thousand tonnes

	England	Wales	Scotland	United Kingdom
1980–81	94,161	8,280	7,846	110,287

United Kingdom deep-mined production in 1995 from the privatised coal industry totalled 35,103 thousand tonnes in 1995 compared with 31,854 thousand tonnes in 1994. Separate figures for England, Wales, and Scotland are not available.

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many miners were employed in (a) England, and (b) Wales, (c) Scotland and (d) the United Kingdom as a whole in each year since 1980; and if he will make a statement. [27439]

Mr. Page: The number of underground wage earners[1] on British Coal colliery books was as follows:

At the end of 1995 about 10,000 mineworkers were employed in the large deep mines in operation in the private sector.

Working Time Directive

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received from the Confederation of British Industry and the Institute of Directors about the working time directive. [27338]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The CBI and the Institute of Directors have consistently made clear that regulation of working time through the working time directive will damage competitiveness and undermine flexible ways of working.

Prompt Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what date he plans to publish figures showing the percentage of bills paid promptly by Government Departments in 1995–96. [27510]

Mr. Page: Government Departments and their agencies are required to monitor their payment performance and publish the results in their annual or departmental reports. In addition, my Department is producing a table of results of all Departments and their agencies for 1995–96. This will be available, in line with previous years, before the summer recess.

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proportion of his Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96. [27521]

Mr. John M. taylor: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

North Korea

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what recent aid was given to the Democratic People's Republic of Korea by the European Union; and if he will make a statement. [27137]

Mr. Hanley: The European Community Humanitarian Office has contributed 290,000 ecu—approximately £228,346—in late 1995 to North Korea following the flood.

United Kingdom assistance is described in my answer to the hon. Member for Fife, North-East, Mr. Campbell, on 7 February 1996, Official Report, column 192. We will consider a further contribution to the IFRC appeal depending on the findings of the nutritionist's report which is expected shortly.

Natural Resources Institute

Mr. Elletson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the Natural Resources Institute will transfer to new ownership. [28061]

Mr. Hanley: We have now completed negotiations for the transfer of the Natural Resources Institute to the University of Greenwich and for associated arrangements with the other members of the Consortium—the University of Edinburgh, Imperial college and Wye college. Contracts were signed on 30 April and became effective on 1 May.

This is a very satisfactory outcome. It achieves the objectives set by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Overseas Development, namely maintenance of a multi-disciplinary centre of natural resources expertise, on which ODA and others can draw in order to help meet our aims for the overseas aid programme; value-for-money for the taxpayer; and a positive future for the staff. It also marks the first privatisation of a pubic sector research establishment by transfer to the university sector.

DEFENCE

Land Mines

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to acquire Italian anti-personnel mines which (a) self-destruct and (b) self-deactivate. [27544]

Mr. Arbuthnot: As my hon. Friend the Minister of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs stated in his announcement on 23 April 1996, Official Report, column 84, the UK will work actively towards a total world-wide ban on anti-personnel mines. If we need to replace our remaining anti-personnel mines before an international ban is agreed, we will procure only those with a self-destruct capability. No final decisions on the procurement of these mines, including a source, have been taken and any decision will take account of all relevant factors, including progress towards a total worldwide ban.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 23 April, Official Report, column 84, what plans he has to ensure that future British self-destruct anti-personnel mines will be used only in marked, fenced or monitored areas, will be cleared as soon as feasible and will be used strictly in accordance with the laws of armed conflict. [27322]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 30 April 1996]: Instructions have been issued that current non-self-destruct anti-personnel mines must be placed in a marked or fenced or monitored area and that every effort must be made to avoid civilian casualties. No decision has been made on procurement or deployment of self-destruct anti-personnel mines, but instructions will be issued to ensure that use will be in accordance with the international laws of war.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 23 April, Official Report, column 84, if the new restriction that British non-self-destruct anti-personnel mines will be used only in exceptional circumstances will apply equally to future self-destruct anti-personnel mines deployed by British forces. [27321]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 30 April 1996]: No decision has been taken on the procurement or use of self-destruct anti-personnel mines.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 23 April, Official Report, column 84, what assessment has been made of whether the military utility of Britain's anti-personnel mines is affected by whether such weapons are also deployed by an adversary. [27325]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 30 April 1996]: We believe that, in exceptional circumstances, where there are no alternatives available, it may be necessary for British forces to use anti-personnel mines in order to ensure that they are properly protected. Such circumstances may obtain whether or not such weapons are deployed by an adversary.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 23 April, Official Report, column 84, which makes of anti-personnel mines will be destroyed; and which makes will be destroyed completely. [27317]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 30 April 1996]: No final decision has been made on which types of anti-personnel mines will be destroyed. However, a number of Ranger and Elsie mines will probably be destroyed.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 23 April, Official Report, column 84, when he expects to reach a decision on the replacement of existing non-self-destructing anti-personnel mines with self-destructing ones; and when is the planned in service date. [27318]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 30 April 1996]: We are currently considering our future requirement for anti-personnel land mines, but have reached no decisions. Any new mines introduced into service would have a self-destruct capability and would fully meet the requirements of international laws of armed conflict. Such a decision will take account of all relevant factors, including progress towards an international ban and whether a suitable alternative is found.

Mr. Menzies Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions he (a) has had and (b) plans to have with the US Department of Defense concerning the review of US policy on anti-personnel mines; and if he will make a statement. [27549]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We keep in close touch with the US and other allies on this issue.

Mr. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if in the formulation of military policy regarding the use of anti-personnel mines he will take account of the recent statements by General John Shalikashvili and General Norman Schwarzkopf. [27548]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We have noted the open letter to President Clinton, signed by General Schwarzkopf and others, about anti-personnel mines; and the views on these weapons attributed to the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General Shalikashvili. Our policy on anti-personnel mines reflects our national judgment of the balance to be struck between humanitarian goals and the continuing needs of our armed forces until there is international agreement on a total ban on such mines, or viable alternatives are developed.

Mr. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what discussions his Department is engaged in regarding the upgrading of the Ranger land mine delivery system; which United Kingdom companies are involved in these discussions; and what plans he has for part of the work connected with the upgrading to be carried out in Britain. [27546]

Mr. Arbuthnot: No decision has been taken to upgrade the Ranger land mine delivery system. If we need to replace our remaining anti-personnel mines, upgrading the Ranger system is one option which would be considered. The manufacturer of this system is aware of this. As no decisions have been taken, potential work to be undertaken in Britain cannot be determined. Any new or upgraded land mines would have a self-destruct capability. Final decisions on future procurement would take account of all relevant factors, including progress towards a total world-wide ban.

Mr. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the recent report of the International Committee of the Red Cross regarding anti-personnel mines. [27547]

Mr. Arbuthnot: We have noted this report, but do not share its conclusions.

Mr. Campbell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what military criteria will determine the use by British forces of anti-personnel mines. [27545]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Ministers must be satisfied that the use of anti-personnel mines is essential to ensure that British troops are properly protected and that there are no practicable alternative ways of achieving that end.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 23 April, Official Report, column 84, how many anti-personnel mines will be destroyed as a result of his announcement on 23 April. [27319]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 30 April 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr. Clark) on 29 April 1996, Official Report, column 394.

Equipment Upgrades

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what major equipment upgrades the RAF is planned to receive over the next three years. [27028]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This information is given in table 9, pages 63–64, of the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1996", Cm3223, which has been published today and a copy of which is in the Library of the House.

Kaymar Studios

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what contracts his Department has entered into with Kaymar Studios; and if he will make a statement. [25927]

Mr. Soames: My Department maintains central records of contracts which are valued at over £5,000 and which are let centrally by contracts branches within the Ministry of Defence head office, the Procurement Executive and service command headquarters. These records cover the last six years. Low-value contracts issued under local purchase powers and Defence agency contracts are not recorded centrally.

No record has been found of any contract with a business called Kaymar Studios having been let centrally over the last six years. It would not be possible, without disproportionate cost, to establish whether any contracts have been placed with a business of that name under local purchase powers or at an earlier date.

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of his Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96. [27534]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information is not available in the form requested and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Farmers (Compensation Payments)

Mr. Illsley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much money was spent on compensation payments for price cuts to farmers in Northern Ireland in 1995. [26219]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 April 1996]: I understand that the hon. Member is seeking information on the effects of increased payments made to farmers under the 1992 common agricultural policy reform measures which shifted the balance of CAP expenditure away from market support to schemes aimed at supporting production at the level of individual farms. It is not possible precisely to identify the elements of these payments which would have been compensatory but the total amount paid in 1995 was £102 million. The equivalent amount paid to farmers in 1992, which was the last year in which market support measures were predominant, was £25.45 million.

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the revenue spending estimated by his Department in connection with the private finance initiative for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26628]

Sir John Wheeler: No specific PFI contracts have as yet been agreed and signed but the procurement process has begun across a range of projects including water and sewerage, roads, transport, health, education, accommodation and information technology schemes. As a consequence, it is too early to estimate the revenue spending in connection with these projects.

The private investment levered in to date in Northern Ireland relates mainly to the Laganside development, housing and urban regeneration. The public sector contribution associated with these projects is as follows:

1995–96: £70 million

1996–97: £61 million

1997–98: £60 million.

Teachers (Qualifications)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his assessment of the Irish Government's continued Irish language requirement for secondary school teachers with United Kingdom qualifications; and if he will test this requirement at the European Court of Justice. [26734]

Mr. Ancram: The Irish Government's Irish language requirement for secondary school teachers with United Kingdom qualifications corresponds with the teaching qualifications it requires of its own nationals. I will accordingly not be referring this matter to the European Court of Justice.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many Irish schoolteachers had their qualifications recognised under EU rules in 1993–94 in (a) Northern Ireland and (b) Great Britain; and how many United Kingdom school teachers had their qualifications recognised in the Irish Republic. [26733]

Mr. Ancram: Forty-five Irish schoolteachers in Northern Ireland and 198 in Great Britain. The number of United Kingdom schoolteachers in the Irish Republic is a matter for the Irish Government.

Serco Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what contracts his Department and his agencies have with Serco Ltd.; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [26684]

Sir John Wheeler: The Northern Ireland Office, Northern Ireland Departments and their agencies have the following four contracts:

1. Roads Service: Maintenance of electronic works. Finishing in 2000.
2. Roads Service: Maintenance of variable message signs. Finishing in 2000.
3. Roads Service: Supply of motorway control system for the M2/M3, Belfast cross-harbour bridge. Finishing in 1996–97.
4. Water Service: Collection and transportation of water quality samples (western division). Finishing 31 March 1998.

In all of these contracts, the penalty for seeking early termination is "reasonable costs". The costs of the contracts have not been given on grounds of commercial confidentiality.

Law Reform Advisory Committee

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland which (a) bodies and (b) individuals the Law Reform Advisory Committee has consulted on judicial review; and when it will issue its report. [26736]

Sir John Wheeler: The Law Reform Advisory Committee has held consultations with the following individuals and bodies:

The Northern Ireland Prison Service

The Crown Solicitors Office

Crown Counsel, Mr. Patrick Coghlin Q.C

Mr. Ronald Weatherup Q.C

Mr. Bernard McCluskey B.L

Mr. John Larkin B.L

Mr. Kevin Winter, Solicitor

Mr. Justice Kerr

Mr. Jack Burton

Professor Brigid Hadfield.

The first draft of a report on judicial review is still at an early stage; it is too early yet to judge when it will be issued.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what research has been commissioned by the Law Reform Advisory Committee for Northern Ireland on a consultancy basis; what fees have been paid for such research; and what consideration has been given to the appointment of a full-time researcher. [26735]

Sir John Wheeler: Since its inception in 1989, the Law Reform Advisory Committee has used consultants on certain topics. Mrs. Norma Dawson, Mr. John Jackson and Mrs. Eithne Harkness, from the school of law at Queen's university, Belfast, have conducted research in the areas of business tenancies, civil evidence and actions arising from insidious diseases respectively.

The fees paid for research commissioned by the committee to date amounts to the sum of £4.300.00.

Consideration has been given to the appointment of a full-time researcher, but it is the presently held view that the use of an expert consultant in particular areas is a more constructive deployment of committee fund.

Fair Employment Tribunal

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many of the 410 applications registered with the Northern Ireland fair employment tribunal during 1995 resulted in judgments in favour of the applicant; of those how many (a) were in favour of (i) Catholics and (ii) Protestants, and (b) concerned (1) promotions, (2) hiring and dismissals and (3) unfair treatment at work. [26648]

Mr. Ancram: Of the complaints registered in 1995, one complaint to date has been determined in favour of the applicant. The applicant was a Protestant and the complaint concerned unfair treatment at work.

Higher Education (Irish Nationals)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the current annual cost to the Government of educating citizens of the Irish Republic in institutes of higher education in Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [26731]

Mr. Ancram: I am not yet in a position to answer the hon. Gentleman's question, but I will write to him in due course and place a copy in the Library in the House.

Male Rape

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many cases of male rape were reported in Northern Ireland in (a) 1985 and (b) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [27018]

Sir John Wheeler: There is no offence of "male rape" recorded by the Royal Ulster Constabulary. For recording purposes, the offence of "buggery with a male person without his consent" is grouped with other buggery offences including those with consent and those with females. It is not therefore possible to provide figures for any one of these offences in isolation.

Schools Expenditure

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the capital expenditure for each of the past five years in (a) primary schools and (b) secondary and grammar schools in (i) Northern Ireland and (ii) Strangford constituency. [26963]

Mr. Ancram: Capital expenditure by education and library boards on controlled schools and grants paid by the Department of Education on approved capital expenditure incurred by voluntary and grant-maintained integrated schools for each of the financial years 1989–90 to 1993–94 is set out as follows.

Year	Primary schools	Secondary and grammar schools
Northern Ireland
1989–90	9.517	27.494
1990–91	11.689	41.317
1991–92	11.534	44.043
1992–93	15.635	45.754
1993–94	17.585	42.786
Strangford constituency
1989–90	0.491	1.482
1990–91	0.360	3.670
1991–92	0.484	4.101
1992–93	0.512	0.914
1993–94	0.589	1.130

Belfast Gazette

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the circulation of the Belfast Gazette; and if this figure is confirmed by the Audit Bureau of Circulations. [26861]

Sir John Wheeler: The weekly subscription to the Belfast Gazette is 208. It is also available from HMSO Northern Ireland.

The circulation figure is not confirmed by the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Ballywalter Primary School

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the enrolment in each of the past five years at Ballywalter primary school; what is the expected enrolment of the school in each of the next five years; what proposals there are to provide additional accommodation at the school; how many places in primary one will be available in the next academic year; how many applicants there are for places in primary one at the school for the next academic year; how many pupils there have been per teacher for each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement. [26964]

Mr. Ancram: The enrolments in each of the past five years are as follows:

Year	Number of pupils enrolled
1991–92	138 (at January 1991)
1992–93	135 (at October 1992)
1993–94	141 (at October 1993)
1994–95	141 (at October 1994)
1995–96	153 (at October 1995)

It is not possible to project accurately an enrolment figure for each of the next five years. However, the Department has approved a temporary variation to increase the enrolment number of the school to 161 for the 1996–97 school year.

Provision of controlled primary schools places in Ballywalter is the responsibility of the South-Eastern education and library board. The provision of a temporary classroom at Ballywalter primary school is currently under consideration by the South-Eastern education and library board.

The Department has approved a temporary variation to the school's admissions number from 21 to 25 for the 1996–97 school year. The school has received 27 applications.

The number of pupils per teacher—the pupil: teacher ratio—over the last five years are:

Year	Pupil: teacher ratio
1991–92	23.0
1992–93	19.9
1993–94	21.2
1994–95	20.9
1995–96	21.0

Police White Paper

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he intends to publish the White Paper on policing structures. [27629]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Following wide consultation, I have today published a White Paper setting out proposals for the reform of the tripartite structure for policing governance in Northern Ireland.

The proposals seek to build on the consensus which has been shown to exist for a police service which upholds and is seen to uphold the law fairly with rigorous impartiality, efficiency and effectiveness, which:

is accountable both to the law, and through a strong and independent Police Authority, to the community; and is responsive to the community, accordingly commanding widespread confidence and support.

To this end, the proposals would:

enhance and render transparent the accountability of the police to the community through the Police Authority; safeguard the operational independence of the police, so ensuring that the law is enforced impartially without partisan political interference; enable the community, through the Police Authority, to engage meaningfully in shaping the future direction of policing through the provision of statutory objective setting and police planning processes; and achieve greater efficiency in the use of resources devoted to policing by removal of bureaucracy and duplication of effort.

The White paper offers proposals for the basis of future legislation. Such legislation would, however, be informed by the forthcoming discussions on policing in the all-party political talks that are due to take place on an open agenda, and it would be shaped to reflect any agreements which emerge.

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proportion of his Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96. [27525]

Sir John Wheeler: Within the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments, the information requested is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Police Complaints Report

Mr. Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will lay before parliament the 1995 annual report of the Independent Commission for Police Complaints for Northern Ireland; and if he will make a statement. [28060]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I have today arranged for the 1995 annual report of the Independent Commission for Police Complaints to be laid before Parliament.

The report, which follows the format of last year's, comments on the work of the commission in 1995 including the supervision of the investigation of complaints against the police and the commission's role in disciplinary procedures arising from those complaints. It also contains details from a public attitudes survey conducted for the commission on the extent of public awareness of its work and confidence in its procedures.

For the first time, the report covers a year under conditions of declared terrorist ceasefires. This has led to some interesting changes in the number of complaints in certain categories and also to the way in which complaints arise. We will have to see whether or not the Provisional IRA's actions on 9 February alter these new trends.

The number of complaints fell overall by 12 per cent. from the 1994 level; a greater reduction in the number of complaints in the early part of 1995 was offset by a significant rise in August and September. The commission supervised its highest-ever proportion of complaints—15.7 per cent. The percentage of cases informally resolved continued to rise, with 18.3 per cent. in 1995 compared to 15.7 per cent., 10 per cent. and 7.6 per cent. in the previous three years.

The report shows that the commission and its staff had another busy year. I would like to record by my thanks to them for their continued dedication and commitment.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Upper Earnings Limit

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans there are to index link the upper earnings limit. [27385]

Mr. Heald: The upper earnings limit for class 1 national insurance contributions is, in effect, already index linked. Section 5(3) of the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992 links it to the weekly rate of the basic category A retirement pension, which is increased each year as part of the annual uprating of benefits. We have no plans to change these arrangements.

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of his Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96. [27522]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply that I gave her on 27 November 1995, Official Report, column 512.

Pensions

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 14 March, Official Report, column 757, what is the Government Actuary's assumption of the numbers of pensioners receiving and likely to receive a state earnings-related pension in 1994–95, 1995–96, 2000–01, 2010–11, 2020–21 and 2030–31. [26449]

Mr. Heald: The estimated number of recipients of the state-earnings-related pension was 4.2 million in 1994–95 rising to 4.6 million in 1995–96.

Estimates of the number of future recipients are not available.

Note: Figures are rounded to the nearest 0.1 million.

Source: The Government Actuary's Department.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 14 March, Official Report, column 757, what was the estimated total cost of (a) flat rate retirement pensions and (b) state earnings-related pensions for the United Kingdom in 1995–96, in pounds sterling and as a percentage of gross domestic product; and what is the Government Actuary's estimate of these costs, allowing for the provisions of the Pensions Act 1995 in respect of pensionable ages for women, at 1995–96 prices, assuming (i) price uprating and (ii) earnings uprating of flat-rate benefits and the earnings limits in (1) 2000–1, (2) 2010–11, (3) 2020–21 and (4) 2030–31. [26452]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. The information given in the table is for Great Britain, but includes the cost of pensions paid to persons residing overseas.

The tables give the expenditure figures and the Government Actuary's estimates of future costs allowing for all the provisions of the 1995 Pensions Act.

Table 1: 1995–96 expenditure

	Total cost £ billion	Percentage of GDP
Basic pension	27.9	3.9
State earnings-related pension (SERPS)	2.3	0.3

SCOTLAND

Health Service Standards

2. Dr. Reid: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chief executive of the Scottish national health service management executive to discuss standards of service; and if he will make a statement. [26050]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I meet the Chief Executive of the NHS in Scotland regularly to discuss with him how further to improve health care for the people of Scotland.

16. Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chairmen of health boards to discuss NHS services. [26068]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend and I meet health board chairmen regularly to discuss matters of current interest.

Children (Safety)

17. Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent discussions he has held relating to the safety of children in organised groups. [26069]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My hon. Friend the Minister for Education recently hosted an informal discussion with representatives of voluntary youth organisations and heard views about many topics, including child safety and youth work leaders.

Voluntary Organisations (Funding)

18. Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met with representatives of voluntary organisations to discuss funding allocations for the current financial year. [26070]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Officials met the Scottish Council for Voluntary Organisations last week to discuss local government reorganisation. The discussions included funding issues.

School Conditions

19. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met representatives of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss the conditions in Scottish schools. [26071]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: My right hon. Friend has met representatives of COSLA on four occasions recently, but conditions in schools were not among the topics raised.

Crime Statistics

20. Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many crimes were committed in 1980; and how many in the last year for which figures are available. [26072]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Some 364,587 and 502,802 respectively.

Secondary School Expenditure

21. Sir David Knox: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much was spent per pupil in secondary schools in Scotland in the most recent year for which figures are available; and what was the figure in 1978–79, at constant prices. [26073]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Current expenditure per secondary pupil in 1993–94 was £2,846. That is 38 per cent. higher in real terms than in 1979.

NHS Finance

22. Mr. Ernie Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the chairmen of health boards to discuss NHS finances. [26074]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My right hon. Friend and I meet health board chairmen regularly to discuss a wide range of issues. The last meeting was on Friday 1 March.

Inward Investment

23. Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what estimate he has made of the number of jobs which have been brought to Scotland by inward investors over the last 12 months. [26075]

Mr. Kynoch: The latest figures available are for 1994–95, when Locate in Scotland helped to attract to Scotland inward investment projects involving the planned creation or safeguarding of more than 12,300 jobs. Figures for 1995–96 will be published in the Locate in Scotland annual review in June.

Meat Processing Industry

24. Mrs. Adams: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to meet the Scottish Trades Union Congress to discuss the current situation in the meat processing industry. [26076]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State with responsibility for agriculture, forestry and the environment addressed the STUC conference on the beef issue on 17 April.

Roads

25. Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he estimates the new M8, M77 and A77 link will be completed; and if he will make a statement. [26077]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Construction of the M77 Ayr road route, linking the M8/M77 and the A77, is proceeding to schedule and the road is expected to open to traffic in November 1996.

Highlands and Islands Transport Links

26. Mr. Macdonald: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what improvements he plans to transport links in the Highlands and Islands in the current financial year. [26078]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In 1996–97 I have approved investment by Caledonian MacBrayne in a new minor vessel to provide the ferry service across the sound of Harris. I shall provide financial assistance for the improvement of harbour works connected with this service at Newton ferry, North Uist, and Leverburgh, Harris. I shall also be providing financial assistance for the construction of both the new ferry terminal in Stornoway harbour and for the improvement of the ferry berth at Ullapool harbour to provide new berthing facilities for the new major vessel operated by Caledonian MacBrayne on the Ullapool-Stornoway service. Highlands and Islands Airports Limited is pursuing the redevelopment of Inverness airport terminal under the private finance initiative.

The proposed causeway at Berneray is the responsibility of Western Isles Council. The council has received an offer of European regional development fund objective 1 funding of up to 50 per cent. of the estimated project cost. The project will also be considered for challenge funding in future years if and when the council submits an application to the Scottish Office.

Two major trunk road schemes are planned to start, to improve the A830 between Polnish bridge and Loch Nan Uamh and the A9 between Logie Easter and Garrick bridge. Almost £16 million has also been allocated for maintenance and minor improvements to the trunk road network.

Victoria Hospital, Glasgow

Mr. Watson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the extent to which the prevention of an in-house bid in the competitive tendering process for support services in respect of Victoria hospital, Glasgow NHS trust complied with Government guidelines. [27052]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The in-house service was not prevented from bidding for the contract for support services; it was free to bid for the contract on the same basis as commercial tenderers. In addition, the trust offered to fund independent external advice for any staff group who wished to mount a bid. The offer was not taken up and no in-house bid was made.

Scottish Banknotes

27. Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has for discussions in the EC about the future of Scottish banknotes. [26079]

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what discussions he has had about the future of Scottish banknotes. [26053]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There is no change in the Government's policy of supporting the issue of banknotes by commercial banks in Scotland, which was so valiantly defended by Sir Walter Scott in the 19th century.

My right hon. Friend has no plans for discussions on Scottish banknotes in the European Community.

Beef

28. Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next plans to visit Aberdeenshire to inspect the beef industry. [26080]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: My right hon. and hon. Friends have met farmers from many parts of Scotland, including Aberdeenshire, over the last few weeks and such contacts will continue.

Automated Finger Printing System

29. Mr. Batiste: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the benefits of the police automated finger printing system in combating crime in Scotland. [26081]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Since 1992, the number of people identified from their fingerprints has quadrupled and the cost per search has been halved.

Unemployment

30. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about unemployment in Scotland. [26082]

Mr. Kynoch: Unemployment has declined by 56,000 since December 1992 and in March 1996 was below 200,000 for the 10th consecutive month.

Scottish unemployment is well below the European Union average and less than in France, Spain and Italy.

Scottish Enterprise

31. Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next intends to meet representatives of Scottish Enterprise to discuss trends in the Scottish economy; and if he will make a statement. [26083]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend expects to meet the chairman of Scottish Enterprise this month.

Scottish Economic Council

34. Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he last met the Scottish Economic Council to discuss employment in Scotland. [26086]

Mr. Kynoch: On Friday 22 March 1996.

Beaufort's Dyke

33. Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has for further surveys to be conducted at and around the Beaufort's Dyke area. [26085]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Further surveys of the Beaufort's Dyke area will be conducted from 26 April to 17 May; and from 19 to 29 July. The results of these surveys will be published.

35. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received regarding the further survey of the Beaufort's Dyke area. [26087]

Mr. Robertson: Apart from the hon. Gentleman, representations have been received from the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman).

Bible John Case

Mr. McFall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if the Crown Office has received a report from Strathclyde police subsequent to the DNA testing of the exhumed body associated with the Bible John case. [27567]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate informs me that Strathclyde police have kept the regional procurator fiscal at Glasgow informed of progress in respect of forensic tests being carried out on their behalf. Strathclyde police are unable to forecast when the results of the tests will be available, but will report them to the regional procurator fiscal as soon as they are.

Examination Results

32. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many pupils passed standard grades last year in number and as a percentage of the population; what were the equivalent figures (i) five, (ii) 10 and (iii) 20 years ago; and if he will make a statement. [26084]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The available information is given in the table:

Exam year	Number of pupils in cohort	S4 candidates awarded one or more standard/ordinary grades (at 1–3/A–C)		S4 candidates awarded one or more standard/ordinary grades (at 1–6/A–E)
		Number	Percentages[1]	Number	Percentages[1]
1975	90,100	51,727	57.4	—	—
1985	84,300	55,231	65.5	—	—
1990	66,200	45,899	69.4	57,708	87.2
1995[2]	64,000	52,594	82.2	61,132	95.5

— Comparable data not available.
[1] Percentage of pupils who were in cohort at S1.
[2] Provisional.

These figures show a substantial growth in numbers gaining nationally recognised qualifications. Standard grade courses are designed to meet the needs of pupils of all abilities. Achievement is measured against clearly stated standards.

Education Institute of Scotland

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many Education Institute of Scotland funding campaign postcards he received after 24 February. [27349]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: A total of 12,024.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on progress in respect of the prosecution of those responsible for blowing up PA103 over Lockerbie. [26163]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: It is now almost four and a half years since demands were made of the Libyan Government for surrender of the two Libyan accused for trial in Scotland or the United States of America. These demands have been endorsed by the United Nations Security Council, It is a matter of regret that the Libyan Government have thus far not complied with these demands, but the resolution of this matter lies in their hands.

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proportion of his Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96. [27523]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I refer the hon. Member to my answer of 28 November 1995 at column 589 to her similar question relating to 1994–95. Our financial and procurement systems in use in 1995–96 had no facility for categorising suppliers according to the size of their business. We are currently implementing a new system which we intend to use to help us to provide the information requested in future years.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Specified Bovine Offal

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many prosecutions have been taken out by his Department (a) for abuses of the specified bovine offal regulations and (b) against animal feed manufacturers for not conforming to the animal feed ban in each year since 1989. [26480]

Mrs. Browning: At 8 March 1996, there were 2,827 local veterinary inspectors appointed to inspect and certify farm animals for export. Of these, 50 were appointed between 1 January 1995 and 8 March 1996. Their names will not be disclosed under paragraph 4g of part II of the code of practice on access to Government information.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent reports he has received from the State Veterinary Service concerning mishandling of specified bovine offals in slaughterhouses. [26419]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for High Peak (Mr. Hendry) on 30 April 1996.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many prosecutions have been taken out by his Department (a) for abuses of the specified bovine offal regulations and (b) against animal feed manufacturers for not conforming to the animal feed ban in each year since 1989. [26480]

Mrs. Browning: There is currently one case before the courts for non-compliance with the regulations on specified bovine offals. A number of other cases are under investigation.

There have been no prosecutions by this Department against animal feed manufacturers for not complying with the ruminant protein feed ban.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many animals were exported from the United Kingdom in 1995 (a) with a further fattening export certificate and (b) with a for slaughter certificate. [26442]

Mrs. Browning: The first table shows the numbers of farm animals, by species, certified for export from Great Britain to other member states in 1995 with further fattening and slaughter export certificates respectively. The figures are collated from the ANIMO system. They remain provisional and subject to amendment.

The second table gives details of exports from Northern Ireland to other member states in 1995. The statistical records used to obtain the information do not enable the numbers of breeding certificates and further fattening certificates issued to be separately identified.

Numbers of animals certified for export from GB in 1995 with further fattening or slaughter certification

	Further fattening	Slaughter
Cattle	347,450	0
Sheep	976,010	89,430
Goats	0	6
Pigs	790	900
Poultry	[1]6,383,640	217,000

[1] Comprises poultry certified as breeding and production; and as day-old chicks.

Numbers of animals certified for export from Northern Ireland in 1995 with breeding/further fattening or slaughter certification

	Breeding/further fattening	Slaughter
Cattle	7,880	1,150
Sheep	370	0
Pigs	2,240	230
Poultry	[1]5,617,000	10,860

[1] Comprises poultry certified as breeding and production; and as day-old chicks.

Scrapie

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what information his Department has evaluated on the persistence of scrapie on lands used for the grazing of sheep. [24421]

Mrs. Browning: No studies have been carried out on the persistence of scrapie on lands used for the grazing of sheep. On-going epidemiological studies into scrapie may, however, throw some light on the mechanism of infection. A paper by Wisniewski and others entitled "Mites as vectors for scrapie" which was published in The Lancet on 20 April is currently being evaluated.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his oral statement of 20 March, Official Report, columns 387–96, on what day he was advised of the new evidence regarding a possible link between BSE and Creutzfeldt Jakob disease. [24704]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Martin) on 29 April 1996, Official Report, column 409.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what date he was first informed of the link between BSE and the new strain of CJD. [24833]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 16 April 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Portsmouth, South (Mr. Martin) on 29 April 1996, Official Report, column 409.

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minster of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what liaison there has been between his Ministry and the US National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Maryland on research into BSE and CJD. [24905]

Mrs. Browning: UK officials have frequent contact with US officials by letter, phone and by personal contact at international meetings. This has extended to the provision of research materials and information when requested.

Mr. Home Robertson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make an exemption from the rule on the destruction of the carcases of cattle over the age of 30 months for highland cattle and other slow-maturing native breeds from herds where there is no history of BSE. [25177]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 16 April 1996]: Officials are working on a scheme under which animals which can safely be identified as low risk may be sold for human consumption. I hope to issue a consultation paper very shortly.

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all projects related to spongiform encephalopathies that receive funding from Government, or are under consideration for funding; and if he will give the start date and proposed end date for each project. [23198]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: The attached table shows both the projects that currently receive funding by MAFF, that are related to spongiform encephalopathies. Research funded by the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council, the Medical Research Council and the Department of Health may also be relevant.

Thirteen records listed.

Mr. Welsh: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what sums his Department has allocated to research into the preparation of a live test for BSE; and if he will make a statement on the conclusions of that research. [23361]

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the projects that receive funding from Government, or are under consideration for funding, that are related to establishing a live identification test for spongiform encephalopathies; and if he will give the start date and proposed end date for each project. [23197]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: The attached table shows both the projects that currently receive funding and the projects that are currently being considered for funding by MAFF, that are related to establishing a live test for spongiform encephalopathies. The list also shows the cost of the research. Some research funded by the BBSRC may also be relevant; details can be provided by the Office of Science and Technology.

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of (a) the incidence and (b) the causes of BSE otherwise than in the United Kingdom. [23535]

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the number of cases of BSE reported in each of the states of the European Union to the most recent available date. [24415]

Mrs. Browning: I refer the hon. Members to the answer I gave to the hon. Members for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang) and for Angus, East (Mr. Welsh) on 29 April 1996, Official Report, column 408.

We have no reason to believe that BSE in other countries is caused by any other reason that the feeding of infected animal feedingstuffs.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in which EU countries in which specified bovine offals are not removed from the carcase there have been cases of BSE within the last 12 months. [25860]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 19 April 1996]: Cases of BSE have been recorded in France, Portugal, the Republic of Ireland and the United Kingdom in the last 12 months.

According to our information, the only member states which apply SBO controls are Portugal, France, Belgium and the United Kingdom. Further information on the SBO controls in place in these member states was given in my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Salisbury (Mr. Key) on 29 April 1996, Official Report, columns 413–14.

Ms Quin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cases of BSE there have been in (a) France and (b) Switzerland; and in how many of those cases the cause has been attributed to animal feed imported from the United Kingdom. [26022]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 23 April 1996]: As at 29 April, 20 cases of BSE have been recorded in France and 210 cases in Switzerland.

We have no information to suggest that any of these cases were caused by the consumption of animal feed imported from the United Kingdom; however, this possibility cannot be discounted.

Beef Exports (EC Ban)

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the treaty basis on which the European Commission purports to exercise the power to impose a world-wide ban on the export of British beef. [23455]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 29 March 1996]: The ban has been imposed on the basis of EC directives 90/425/EEC—in particular, article 10(4)—and 89/662/EEC—in particular, article 9—governing intra-community veterinary checks. These directives are based on article 43 of the treaty of Rome.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total number of cases of BSE reported in the United Kingdom in each county or equivalent local authority area. [24416]

Mrs. Browning: Attached are tables showing the total number of confirmed BSE cases in the United Kingdom by county since November 1986, as at 12 April 1996.

Animal Imports (Rabies)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the quarantine kennels licensed by MAFF to accept animals imported into the United Kingdom. [26739]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 25 April 1996]: At present, there are 80 quarantine kennels authorised to operate in the UK. These are listed in the information pack issued to those who intend to import rabies-susceptible animals into this country. I have placed a copy in the Library of the House.

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) dogs, (b) cats and (c) other rabies-susceptible animals were imported into the United Kingdom under licence in 1995. [26882]

Mrs. Browning: Information on the number of animals actually imported during the whole of 1995 is not available. It is possible to provide information only on the number of animals for which licences have been issued permitting their import during this period. For 1995, the figures for licensed animals were: 5,394 dogs, 4,126 cats and 81,054 other rabies-susceptible mammals.

Maize-derived Glucose

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the effect of reforms in the common agricultural policy on (a) EU self-sufficiency in maize and (b) the market price of maize-derived glucose. [27110]

Mr. Baldry: When account is taken of year-on-year variations in area, yield and consumption, the effect of reform of the common agricultural policy on EU self-sufficiency in maize, which remains around 100 per cent. has been largely neutral.

The Department does not have independent price data on glucose and at present there is no simple and reliable way of distinguishing between glucose made from maize and glucose made from other raw materials such as wheat.

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to alleviate the impact of increases in the price of maize-derived glucose produced in European Union countries on the British pharmaceutical industry; and if he will make a statement. [27111]

Mr. Baldry: With maize, as with other cereals, the Government's aim remains the progressive reduction of institutional price support, thereby removing one of the main factors leading to distortion between EU and world market prices for this raw material. In the short term, however, the Government are continuing to do all they can to ensure that the EU Commission operates the mechanisms designed to compensate EU starch and glucose users for the higher cost of their raw materials by comparison with those of their third country competitors in a fair and equitable manner.

Cattle (Slaughter in Abattoirs)

Dr Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if those cattle aged over 30 months which are now ineligible for human consumption will be slaughtered in abattoirs which also kill livestock for human consumption; and if he will make a statement on the detailed arrangements for the implementation of the 30-month rule, describing the responsibilities of farmers, livestock markets, slaughterhouses, rendering plans and other parties. [27234]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 29 April 1996]: Cattle aged over 30 months may be slaughtered in abattoirs which also kill livestock for human consumption. The rules governing the 30-month scheme require that no cattle destined for human consumption may be present when animals are being slaughtered under the scheme. In addition, if any scheme animals need to be held in lairage, they must be kept separate from animals destined for human consumption and products from scheme animals must be stored separately from meat or other products for human or animal consumption. In practice, this means that abattoirs participating in the scheme must agree to designate whole days (at least one) to the slaughter of animals under the scheme.

The detailed arrangements for the scheme are still being finalised.

Turkey Farming

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received about turkey farming. [27452]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 30 April 1996]: Some of the numerous representations we receive on farm animal welfare have related to the welfare of intensively farmed turkeys.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will commission an inquiry into the welfare of intensively farmed turkeys. [27453]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 30 April 1996]: The Farm Animal Welfare Council has recently conducted a review of the welfare of all farmed turkeys. Its report was published in 1995 and the Government response is currently in preparation.

Slaughterhouse Waste

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what study has been made of the safety of disposing of fifth quarter material from abattoirs on to land in use for agriculture; and if he will make a statement. [25713]

Mrs. Browning: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Hillsborough (Mrs. Jackson) on 16 April, Official Report, column 466.

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 16 April, Official Report, column 466, on research to provide guidelines on the landspreading of industrial wastes, (a) who has been commissioned to carry out the research and (b) when the results of the research will be published. [27455]

Mrs. Browning: The Ministry, together with the Department of the Environment and the Environment Agency, has commissioned the Water Research Centre and ADAS—an executive agency of MAFF—to conduct the aforementioned research on the landspreading of industrial wastes. Findings from the research are expected later this year and will be used as the basis for drafting guidance to regulators, waste operators, farmers and the public. The draft guidance will be subject to public consultation.

Fish Oil

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the effectiveness of controls on the manufacture of fish oil and associated products from depleted fish stocks; what plans he has to enhance their effectiveness; and if he will make a statement. [27552]

Mr. Baldry: Measures taken to protect depleted fish stocks focus primarily on limiting catches of the fish in the first place rather than the use to which they are put once landed.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Risk Assessments

Mr. Lidington: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will set out the arrangements for Departments to carry out risk assessments on new regulatory proposals. [28165]

Mr. Freeman: I am today publishing a new guidance booklet on regulatory appraisal incorporating risk assessment and am arranging for copies to be placed in the House Library. The new guide requires risk assessments to be carried out on all proposed regulations affecting business. As part of the regulatory appraisal procedure set out in the guide, Ministers will have to receive a risk assessment before deciding whether to introduce new regulations. Ministers must personally certify that they have read both the risk assessment and a compliance cost assessment in order to satisfy themselves that the benefits of the regulation justify its costs.

DEFENCE

Private Finance Initiative

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the revenue spending estimated by his Department in connection with the private financial initiative for (a) 1995–96, (b) 1996–97 and (c) 1997–98. [26625]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Spending by my Department on private finance initiative projects is predicted to be in the order of £10 million in 1996–97 and £20 million in 1997–98. No expenditure was incurred in 1995–96. This does not include staff costs and other departmental overheads associated with PFI projects.

Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research has been carried out by the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down since 1990 into the cocktail of anti-nerve agents given to British Gulf war soldiers. [27647]

Mr. Arbuthnot: This is a matter for the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency under its framework document. I have asked the chief executive to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from John Chisholm to Dr. David Clark, dated 2 May 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question asking about research at the Chemical and Biological Defence Establishment at Porton Down since 1990 into the cocktail of anti-nerve agents given to British Gulf War soldiers. The Chemical & Biological Sector at Porton Down is now part of the Protection and Life Sciences Division of Defence Evaluation and Research Agency (DERA) of which I am the Chief Executive.

The only anti-nerve agent drug given to British service personnel during the Gulf conflict was the nerve agent pre-treatment set (NAPS) containing pyridostigmine. This was administered as a pre-treatment to minimise the impact of exposure to nerve agents.

In addition to the pre-treatment the post-poisoning therapy contained in self injector devices (Combopers) was issued to service personnel but was not administered. This therapy contains the drugs atropine, pralidoxime mesylate and Avizafone. The auto-injector is designed to be administered by the soldier himself or a comrade in the event that the individual shows the signs and symptoms of nerve agent poisoning.

Since 1990 the Chemical and Biological Defence Sector at Porton Down has carried out research involving the use of in-service medical countermeasures for nerve agent poisoning in two main areas. A study has been conducted in human volunteers to investigate single fibre electro myography (SFEMG) during and following the administration of pyridostigmine for a period of eight weeks. The individuals involved took NAPS tablets as directed at 8 hourly intervals for 8 weeks. These studies showed a very small change in the SFEMG during the administration which had no clinical significance. The SFEMG returned to the values determined prior to taking the NAPS tablets within seven days of termination of the administration of NAPS.

In the second type of study CBD Sector has placed extra mural research contracts with the Universities of Aston and Birmingham. The work has involved fundamental studies on antichloline sterases and included an examination of the effects of pyridostigmine. The work was conducted using rodent models and all the results will be reported in the open literature.

In addition to these two areas of work the in-service medical countermeasures have been used in animal studies as a positive control in the research being carried out to develop improved medical countermeasures against nerve agent poisoning.

I hope this information is helpful.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what study his Department has made of the findings of recent research in the United States into the relationship between the multiple prescribing and use of drugs and subsequent unexplained illnesses among service men and women who served in the Gulf war; what further action he is taking; and if he will make a statement. [26895]

Mr. Soames: The research relating to possible interaction between drugs and chemicals used in the Gulf war, undertaken by Duke university, North Carolina, has not yet been published. The research team's report on its findings will be carefully considered by my Department when it becomes available.

"Statement on the Defence Estimates"

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he plans to publish the "Statement on the Defence Estimates 1996". [27648]

Mr. Soames: The 1996 "Statement on the Defence Estimates", Cm 3223, was published yesterday.

Soviet Submarines

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what records his Department holds of the Soviet November class submarine carrying nuclear missiles which sank near Land's End in 1970; what measures his Department has taken to monitor the state of the missiles; what assessment he has made of the risks of radiation escaping from the submarine; and if he will make a statement. [27663]

Mr. Soames: The Soviet November class submarine lost in international waters outside the western approaches, on 12 April 1970, sank in deep water. It is assessed that the risk of radiation escaping from the submarine is minimal, and results from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food's monitoring programme have shown no indication of contamination from this accident.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what records his Department maintains of Soviet Union submarines which have sunk off the British coast over the last 30 years. [27662]

Mr. Soames: No Soviet Union submarines have sunk near the British coast.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reports he has evaluated about the Soviet November class submarine which sank in the western approaches to the United Kingdom on 12 April 1970; what action he has taken in relation to safety of naval vessels sailing in the vicinity; what representations have been made to the Soviet and Russian authorities in relation to compensation; what further action he proposes to take to protect United Kingdom interests; and if he will make a statement. [26708]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 25 April 1996]: The Soviet November class submarine lost in international waters outside the western approaches on 12 April 1970 sank in deep water and is not considered to be a hazard to vessels. This tragic loss is not a basis upon which compensation has been sought from Soviet or Russian authorities. It is assessed that the risk of radiation escaping from the submarine is minimal, and results from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food monitoring programme have shown no indication of contamination from this accident.

Territorial Army

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many training days per year members of the Territorial Army have to serve in order to received their annual bounty. [27651]

Mr. Soames: Most members of the Territorial Army are required to complete 15 days camp training and 12 days out-of-camp training to qualify for bounty. Members of specialist units which recruit nationwide, and of certain pools of manpower, must complete 15 days camp training and four days out-of-camp training. A lower training obligation is available, with the consent of the commanding officer, to individuals whose personal or employment circumstances make it difficult for them to meet the full obligation. Special rules apply to the officers training corps and in certain other cases.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much call-out gratuity will be paid to members of the Territorial Army on their return from Bosnia. [27655]

Mr. Soames: No call-out gratuity will be paid to members of the Territorial Army on their return from Bosnia. Call-out gratuity is a lump sum of £345 which is paid on mobilisation to every reservist called out for service in support of operations in Bosnia.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many members of the Territorial Army called up for service in Bosnia in 1995 had not completed their annual training quota at the time of the call-up; if those personnel who had not yet completed their annual training quota were eligible for their annual bounty; and if he will make a statement. [27650]

Mr. Soames: Information on the level of training undertaken by each member of the Territorial Army before his or her call out in support of the peace implementation force is not immediately available. However, it is believed that the great majority would have attend annual camp, and that many would also have completed the required out of camp training. Those who had not done so were not eligible for bounty, as is explicitly provided in TA regulations.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if service on operational duties for members of the Territorial Army called up for service in Bosnia qualifies in lieu of the annual quota of training days required for an annual bounty; and if he will make a statement. [27652]

Mr. Soames: Reservists called out for permanent service receive pay at the full regular rate. Under current regulations, such service does not count towards annual bounty, which is earned through attendance at training. however, it has been agreed that members of the Territorial Army may count a period of called-out service in support of the peace implementation force in Bosnia in lieu of annual camp in the current training year or, in certain circumstances, the next one. It will be necessary for individuals to complete the remainder of their annual training before they qualify for bounty. These circumstances are being taken into account as the rules governing the payment of bounty are reviewed in the light of changes to be introduced by the Reserve Forces Bill.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if members of the Territorial Army called up for service in Bosnia will be required.to relinquish their service kit on completion of their service; what provisions have been made to ensure that they have civilian clothes to change into and travelling bags; and if he will make a statement. [27654]

Mr. Soames: Members of the Territorial Army returning from Bosnia on completion of their period of permanent service will be required, at the demobilisation centre, to hand in all extra items of clothing and equipment issued to them specifically for service in Bosnia. They will retain their standard kit for future use when training with their unit. On mobilisation, reservists were instructed to pack a set of civilian clothes, and they will be available to be worn after demobilisation. All reservists will be permitted to retain their travelling bags in order to carry their belongings home.

Atomic Weapons Establishment, Llanishen

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 29 April, Official Report, column 397, if he will give his current estimate of the time to be taken in thoroughly decommissioning the AWE Llanishen site; when the process is due to start; and if he will make a statement. [27827]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The process will start once current activities have ceased at the Llanishen site in 1997. The work will be undertaken in a careful and progressive manner and in conformity with all relevant guidelines and legislation and the requirements of the regulatory bodies. It is impossible to be precise as to duration, but the whole process will inevitably take some years.

Departmental Data

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the police and security databases held by his Department have changed their procedures as a result of investigations by the Data Protection Registrar. [27656]

Mr. Soames: No changes have been made to procedures followed by the military police and security forces in the use of their databases as the result of investigations by the Data Protection Registrar. My Department will be glad to receive and comply with any advice proffered as the result of this or any other investigation.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what advice he has received from the Data Protection Registrar concerning his Department's handling of data under the Data Protection Act 1988. [27657]

Mr. Soames: The Office of the Data Protection Registrar has yet to advise MOD of the findings of its investigation which concluded in August 1995. As of 1 May 1996, no advice other than that which has been specifically requested by the MOD Data Protection Office to meet particular circumstances has been received from the Office of the Data Protection Registrar.

Joint Service Command and Staff College

Mr. Anthony Coombs: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the outcome of the consultation process regarding the interim arrangements for the Joint Service Command and Staff college; and if he will make a statement. [28292]

Mr. Soames: The consultation process on the interim arrangements for the Joint Service command and Staff college has been completed. A number of responses have been received, but none raised any new or major issues that might call the proposals into question. Those issues that were raised will be taken carefully into account in future work.

This work remains on schedule for the new Joint Service Command and Staff college to open at Bracknell in September 1997 and immediate next steps include formal planning consultation with the local authority. In the longer term it remains our intention to dispose of the Bracknell site by the end of 1999, by which time the new college should be well established at its permanent site.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 2 May. [26609]

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Thursday 2 May. [26610]

The Prime Minister: This morning, I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in the House, I shall be having further meetings later today.

TRANSPORT

Railway Lands (London)

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the development value of the railway lands at King's Cross and Stratford which have been transferred to London and Continental and are not required for the channel tunnel rail link. [27860]

Mr. Watts: I refer the hon. Member to the answers I gave him on 14 March, Official Report, columns 720 and 721.

Railtrack

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if Railtrack shares left with the Government qualify for the special dividend payable from this year's profits. [27816]

Mr. Watts: Any Railtrack shares still held by the Government as at 4 September 1996 will qualify for the final dividend of 13.75p share in respect of the year ended 31 March 1996.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list the bodies who have audited costs and liabilities for the route structure of Railtrack; and to what extent each of these bodies will be held responsible for errors in these figures; [27820]

(2) what assessment (a) he and (b) his officials have made of the reports on maintenance costs of Railtrack from the Civil Engineering Design Group; [27818]

(3) if the estimates of maintenance costs commissioned from CEDG and Atkins were commissioned for inclusion in the Pathfinder prospectus; [27815]

(4) on what maintenance estimates the Atkins Comfort letter in the Railtrack Pathfinder prospectus was based; who supplied these figures; and what adjustments were made to them before Atkins issued its endorsement; [27819]

(5) if he approved the maintenance estimate for the rail structure quoted in the pathfinder prospectus; [27793]

(6) what communication he has had with W. S. Atkins about its estimate of the cost of maintenance of the rail network; and if he will publish the figures they supplied to his Department; [27798]

(7) if the cost estimates of maintenance for the rail network submitted by W. S. Atkins are those used in the Pathfinder Prospectus; [27822]

(8) what were the maintenance estimates for the Railtrack route structure, submitted by (a) CEDG and (b) Atkins; how many reports on these figures were submitted by Atkins; whether all the Atkins reports were submitted to the regulator; and what the range of figures was in the different reports; [27787]

(9) what were the 10 year maintenance costs for the railways estimated by (a) the Civil Engineering Design Group and (b) W. S. Atkins; [27823]

(10) what steps he has taken to verify the maintenance figures for the route structure operated by Railtrack as given in the Pathfinder prospectus; [27788]

(11) if his Department commissioned S. B. C. Warburg to check the maintenance estimates in the Pathfinder prospectus for the sale of Railtrack; [27803]

(12) how many reports on maintenance costs for Railtrack were submitted to his Department by W. S. Atkins; for what reasons none of them were quoted in the Pathfinder prospectus; and how many were submitted to the regulator; [27801]

(13) on what basis his Department concluded that the study of maintenance costs by W. S. Atkins is a more detailed and extensive survey than that produced by CEDG of York; [27794]

(14) what assessment he has made of the maintenance estimates in respect of the rail network from (a) Civil Engineering Design Group and (b) W. S. Atkins; and what checking procedures were adopted by his Department. [27821]

Mr. Watts: I understand that CEDG was commissioned to inform directors of Railtrack as to expected future costs of maintaining and renewing certain of it assets. CEDG's report to Railtrack was produced over a short time scale; was based on an extrapolation of a small sample; used less sophisticated analytical techniques than those subsequently used by W. S. Atkins; and was based on assumptions about asset lives which were not in accordance with prudent management of the assets concerned. Its cost estimates were inconsistent with historical spend in this area. The report was rejected by Railtrack and, having regard to the matters above and the superseding work of W. S. Atkins, its contents were not regarded as material or appropriate information for inclusion in the Railtrack prospectus.

W. S. Atkins, a firm of independent consultants, was subsequently engaged by Railtrack with the approval of my Department to report jointly to the Secretary of State and the directors of Railtrack and our respective financial advisers, to assist in the development of its asset maintenance plan—AMP—for track and route structures. This included an assessment of the policies, targets, bases and assumptions, methods and procedures used by Railtrack in arriving at the estimate of expenditure related to the AMP which is described in the prospectus. My Department received one report from W. S. Atkins which was the basis of W. S. Atkins' expert certificate set out in the prospectus. The report was not submitted to the Rail Regulator although in his conclusions on the future level of access charges he allowed Railtrack sufficient income form its charges to enable it to maintain the existing capability of the rail network having regard to projections of Railtrack's future expenditure,. My right hon. Friend is satisfied, on the basis of due and careful enquiries made by my Department and Railtrack and our respective advisers that the estimates set out in the prospectus were prepared on a proper basis.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what factors were taken into account in the estimate of the maintenance costs for the rail network in the Pathfinder prospectus. [27799]

Mr. Watts: All material factors were taken into account in the estimate of maintenance costs for the rail network and are described in the Railtrack prospectus.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the work commissioned by his Department from Professor Tony O'Hagan of Nottingham university relating to research of W. S. Atkins on rail maintenance costs. [27802]

Mr. Watts: Professor O'Hagan was not commissioned by my Department. I understand that he was engaged as a consultant by W. S. Atkins to assist it in its work on Railtrack's asset maintenance plan for track and route structures.

InterCity East Coast

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many bids were received for the franchise for InterCity East Coast; and what is the subsidy required by the winners, Great Northern Railway Co. Ltd. and by the runner up. [26536]

Mr. Watts: Details of the number of bids received for individual franchises and the levels of subsidy required by unsuccessful bidders are commercially confidential.

The Great Northern Railway Company Ltd. will receive support of £64 million in the first year of the seven-year franchise, falling to zero in the seventh year. It will receive a total of £164.88 million over the duration of the franchise. Figures are in 1996–97 prices and exclude any additional payments arising from level crossing grant. British Rail's preliminary claim for InterCity East Coast for 1996–97 is £76.25 million.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many staff (a) will be employed by the Great Northern Railway Company and (b) will have had previous employment experiences in the rail industry; and what are the equivalent figures for those employed by InterCity East Coast Ltd. in 1995–96 and by British Rail in 1992–93 in the provision of those same services. [26512]

Mr. Watts: The number and experience of staff employed by the Great Northern Railway Company Ltd.—GNR—in the provision of InterCity East Coast services is a matter for GNR. As at 1 April 1996, InterCity East Coast employed 2,867 staff. A comparable figure for 1992–93 is not available as this was prior to the restructuring of the railway.

Freight

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of freight moved over land was moved by road vehicles in Great Britain in (a) 1965, (b) 1979 and (c) 1994. [24698]

Mr. Norris: The information requested is as follows:

1965: 74 per cent.

1979: 77 per cent.

1994: 85 per cent.

East Coast Main Line

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the total investment made in the maintenance and development of the east coast main line in 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96; and what is the expected investment by Railtrack in 1996–97. [26511]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack informs me that investment figures for the east coast main line are as follows:

Track renewal

1993–94: Figures not held by Railtrack

1994–95: £23.1 million

1995–96: £23.2 million

1996–97: £18.3 million (forecast).

Other than track renewal

1993–94: £5.9 million

1994–95: £6.2 million

1995–96: £6.6 million

1996–97: £7.0 million (forecast).

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what were the total costs and the net revenue received for Intercity services on the east coast main line in the financial years 1993–94, 1994–95 and 1995–96. [26514]

Mr. Watts: The costs and the revenue for InterCity services on the east coast main line for the financial years 1994–95 and 1995–96 are as follows.

£ million

	1994–95	[1]1995–96
Revenue	241	292
Costs	307	340
Administered profit	4	18
Grant support	70	66

[1] Provisional

The figures for 1993–94 are not comparable because they do not reflect total costs for the use of infrastructure and rolling stock.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions over the past five years operators or employers have been prosecuted simultaneously with their drivers for offences relating to the regulations governing heavy goods vehicles, buses and coaches; and on how many occasions prosecutions have been made against the operators alone. [26674]

Mr. Norris: Separate statistics are not available in the form requested.

Bus Safety, Manchester

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the quality and safety of buses in Greater Manchester. [27538]

Mr. Norris: Ensuring the quality and safety of buses is an integral element in the overall enforcement activities carried out by the Vehicle Inspectorate.

The VI is aware of concerns about the quality of some buses in use in Great Manchester and has worked with the local police to target operators with poor standards of vehicle maintenance. In the Greater Manchester and Derbyshire area during 1995–96, 12.75 per cent. of vehicles tested at spot checks were issued with immediate prohibitions and 13.38 per cent. with delayed prohibitions.

New investment by bus companies operating in Greater Manchester is expected to impact favourably on vehicle standards in the coming months.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of (a) the number of bus operators in Greater Manchester and (b) the number of occasions on which consideration has been given to withdrawing operators' licences for failing to reach and maintain an acceptable safety standard; how many licences have been withdrawn; and if he will make a statement. [27539]

Mr. Norris: There are 36 bus operators running local services and claiming fuel duty rebate in the Greater Manchester area. Data about disciplinary action taken by the Traffic Commissioner are not available in the form requested.

Rail Tunnels and Bridges

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what proportion of the total number of tunnels on the British Rail network has been inspected in the last (a) 10, (b) 20 and (c) 30 years; [27791]

(2) what proportion of bridges on the British Rail network has been inspected in the last (a) 10, (b) 20 and (c) 30 years. [27792]

Mr. Watts: I understand that all Railtrack's bridges and tunnels are subject to regular visual inspection; in addition, all tunnels receive a full structural inspection annually and all bridges receive a full structural inspection on a six-year cycle.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what is the total number of tunnels in the British rail network; and how many were built (a) before 1875, (b) 1876 to 1900, (c) 1901 to 1950 and since 1950; [27789]

(2) how many bridges there are in the British rail network; and how many were built (a) before 1875, (b) 1876 to 1900, (c) 1901 to 1950 and (d) since 1950. [27786]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack's network encompasses around 40,000 bridges, viaducts and tunnels. Many were constructed more than 100 years ago. Further information on the dates of construction could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Second Severn Crossing

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) on what dates the latest X-ray inspections of the steelwork on the approach roads to the second Severn crossing took place; if he will list those structures where the outcome of the inspection involved the non-acceptance of the steelwork as satisfactory; and what assessment he has made of the impact of the inspections on the contract completion and opening dates for (a) the crossing, (b) the M4 approach roads and (c) the M5 approach roads; and if he will make a statement; [27824]

(2) what measures he has discussed with the director of the Highways Agency in relation to the delays in the Balfour Beatty contract for the approach roads to the second Severn crossing; [27826]

(3) what representations he has had in relation to the (a) delayed and (b) defective supply of fabricated Spanish steelwork for the bridge decks on the approach roads to the second Severn crossing and methods used by Balfour Beatty to make good the deficiencies. [27825]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Rhodri Morgan, dated 2 May 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent questions about the approach roads to the Second Severn Crossing.

X-ray inspections are not carried out. Non-destructive testing (Ultrasonic and Magnetic Particle Inspections) has been carried out in accordance with the requirements of the Specification for Highway Works.

Test results have been received for testing carried out on site up to 23 April 1996, and testing is ongoing.

Defects have been found in the normal course of quality control and inspection. Unexpected levels of defects in some of the welding and some lack of fit between the stiffeners and main beams were found in bridges B1, B31, B44, and B46. All defects have been repaired or are being addressed.

The inspections have no impact upon the contract completion and opening dates for either the crossing, M4 or M49 (M5) approach roads.

There has been continued close liaison between us and Balfour Beatty Civil Engineering Ltd. (BBCEL) on contract completion which has ensured that the M4 completion will coincide with the opening of the Second Severn Crossing.

On 1 May 1996, I explained to the Secretary of State for Transport that the Highways Agency's contractor had been encountering some problems with the steel fabrication for some structures, but that this was the responsibility of the contractor.

We have been kept informed by BBCEL of the problems with steel supply and defective fabrication and are content with the steps they have taken to rectify the situation.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Entry Clearance Officers (Manila)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many complaints his Department has received in each of the last six calendar years in respect of the treatment of visa applications and sponsors by entry clearance officers at the British embassy in Manila; and what proportion of all visa applications in each year these complaints represent. [27373]

Mr. Hanley: This information is not readily available and cannot be compiled except at disproportionate cost.

Land Mines

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on progress made to ban the manufacture, export and use of anti-personnel land mines at the recent negotiations at the first review conference for the 1980 inhumane weapons convention in Geneva. [27140]

Mr. David Davis: The UN weaponry convention review conference is currently taking place in Geneva and is expected to be concluded on 3 May. We hope that significant new prohibitions and restrictions will be placed on the use and transfer of anti-personnel land mines taking us significantly closer to the goal of a total international ban on these weapons. The production of mines is not covered by the convention.

UN Register for Conventional Arms

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when the United Kingdom returned its 1995 submission to the UN register for conventional arms; and if he will place a copy of the submission in the Library. [27646]

Mr. David Davis: We submitted our return to the UN register covering calendar year 1995 to the UN Secretary-General on 30 April 1996. A copy has been placed in the Library of the House.

European Union Council

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on forthcoming business in the Council of the European Union. [28196]

Mr. David Davis: The information is as follows:

SUBJECT: MONTHLY FORECAST OF BUSINESS FOR MAY 1996

HOME DEPARTMENT

Professor Mohammed Al-Masari

Mr. Galloway: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what decision he has reached upon the application for political asylum by Professor Mohammed Al-Masari. [26555]

Miss Widdecombe: Dr. Al-Masari has been given leave to remain for an initial period of four years. Dr. Al-Masari's asylum application has not been considered substantively.

Drink Driving

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he will take to ensure that the police ensure that identity in drink drive cases is substantiated by evidence other than the driver's licence alone. [26591]

Mr. Maclean: This is an operational matter for the police, but I understand that, when someone is charged with a drink drive offence, the usual procedure is to carry out checks on the vehicle records and the address given, in addition to verifying licence details.

Asylum Cases

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what budgetary allocation (a) was made in 1994–95 and (b) has been set aside for 1996–97 for (i) the B3 division of the immigration and nationality department and (ii) the Home Office presenting officers' unit in B1 division; how many decisions were made by B3 division in each of the last two years; how many decisions are projected for 1996–97; how many (1) cases in total and (2) asylum cases were presented by Home Office presenting officers in each of the last two years; and how many cases in each category they are projected to present in 1996–97. [27175]

Mr. Kirkhope: The available information is contained in the tables:

Running costs	Asylum division[1]	B1 presenting officers' unit[1]
1994–95	£13 million	£2.8 million
1996–97	Not finally settled[2]	Not finally settled[2]

[1] Does not include accommodation costs and certain other overheads not allocated to the units concerned to manage directly.

[2] Final amount depends on the precise allocation of spend to save funds for 1996–97.

Asylum division	Decisions
1994	21,000

[1] Provisional figures.

[2] Separate figures for cases presented are not available.

[3] Includes asylum appeals referred back to the Secretary of State for further consideration.

Firearms

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what review of firearms legislation is presently being carried out by his Department; when it (a) began and (b) was announced; what are its terms of reference; what are the names and positions of those conducting the review; from whom submissions have been received to date; and from whom else submissions have been requested. [27122]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland announced on 21 March that they would conduct a joint review of firearms controls in Great Britain. The review began at that time and has now considered the arguments for and against the changes in the controls which have been suggested following the tragic events in Dunblane on 13 March.

In conducting their review, my right hon. and learned Friend and my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Scotland have taken account of submissions from opposition parties, comments from the Firearms consultative committee and over 2,000 letters from Members of Parliament and the public. Comments were invited from all interested parties who are, of course, free to submit their evidence directly to Lord Cullen's inquiry.

Mr. Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the recommendations made by the Firearms Consultative Committee in its (a) first, (b) second, (c) third, (d) fourth, (e) fifth and (f) sixth report (i) have been implemented, (ii) dealt with matters of public safety, (iii) would require amendment of primary legislation and (iv) could be implemented by a change in administrative procedures. [27127]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is set out in the table:

Firearms consultative committee annual report

	(a) 1st	(b) 2nd	(c) 3rd	(d) 4th	(e) 5th	(f) 6th
Recommendations which have been implemented or which require no action	18	15	12	6	19	15
Recommendations which would require primary legislation	1	9	9	1	17	17
Recommendations which could be implemented through a change in administrative procedures	1	4	2	6	11	13

In addition, a number of the recommendations of the Firearms Consultative Committee would require secondary legislation to implement them and are not included in the table above. Some of the recommendations included in the table have been formally rejected.

It is not possible to identify separately those recommendations which deal solely with matters of public safety but, in making recommendations, the committee always consider the likely impact on public safety.

Mr. Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department at (a) directions and (b) terms of reference he has given to the Firearms Consultative Committee to review firearms legislation since 13 March; what submissions have been received and from whom; what other information has been sought and from whom; and if he will place a copy of (i) that information and (ii) the final report in the Library. [27123]

Mr. Maclean: The terms of reference of the Firearms Consultative Committee, as set out in section 22(5) of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988. These have not been changed since 13 March. Within its terms of reference, the Firearms Consultative Committee may consider any issues arising from the tragic events of 13 March that it considers appropriate.

I understand that the Firearms Consultative Committee has received a number of submissions from members of the public and other interested parties. Publication of any material submitted to the committee is a matter for it.

The Firearms Consultative Committee is required by section 22(6) of the Firearms (Amendment) Act 1988 to make a report each year on its activities to the Secretary of State, who is required to lay copies of the report before Parliament. A copy of the report of the committee for this year will be placed in the Library in the usual way.

Holloway Prison

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to the oral statement of the Minister of State of 28 March, Official Report, column 1286 and his answer of 24 April, Official Report, column 163, on how many occasions in the last two years the Minister of State has visited Holloway prison. [27555]

Miss Widdecombe: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the hon. Member on 24 April, Official Report, column 163.

Durham Constabulary (Compensation)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much compensation Durham constabulary paid out in each year since 1980; and for what reasons. [27380]

Mr. Maclean: This information is not held centrally.

Stray Dogs

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to transfer the responsibility for stray dogs from the police services to local authorities. [27302]

Mr. Maclean: Since April 1992, local authorities have had primary responsibility for dealing with stray dogs. The police have a duty under the Dogs Act 1906 to deal with stray dogs brought to police stations. The report of the review of police core and ancillary tasks, published on 27 June 1995, proposed that the police might shed this statutory duty so that local authorities would assume full responsibility for strays.

The proposal, with examples of other co-operative schemes involving police and local authorities, is being considered in consultation with police and local authority associations before any decision is reached.

Immigration

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many people have been prosecuted under the provisions of paragraph 325, sub-paragraph (II) (f) of the immigration rules within the last five years; what guidelines on sentencing policy for those found guilty under the said provisions have been issued to the courts; how many of those prosecuted were convicted; how many of those convicted were sent to prison; how many were fined; what was the most common prison sentence given; and what was the most common fine levied. [27247]

Mr. Maclean: Information collected centrally cannot identify the exact immigration sub-rule under which a prosecution under section 26 (1) (f) of the Immigration Act 1971—whereby it is an offence for a foreign national, subject to conditions imposed, to fail to register with the police—has been made. No guidelines have been issued by the Department on sentencing policy relating to the above legislation.

The court proceedings data given in the table show the number of defendants prosecuted, in England and Wales only, for failing to register with the police, by result, from 1990 to 1994—latest available.

Defendants proceeded against at magistrates' courts for offences associated with failing to register with the police under section 26 (1)(f) of the Immigration Act 1971 by result 1990 to 1994

Prisons (Suicides)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners in (a) prison establishments and (b) police custody have (i) committed and (ii) attempted suicide in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [27446]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Elfyn Llwyd, dated 2 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about suicides.

The attached tables give the number of self-inflicted deaths in Prison Service establishments, in England and Wales (1985–1995); the number of reported incidents of attempted suicides (1991–1995); and the number of suicides in police custody (1985–1995). Numbers of attempted suicides in police custody are not held centrally. Numbers of attempted suicides in prison establishments were not held centrally before 1991.

Video Evidence

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the Home Office advisory group's recommendations on video evidence; and if he will make a statement. [27563]

Mr. Maclean: The Criminal Justice Act 1991 implemented most of the recommendations of the advisory group on video evidence. In particular, it prohibited the defendant from questioning the child and it allowed the child's main evidence to be given by means of a video-recorded interview conducted by police and social workers soon after the incident. We are not persuaded that video recording of pre-trial cross-examination, also recommended by the group, would be in the best interests of children.

The Government remain determined that the criminal justice system should be made more responsive to the needs of children and that the measures introduced by the 1991 Act should work as effectively as possible. We are pursuing a range of further improvements to the present arrangements to secure practical benefits for children.

Greater Manchester Police

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) the capital spending by Greater Manchester police in (i) 1993–94, (ii) 1994–95, (iii) 1995–96 and (b) the estimated and projected spending in (x) 1996–97 and (y) 1997–98 in (1) cash terms and (2) 1996 prices; and if he will make a statement. [27537]

Mr. Maclean: The information is listed in the table.

Greater Manchester police—capital expenditure

	1993–94	1994–95	[1]1995–96	[1]1996–97	[2]1997–98

1996 prices £ million	12.265	12.430	14.968	13.845	18.619

[1] Force estimate.
[2] Force projection.

Wheel Clamping

Mr. Rooney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has for legislation following the consultation exercise on wheel clamping. [27878]

Mr. Maclean: The Government are still considering what action, if any, should be taken to regulate wheel clamping on private land. We are looking at the possible need for new legislation as part of that consideration.

Police Cells

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the effect of the reduction in capital expenditure in his Department during the current financial year on the use of police cells; and if he will make a statement. [26671]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 29 April 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. Alex Carlile, dated 2 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about whether an assessment has been made on the effect the reduction in capital expenditure during the current financial year will have on the use of police cells.

An assessment of the effect of the reduction in capital expenditure was made in December 1996. This work concluded that there was no significant increase in the risk of having to resort to the use of police cells in 1996–97.

The Prison Service has not been using police cells since June 1995. Apart from a major unplanned loss of accommodation or an unexpected rise in the population above current projections, and above our capacity to accommodate with other measures, we do not plan to use police cells.

Capital Expenditure

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (a) total capital expenditure for his Department and (b) capital expenditure on (i) the Prison Service, (ii) police and (iii) other Department functions indicting the expenditure planned for each of the following three financial years set out in the public expenditure surveys for 1991–92 and each subsequent year together with estimated outturns where these are available. [26035]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 24 April 1996]: Information in the form requested is not available.

Capital spending by the Home Department has been as follows:

£ million, outturn prices

Year	Prison service	Police	Other	Total
1991–92	431.7	193.7	85.6	711.0
1992–93	342.7	221.4	102.6	666.7
1993–94	294.0	243.6	112.9	650.5
1994–95	322.8	242.5	96.6	661.9
1995–96[1]	327.7	252.5	92.6	672.8
1996–97[1]	120.0	224.7	85.4	431.1
1997–98[1]	111.5	220.3	82.9	414.7
1998–99[1]	113.6	200.8	81.7	396.1

1. The data are standardised by including expenditure for services which are the current responsibility of the Home Office.
2. The figures for "Police" and "Other" include capital grants and credit approvals to local authorities.
3. Capital expenditure by the Charity Commission is omitted.
4. "Police" expenditure includes expenditure by the Forensic Science Service agency. "Other" includes expenditure by the United Kingdom Passport Agency and the Fire Service College trading fund.

[1] Actual expenditure is given for years up to 1994–95; estimates for 1995–96; public expenditure survey projections for later years.

Prisoners (Television Sets)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to remove television sets from (a) sentenced and (b) remand prisoners; and if he will make a statement. [26672]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 29 April 1996]: Policy on this subject is still under consideration.

Eastwood Park Prison

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those courts which fall into the catchment area of HMP Eastwood Park, and those which previously were in the catchment area of Pucklechurch remand centre; if he will list for each court the number of prisoners by offence (a) remand in custody, and unconvicted, (b) remanded to custody following conviction, but unsentenced, (c) sentenced prisoners in each year since 1990 and (d) the number of cases brought before each court by offence in each year since 1990. [27235]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 29 April 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Mr. George Howarth, dated 2 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the Office, to reply to your recent Question about Eastwood Park and Pucklechurch prisons.

The courts which commit female prisoners to Eastwood Park prison are given in the attached list and are the same as those which commit to Pucklechurch remand centre.

The information requested about remand prisoners at each court is not available centrally.

Information on the number of indicatable cases heard at each court is published annually in criminal statistics supplementary tables. Crown court information by centre is given in Volume 2 and magistrates' courts by individual Petty Sessional Division are in Volume 5 and Volume 4 from 1991 to 1994 (latest available). Copies of these volumes are available in the Library.

The information requested for each court by offence could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Buckley Hall Prison (Escapes)

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the Prison Service will carry out an investigation into the escape of four prisoners from Buckley Hall prison on 23 April; and if he will publish details of the investigation. [27291]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 1 May 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Butler to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 2 May 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the investigation into the escape of four prisoners from Buckley Hall prison on 23 April 1996.

An investigation into the escape began on 24 April 1996. Conclusions and recommendations will be submitted to the area manager on completion of the inquiry. In line with normal procedures, there is no intention to publish the report or the findings of the inquiry.

Television Licences

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what consideration has been given to the possible change in the number of people that might be imprisoned for the non-payment of a television licence fine following the introduction of a weekly cash instalment scheme for the payment of the television licence; and what discussions his Department has had with the Department of National Heritage on this issue. [26857]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 1 May 1996]: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the National Heritage has given approval in principle for the BBC to introduce a cash instalment scheme for television licence payment. The scheme is expected to be piloted by the BBC later this year, and this will assist those who find it difficult to pay for a television licence by existing methods. Television licence evasion remains, however, a criminal offence punishable by a fine. It is the non-payment of such a fine that can result in imprisonment, but only where that default is the result of wilful refusal or culpable neglect.

My right hon and learned Friend the Lord Chancellor has established a working group, which includes representatives of the Magistrates' Association and Justices' Clerks' Society, to identify ways of improving the effectiveness of fine enforcement.

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proportion of his Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96. [27528]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 1 May 1996]: The information required to answer this question is not held centrally and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

ENVIRONMENT

Heating (Fuel Requirements)

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the percentage difference in fuel required to heat identical houses in Nottingham and Derby. [26517]

Mr. Clappison: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given to him by my hon. Friend, the Minister for Construction, Planning and Energy Efficiency on 24 April, Official Report, column 147.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to extend the work carried out by his Department presented in "Indicators of Sustainable Development for the United Kingdom", by the construction of indicators at the level of individual businesses. [24697]

Mr. Clappison: The indicators published by the Department of the Environment are national in nature and, in many cases, relate to broad industrial sectors. Individual businesses should be able to construct their own indicators to compare their performance with the national sectoral norm.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will develop indicators to measure the contribution of United Kingdom international trade to sustainable development globally. [26516]

Mr. Clappison: The issue of international trade was flagged up in the report of indicators of sustainable development for the United Kingdom published on 12 March 1996. This area requires much further work as the issues involved are very complex. In the longer term, we will need to consider, in conjunction with other countries and international organisations, whether more appropriate indicators might be developed to illustrate the role of international trade in global patterns of consumption and production.

Biodiversity

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much of the planned expenditure for 1996–97 on international biodiversity is devoted to (a) the administrative costs of the biodiversity convention secretariat and (b) contributions to developing countries for the implementation of their biodiversity action plans. [24699]

Mr. Clappison: In 1996–97, £433,000 has been allocated to the administrative costs of the biodiversity convention secretariat. In addition, the Government have set aside £167,000 principally to contribute towards the travelling costs of developing countries attending the convention meetings. Funding developing countries to produce biodiversity action plans is one of the priorities for the convention's interim financial mechanism, the global environment facility, to which the United Kingdom has committed some £130 million. National biodiversity projects are also funded under the bilateral aid programme.

Already this financial year, more than £0.6 million has been committed in addition to over £30 million in 1995–96. The Darwin initiative has so far funded over 110 projects costing £12 million to help almost 60 countries towards meeting their obligations under the biodiversity convention.

Environmental Pollution Reports

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the average length of time between the publication of reports 1 to 17 of the royal commission on environmental pollution and the publication of the Government's response to those reports. [26515]

Mr. Clappison: The average length of time between the publication of reports 1 to 17 of the royal commission on environmental pollution and the publication of the Government's response to those reports was about two years five months.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Coal Privatisation

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many hours to date N. M. Rothschild has worked on the contract to give advice on the privatisation of the coal industry; and when the contract is expected to conclude. [27797]

Mr. Page: N. M. Rothschild has, to date, worked approximately 37,800 hours on providing advice on the privatisation of the coal industry. The contract will end once the privatisation, including the non-mining activities, is complete.

Atolls (Radioactivity)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to the answer of 3 April, Official Report, column 300, what progress has been made by the International Atomic Energy Agency in its assessment of the radiological situation of the atolls of Muroroa and Fangataufa. [27561]

Mr. Page: No formal progress report has yet been received from the International Atomic Energy Agency. We understand, however, that initial meetings have been held and that the necessary task groups and working groups have been established.

Business Innovation Centres

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many business innovation centres are co-located with business links and which they are; what research his Department has commissioned on the relationship of business links to business innovation centres; and what is the remit of his research. [27189]

Mr. Page [holding answer 1 May 1996]: My Department has recently commissioned research into the relationship between business links and business and innovation centres. The remit of this study is to identify the services provided by each business and innovation centre, define the degree of formal and informal integration business links and business innovation centres and make recommendation on how collaboration could be further enhanced. Two business and innovation centres, in Sunderland and Stafford, are currently co-located with business links.

Drug Alert

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what research he has (a) commissioned into and (b) evaluated on Drug Alert. [26780]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 25 April 1996]: I have been asked to reply.

The Government have not commissioned or evaluated any research on Drug Alert.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Justices of the Peace, Wales

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many new justices of the peace were appointed in Wales during 1995; and what is the political affiliation of the new appointees. [27019]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The total number of new justices of the peace appointed in Wales in 1995 was 112. Their political affiliation is as follows:

Conservative: 30

Labour: 46

Liberal Democrat: 12

Plaid Cymru: 12

Independent/Other: 12

County Court, Northampton

Mr. Timms: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much compensation for delay has been paid since the commencement of the current industrial action at the county court bulk issuing and summons production centres at Northampton. [26961]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Stephen Timms, dated 2 May 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the amount of compensation that has been paid since the commencement of industrial action at the County Court Bulk Issue Centre and the Summons Production Centre at Northampton.

No compensation has been paid.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department which organisations have received compensation for delays arising from the current industrial action at the county court bulk issuing and summons production centres in Northampton. [26962]

Mr. Evans: The question concerns a specific operational matter on which the chief executive of the Court Service is best placed to provide an answer and I have accordingly asked the chief executive to reply direct.

Letter from M. D. Huebner to Mr. Stephen Timms, dated 2 May 1996:

The Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department has asked me to reply to your Question about the compensation paid as a result of industrial action at the County Court Bulk Issue Centre and the Summons Production Centre at Northampton.

No organisation has received compensation as a result of this industrial action.

HEALTH

Oral Cancer

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what plans his Department has to introduce a co-ordinated national programme of education in the early identification of oral cancer; and if he will make a statement; [27016]

(2) what steps are being taken by his Department to reduce the number of deaths from oral cancer; and if he will make a statement; [26982]

(3) what plans he has to ensure that dental examinations include a systematic soft tissue screening for oral cancer; and if he will make a statement; [26984]

(4) what steps are being taken by his Department to raise pubic awareness of oral cancer and its risk factors; and if he will make a statement; [27014]

(5) what research his Department is currently funding into oral cancer; and if he will make a statement; [27017]

(6) what plans he has to include oral cancer targets on the "The Health of the Nation" programme; and if he will make a statement. [27015]

Mr. Horam: All oral examinations include examination of both hard and soft tissue. Dentists are trained in the early recognition of abnormalities in the mouth. Oral cancer can result from excessive alcohol or tobacco consumption, the risks of which are widely publicised and recognised. There are no plans at present to introduce set targets for reducing oral cancer morbidity or mortality rates. The chief dental officer chairs the national advisory group on screening for oral cancer which was set up last October. The group co-ordinates the detecting and preventing of oral cancers. The national health service national cancer research and development programme commissioned in 1995 a systematic review of the early natural history of certain cancers, including oral cancer, where there was potential for screening to reduce mortality. This research item was one of 25 priority areas ratified by the NHS Central Research and Development Committee. The systematic review is being undertaken by the cancer screening evaluation unit based at the Institute of Cancer Research. It will take approximately one year.

GP Lists

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the grounds on which a general practitioner can remove an NHS patient from their list. [27146]

Mr. Malone: Under his terms of service

"a general practitioner may have any person removed from his list and is required to notify the health authority in writing that he wishes to have a person removed from his list."

Professional guidance issued by the General Medical Council in May 1992 states that "it is unacceptable to abuse the right to refuse to accept patients by applying criteria of access to the practice list which discriminate against groups of patients on grounds of their age, sex, sexual orientation, race, colour, religious belief, perceived economic worth or the amount of work they are likely to generate by virtue of their clinical condition."

HIV Tests

Mr. Gerrard: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the cost of retesting the 25,000 stored samples which had previously been tested for HIV using the faulty Abbot kit; and who will be responsible for meeting this cost. [27151]

Mr. Horam: It is too early to say yet what the costs of the retesting exercise are likely to have been but national health service trusts have been asked to keep a record of their costs and the Department is liaising with the NHS and public health laboratory service on this. Abbott Laboratories Ltd. has stated that it will pay the cost of retesting.

East London and the City Health Authority

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give the budget of the East London and the City health authority in each year from 1994–95 to 1997–98. [27112]

Mr. Malone: For details of the 1994–95 final revenue cash limit and the 1995–96 initial revenue cash limit for East London and the City district health authority, I refer the hon. Member to the reply my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State (Mr. Horam) gave her on 11 December 1995, Official Report, column 520.

The 1996–97 initial revenue cash limit for East London and the City health authority is £317,616,000.

Cash limits for 1997–98 have not yet been set.

HIV and AIDS

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the changes from April in the system for commissioning national health promotion work on HIV and AIDS. [27176]

Mr. Horam: The Government's HIV-AIDS health promotion strategy[1], published in November 1995, identifies the need for targeted and national campaigns and for greater voluntary sector involvement in this area. A contract to undertake a national campaign in the coming year has been awarded to the Health Education Authority. We are currently exploring the scope for greater voluntary sector involvement with targeted campaigns.

Elderly Patients

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many representations have been made to his Department about the practice of some general practitioners of removing elderly patients from their lists in each of the last four years; and what statistics he collates which show the number of patients aged over 70 years who are removed from general practitioner lists against their will each year. [27245]

Mr. Malone: The Department has received several representations from members of the public and from hon. Members concerning the removal of patients from general practitioners' lists. Information by age category on the number of patients removed is not available centrally.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many children were notified as having tuberculosis in each of the last five years; and how many in each year were from areas where health authorities stopped the school immunisation programme. [27441]

Mr. Horam: The number of notifications of all tuberculosis, excluding chemoprophylaxis, in children under 16 years old in England and Wales is shown below:

1991: 483

1992: 548

1993: 596

1994: 433

1995: 422 (provisional).

BCG immunisation to protect against tuberculosis is recommended for children between the ages of 10 and 14. District health authorities are responsible for the programme in their own areas and information on this is not available centrally.

Dental Provision

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made as to the adequacy of NHS dental provision; and if he will make a statement. [27418]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave my hon. Friend the Member of Taunton (Mr. Nicholson) on 16 April columns, Official Report, 475–76.

Hospital Beds, Doncaster

Mr. Kevin Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many private hospital beds registered with the Doncaster health authority there were within the Doncaster metropolitan borough in each year since 1979; and how many there are currently. [27430]

Mr. Horam: There were 42 beds registered with the Doncaster health authority in private hospitals or clinics within the boundaries of Doncaster metropolitan district in 1993–94 and 36 in 1994–95. Information is not available centrally for years before 1993–94.

HIV

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to keep the general population informed about the continuing risks from HIV. [27398]

Mr. Horam: The Health Education Authority has an on-going programme in this area, including its recent winter campaign aimed at young people.

Factor 8

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research his Department has commissioned into factor 8; where it is based; who does it; what it costs; and when it started; [27711]

(2) what evidence he has evaluated based on research into factor 8 otherwise than in the United Kingdom. [27712]

Mr. Horam: The Department has not commissioned any current research on factor 8. Research findings from abroad, as well as from the United Kingdom, are kept under review when any relevant decision are taken by the Department.

Breast Cancer

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has issued on the recommended waiting time for breast cancer patients between surgery and the start of radiotherapy treatment; and what percentage of patients at the Yorkshire regional centre at Cookridge, Leeds begin within that time. [26490]

Mr. Horam: The Department has not issued guidance on a recommended waiting time for such treatment.

Yorkshire Regional Centre, Cookridge

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many patients were treated at the Yorkshire regional centre in each of the financial years from 1991–92 to 1995–96; and what were the numbers who began their treatment in each three month period from April 1994 to April 1996; [26491]

(2) what is the current waiting list for starting radiotherapy treatment at Cookridge; and what it was on (a) 1 April 1994, (b) 1 October 1994, (c) 1 April 1995 and (d) 1 October 1995; [26492]

(3) how many linear accelerators for breast cancer radiotherapy treatment are available at the Yorkshire regional centre at Cookridge; [24693]

(4) what assessment he has made of the number of additional staff necessary to match the present demands on the service at the Cookridge centre; and what plans he has to meet these needs. [24696]

Mr. Horam: These are matters for United Leeds Teaching Hospitals national health service trust. The hon. Member may wish to contact Mr. David Hall, chairman of the trust for details.

Linear Accelerators

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average waiting time between the completion of a purchasing agreement for a linear accelerator and its commissioning after installation. [24694]

Mr. Horam: The average waiting time between the completion of the purchasing agreement for a linear accelerator and its commissioning after installation is not available centrally. However, factors which could affect the waiting time are the complexity of the particular linear accelerator under consideration and the availability of local scientific and technical expertise.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what requests from the Cookridge centre for linear accelerators are currently under consideration by Northern and Yorkshire Health and when is completion of the purchasing agreement is expected. [24695]

Mr. Horam: An outline business case has been submitted to the national health service executive's Northern and Yorkshire regional office from the United Leeds Teaching Hospitals NHS trust for provision of two linear accelerators, one new simulator and associated building work at Cookridge hospital.

Further consideration is now being given to the business case in the light of the recommendations of the Leeds acute services review, which was published recently.

Xenotransplantation

Mr. Morley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy that no xenotransplantation trials involving human recipients should proceed until an advisory committee on xenotransplantation has been set up. [27886]

Mr. Horam: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health last year established an advisory group on the ethics of xenotransplantation, with the following terms of reference:

"In the light of recent and potential developments in xenotransplantation, to review the acceptability of and ethical framework within which xenotransplantation may be undertaken and to make recommendations."

The advisory group will report by summer 1996. My right hon. Friend will then consider its recommendations and the policy implications.

Read Codes System

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the original proposed date and location of the launch of the Read codes system for coding and classification in the NHS; and what form the launch was planned to take. [27625]

Mr. Horam: The scheduled date for the launch was October 1995, to be held in London. The purpose was to announce the successful completion of the terms projects and to report early results from pilots.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has received from the project board running the Centre for Coding and Classification at Loughborough into the development of Read codes on the length of time it would take to produce a service strength product for use within the NHS; and if he will make a statement. [27626]

Mr. Horam: Version 2 of Read is already in widespread use. Version 3 will reach service strength at different dates for different application areas. For the majority of specialities in the acute sector, service strength is expected by the end of this year. The centre's supervisory board which meets quarterly receives regular reports on all developments and has approved the timetable.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each financial year the expenditure on capital and revenue on the development of Read codes; how many hospitals are participating in the pilot exercise and what their response has been to date; when he proposes to submit the project for independent evaluation; and if he will make a statement. [27829]

Mr. Horam: The cost of developing version 3 of the Read codes is as follows:

	Revenue	Capital
1992–93	£1.1 million	Nil
1993–94	£2.1 million	Nil
1994–95	£0.5 million	Nil
Total	£3.7 million

The nature of the Read terms is that new terms are added regularly through a maintenance process. This aspect of developments costs:

	Revenue	Capital
1994–95	£0.7 million	Nil
1995–96	£0.7 million	Nil
Total	£1.4 million

The version 3 Read code partnership programme commenced in mid-1995 and involved 14 sites—a further 30 sites have expressed interest in participating in the programme. We are aware of an additional 15 non-partnership sites which are using or about to use version 3 of the Read codes. These assessments in use comprise evaluation. An evaluation beyond this is not planned.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the representations from other Government Departments in relation to the urgency of the re-evaluation of the Read codes system and the Centre for Coding and Classification in Loughborough. [27828]

Mr. Horam: Contacts with Government Departments in Scotland and Wales on Read codes are long standing and continuing.

On 7 March, the Welsh Office expressed concerns about the project at Withybush hospital. Several meetings have since taken place and these concerns have been addressed. The project is continuing.

EU Directives

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the directives which have affected his Department in each of the past three years and (a) the United Kingdom legislation introduced as a result of the directives, (b) the United Kingdom legislation which goes beyond the minimum standards set out in the directives and (c) the clauses within each piece of United Kingdom legislation which amplify the minimum standards set out in the directives. [27077]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 29 April 1996]: In the last three years, three directives have affected this Department. These, and the implementing legislation, are as follows:

Directive	Implementing Legislation
93–39 New Licensing system for human medicines	The Medicines for Human Use (Marketing Authorisation etc.) Regulation 1994 (SI 1994 No 3144)
93–42 Council Directive on Medical Devices	Medical Devices Regulations 1995 (SI 1994 No 3017) The Active Implantable Medical Devices (Amendment and Transitional Provisions Regulations) (SI 1995 No 1671)
93–43 Hygiene of foodstuffs	Food safety (General Food Hygiene) Regulations 1995 (SI 1995 No 1763)

None of the implementing legislation amplifies the minimum standards set in the directive.

Abortion

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the change in the abortion rate since 18 October 1995. [27128]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I have been asked to reply.

Data to monitor abortion rates since October 1995 are currently being processed and are not available for release. The December 1995 quarterly monitor on legal abortions performed in England and Wales, which is expected to be published on 27 June, will include new statistics on the number of abortions each month and also comparisons with previous years.

Spongiform Encephalopathy Research

Mr. Shore: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what investigations he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated to establish whether the BSE infective agent can be transmitted directly from a cow to its calf; what was the conclusion of that research; and if he will make a statement. [24472]

Mrs. Browning: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Edinburgh, East (Dr. Strang) on 25 April 1996, Official Report, column 274.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Remploy

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many of the directors of Remploy (a) have a trade union background and (b) were nominated by trade union bodies. [27404]

Mr. Paice: One

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when each of the directors of Remploy was appointed; and when their terms of appointment expire. [27405]

Mr. Paice: The information is as follows:

Remploy Limited: Board appointments and tenure

Name	Title	Start of contract	End of contract
David Heywood	Chairman	9 September 1993	8 September 1996
Anthony Withey	Chief Executive	15 October 1994	4 October 1998
Len Boulton	Executive Director	1 January 1996	30 June 1999
Raymond Fletcher	Executive Director	1 January 1996	30 April 1999
Kenneth Taylor	Executive Director	1 April 1996	31 March 2000
Derek Boothman	Non-Executive Director	10 September 1995	9 September 1998
Roy Jackson	Non-Executive Director	2 September 1995	1 September 1998
John Ramsay	Non-Executive Director	9 September 1995	8 September 1998
Ann Roberts	Non-Executive Director	21 August 1993	20 August 1996
David Winterbottom	Non-Executive Director	12 December 1994	11 December 1997

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many of the directors of Remploy have a background or professional qualification in accountancy. [27409]

Mr. Paice: Four.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to alter the balance of membership of the board of directors of Remploy in order to increase the number of members with a trade union background. [27408]

Mr. Paice: None.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimates she has made of (i) the number of persons who will be disallowed jobseeker's allowance as a result of (a) voluntary unemployment and (b) failure to follow jobseeker's directions, (ii) the number of such persons who will receive reduced benefit and (iii) the number who will have no benefit entitlement in the first two weeks of a jobseeker's allowance sanction. [26439]

Mr. Forth: I have made no such estimates. Decisions on disallowance of jobseeker's allowance will be made by independent adjudication officers.

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to his answer of 29 April, Official Report, column 349, if the training provider companies named in the letter sent to regional offices all have the same parent company. [27845]

Mr. Paice: The letter sent to regional offices included commercially sensitive information. It would be inappropriate for me to make any further comment on the contents of that letter.

Modern Apprenticeships

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many people are presently on modern apprenticeships; and how many have successfully completed a modern apprenticeship since its inception; [27800]

(2) if she will list for each TEC the number of people presently on modern apprenticeship courses; [27805]

(3) how many people are presently studying for a modern apprenticeship for each occupational area; [27804]

(4) if she will list the number of modern apprenticeships in each training and enterprise council for each occupational area. [27806]

Mr. Paice: As the reply will consist of a large amount of data, I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Tottenham B Jobcentre

Mr. Bernie Grant: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what are the implications of the inaccuracy of the April figures for vacancies at the Tottenham B jobcentre for estimates of employment trends in (a) the Tottenham Constituency and (b) nationally; [27881]

(2) when accurate figures for vacancies at the Tottenham B jobcentre will be released; [27880]

(3) what assessment she has made of the accuracy of the figures released on 17 April by the Central Statistical Office in respect of job vacancies at the Tottenham B jobcentre on 8 March; where the vacancies are; and what are the implications of the new computer system for the accuracy of the figures. [27879]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Robert Horne to Mr. Bernie Grant, dated 2 May 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me, in the absence on leave of the Chief Executive, to reply to your questions relating to the figure for Unfilled Vacancies at Tottenham "B" Jobcentre which was published in the Greater London "First Release" on 17 April 1996.

During the changeover to the new Labour Market System (the new Employment Service system for client and vacancy records) an incorrect figure was generated for this office. Clearly the published figure of 1,062 is about 1,000 too high. It has not yet been possible to pinpoint the cause of the error but urgent steps are being taken to do this, and to prevent a similar occurrence in the future. I will write to you again with a fuller explanation when we have it.

In the meantime I would like to apologise for the confusion which this must have caused.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

China

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what steps he is taking to ensure that United Kingdom aid is not used to subsidise coerced abortion and sterilisation in China. [27088]

Mr. Hanley: All UK bilateral aid to China has clear objectives. Our projects aim to guarantee good water supplies, to strengthen transport infrastructure, to assist with China's severe environmental problems, to improve English language teaching and to promote good government. Projects are carefully designed and monitored to ensure that UK aid is used for the purposes intended. No bilateral aid gives any support to China's family planning programmes. Projects and programmes in China funded by the International Planned Parenthood Federation, IPPF, and the United Nations Fund for Population Activities, UNFPA, are subject to equally close supervision. Annual spending by IPPF and UNFPA in China is equivalent to less than 0.8 per cent. of the sum spent annually by China on its family planning programmes.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what specific steps he has taken to ensure that the financial, technical and management resources available through the United Nations Fund for Population Activities do not enable the Chinese authorities to enforce coercive population control programmes more vigorously; and if he will make a statement. [27009]

Mr. Hanley: We regularly discuss with, and advise, senior officials of the UNFPA on matters concerning its current activities and future plans in China. As a result of this dialogue, we are satisfied that the activities that UNFPA currently funds in China do not in any way encourage coercive practices, but have promoted the health and welfare of Chinese women and children, especially in poorer regions of the country. UNFPA's current programme is approaching completion. Any new UNFPA programme in China would be subject to approval by the fund's governing body. If necessary, the UK Government, in partnership with like-minded board members and observers, will use this additional mechanism to influence the outcome of a future decision relating to a new UNFPA programme in China and to ensure that any such programme is fully consistent with the programme of action of the international conference on population and development agreed in Cairo in September 1994.

Dr. Beko Ransome-Kuti

Mr. Jon Owen Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports he has received on the well-being of Dr. Beko Ransome-Kuti, president-elect of the Nigerian Medical Association; and whether he has made representations for his release from prison. [27091]

Mr. Hanley: We are aware of reports that Dr. Beko Ransome-Kuti's health is deteriorating in Katsina prison. Our high commission in Lagos is in regular contact with members of the Ransome-Kuti family and the Nigerian Medical Association. We have raised our concerns about

Dr. Ransome-Kuti, and other human rights activists in detention, with the Nigerian authorities and continue to press for their release.

HIV-AIDS

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what percentage of the UK aid committed for reproductive health in the years 1994 and 1995 was allocated to HIV-AIDS projects in overseas countries. [27093]

Mr. Hanley: Some 21 per cent.—£39.3 million—of total UK aid commitments in 1994 and 1995 for improved reproductive health—£184 million—was allocated specifically for HIV-AIDS projects and programmes, including the provision of condoms. In addition, a significant number of reproductive health projects approved during this period include prevention of HIV transmission as one of several objectives.

SCOTLAND

Cairngorm Funicular Railway

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of the correspondence from the International Union for Conservation of Nature on the Cairngorm funicular; and if he will make a statement. [27090]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend has received three letters from the International Union for Conservation of Nature on the proposal to construct a funicular railway on Cairngorm. He has advised them that the application is currently before Highland Council, as planning authority, but should the matter come before him for determination, their views would be taken into account.

Dunblane School Inquiry

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will place in the Library the daily and weekly transcripts of evidence and copies of submissions made to the Dunblane school inquiry. [27150]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Transcripts of evidence prepared for, and submissions made to, the tribunal are provided for the purpose of assisting the chairman of and parties to the tribunal. It would not be appropriate to lodge these documents in the Library.

Housing

Dr. Godman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will list for each district and islands council the total number of dwelling completions in the categories of (a) housing association for rent, (b) housing association shared ownership, (c) housing association improvement for sale, (d) GRO grant for rent, (e) GRO grant for home ownership and (f) total approved development programme under the Scottish Homes approved development programme; [26538]

(2) if he will detail for each district and islands council area for 1995–96 the total public expenditure within the Scottish Homes approved development programme on (a) housing association for rent, (b) housing association shared ownership, (c) housing association improvement for sale, (d) GRO grant for rent, (e) GRO grant for home ownership and (f) total ADP. [26537]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The information requested is held by Scottish Homes. I have asked its chairman, Mr. John Ward, to write to the hon. Member.

Travelling People

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to his answer of 23 April, Official Report, column 124, if he will list the name or location of each private site, the number of pitches it provides and the district in which it is situated. [27638]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The pitches provided on private sites are located on farms, crofts and touring caravan sites and vary from time to time. I regret that detailed information about their location is not recorded centrally, but I understand that Highland council is currently considering whether to keep such a record.

Mr. J. W. Steven

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the hon. Member for Caithness and Sutherland will receive a substantive reply to his letter dated 4 October 1995 to the Minister for Agriculture, Forestry and the Environment about the case of Mr. J. W. Steven of Philips Main farm, Mey. [27639]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: My noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State has asked his officials to examine very carefully the case to which the hon. Member refers. He will send a full reply as soon as this detailed consideration is complete, and hopes to be in a position to do so within the next fortnight.

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he was consulted in his capacity as a member of the licensing authority prior to the issuing of a letter dated 18 October 1995 relating to oral contraceptives containing desogestrel and gestodene. [26575]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 25 April 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Minister for Health on 25 April, Official Report, column 281, stating that disclosure of such information would be in breach of long-established convention.

TREASURY

Prompt Payment Code

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer which Government Departments have signed up to the Confederation of British Industry's prompt payment code and on what dates; and if he will make a statement. [26615]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The following Government Departments and agencies have signed up to the CBI prompt payment code to date:

Late Payments

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of bills were paid late by his Department in 1995–96. [26125]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 24 April 1996]: This information is being collated by the Department of Trade and Industry and will be published by my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade before the summer recess.

Financial Services Act

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 12 March, Official Report, column 549, about section 47 of the Financial Services Act 1986, who, other than an investor, has a duty to inform the prosecuting authorities when they have identified a breach of section 47; and what policy he has adopted since 1988 to ensure that the Securities and Investments Board, is able to identify breaches of section 47. [26976]

Mrs. Angela Knight: No one has a specific duty to give prosecuting authorities information of the kind described. The Securities and Investments Board has no power to prosecute offences under section 47. Any procedures it has for identifying breaches of that section are operational matters for SIB.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what (a) treaty and (b) other obligations Her Majesty's Government have in respect of attaining the criteria for economic and monetary convergence under phase 2 of the plans for economic and monetary union; and which of those obligations would remain if the United Kingdom did not proceed to phase three of those plans when others did so. [27117]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The four criteria for economic and monetary convergence mentioned in article 109(j) of the EC treaty, and developed further in protocol No. 6 on the convergence criteria, do not prescribe legal obligations. The United Kingdom is under no treaty or other obligations to attain the criteria.

Works of Art

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the membership of the Advisory Committee on Conditionally Exempt Works of Art. [27116]

Mr. Jack: There is no advisory committee on conditional exemption from inheritance tax for works of art. The Inland Revenue seek advice from the keepers and curators of the appropriate national collections about the suitability of any particular items for the purposes of the exemption.

Income Tax

Mr. Forman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what would be the estimated full-year costs at 1996–97 income levels of introducing an income tax structure of two positive rates at 20 per cent. and at 40 per cent., assuming transferable personal allowances of £5,000 per person, existing tax threshold for each of the two positive rates, and the abolition of all other tax expenditures, exemptions and reliefs now allowable against income tax. [27233]

Mr. Jack: The estimated full-year cost of introducing two rates of 20 per cent. for taxable income up to £25,500 and 40 per cent. for taxable income over £25,500 at 1996–97 income levels would be about £3 billion, assuming a personal allowance of £5,000 transferable between spouses and the abolition of all other income tax allowances, and mortgage interest relief, tax relief on employee's contributions to occupational and personal pension schemes, reliefs for tax-exempt special savings accounts, personal equity plans, TESSAs, PEPs and profit-related pay, national savings certificates, employee share schemes and charitable giving.

This estimate does not take into account the substantial behavioural effects which might result from the introduction of such a change; nor does it allow for any subsequent changes to the tax system, such as changes to tax relief on employer's contributions to pension schemes or relief for investment income in pension funds.

European Central Bank

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list each of the proposed responsibilities and functions of the European Central bank, indicating when these powers will enter into force; and if he will list the legal opportunities available to EU member state Governments or other EU institutions to change the statute of the ECB. [27347]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Article 105(1) of the EC treaty provides that the "primary objective of the ESCB"

—The European system of central banks, consisting of the European central bank and participating national central banks—

"shall be to maintain price stability".

It also states that, without prejudice to this objective, the ESCB shall support other Community policies and objectives.

Article 105(2) provides that the basic tasks of the ESCB shall be "to define and implement the monetary policy" of the single currency area,

"to conduct foreign exchange operations . . . to hold and manage the official foreign reserves of member states", and

"to promote the smooth operation of payment systems".

Article 105(4) provides for the European central bank to be consulted and to submit opinions. Article 105(5) states that the ESCB shall "contribute to the smooth conduct of policies pursued by the competent authorities relating to the prudential supervision of credit institutions and the stability of the financial system".

The functions of the ECB in relation to banknotes and coins are prescribed by article 105a.

The statute of the ESCB, forming protocol No. 3 to the EC treaty, makes further provision in relation to functions of the ECB.

Article 1091 prescribes the process for the establishment of the ECB. the European Council in Madrid in December 1995 agreed a timetable for the introduction of the single currency which anticipates the ECB being set up during 1998, and carrying out preparatory work from that date, so that the ESCB can start to fulfil its tasks and meet its objectives from the start of the third stage of economic and monetary union on the date set out in the treaty of 1 January 1999.

Article 41 of the statute of the ESCB provides for certain articles of the statute to be amended by the Council of Ministers, acting by a qualified majority on a unanimous recommendation from the governing council of the ECB and after consulting the Commission, or acting unanimously on a proposal from the Commission and after consulting the ECB. In either case, the assent of the European Parliament would be required. The articles in question deal in particular with the collection of statistical material, central bank accounts, monetary policy instruments and operations, banking and external operations, administration, and the allocation of monetary income and profits. Other changes to the statute would require amendment of the treaty.

Multiple Births

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many sets of (a) twins, (b) triplets, (c) quadruplets, (d) quintuplets and (e) sextuplets were born in England and Wales in each year from 1990 to 1995; and if he will make a statement. [27416]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Available data requested are shown in the table. I will write to the hon. Member when figures for 1995 become available in late May or June.

Maternities in England and Wales with multiple births

	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994
Twins	7,934	8,160	8,314	8,302	8,451
Triplets	201	208	202	234	260
Quadruplets	10	10	8	12	8
Quintuplets	—	2	1	—	—
Sextuplets	—	—	—	1	—

The figures cover both live and stillborn children.

No. 11 Downing Street

Mr. Hall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what charges are made for the use of No. 11 Downing street for charitable or other fund-raising events; and what use is made of the catering and other facilities of No. 11 Downing street at such events. [27780]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: There is no charge for using No. 11 Downing street for charitable or other fundraising events. The costs of providing security cover are met by the Treasury for charitable events only if cover is deemed necessary.

Event organisers are allowed to use the kitchen facilities for catering purposes, as well as the standard function facilities such as the state room, Soane dining room, and ground floor meeting room.

Mr. Hall: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the rules governing the use of No. 11 Downing street for non-official purposes. [27779]

Mr. Clarke: Ministers in this and previous Governments have been allowed to hold non-official functions at No.11 Downing street at their own expense or at the expense of the event organisers. Appropriate arrangements are required for security clearance.

Economic Growth

Mr. Malcolm Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his current estimate of the likely growth of the United Kingdom economy in 1996; what it was before the release of the United Kingdom first quarter growth estimates; and if he will make a statement. [27795]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government's last forecast was set out in the November "Financial Statement and Budget Report."

The good performance of the UK economy is containing and output has risen in every quarter for the past four years. The Government's economic policies are delivering continuing growth, low inflation and rising prosperity.

Commemorative Coins

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans her Majesty's Government have to issue new commemorative coins. [28163]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: To commemorate the 25th anniversary of decimalisation, the Royal Mint will issue 25,000 sets of seven silver proof coins, up to and including the £1 coin. The coins will feature the 1996 designs and will be available as specially packaged sets.

Education Trusts

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated annual increase in revenue from the decision to end tax relief for education trusts established to meet private school fees, from April 1997. [25584]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 19 April 1996]: The Charity Commission has been conducting an inquiry into certain education trusts which operate school fees schemes. It has concluded that the trusts are not truly charitable and proposes to remove them from the register of charities. Where the trusts lose their charitable status they will no longer be entitled to charitable tax reliefs. However, tax relief will not be withdrawn until 1 April 1997 and the Government are reviewing the implications of the change. The revenue yield at stake is likely to be negligible.

Copyright

Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what progress his Department has made towards obtaining a photocopying licence from the Copyright Licensing Agency to ensure compliance with copyright law. [26714]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 25 April 1996]: The Treasury is currently negotiating terms of the photocopying licence prepared by the Copyright Licensing Agency Ltd.

Employment Statistics

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people were in employment in Great Britain in spring 1990; and how many were in employment in winter 1995. [27407]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 1 May 1996]: Information from the labour force survey shows that there were 26,421,000 people in employment in Great Britain at spring 1990. The corresponding number for winter 1995–96 is 25,680,000.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Elections

14. Mr. Bellingham: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he next expects to meet representatives of different political parties to discuss the forthcoming election. [26388]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: My right hon. Friend the Member for Devizes (Mr. Ancram) met representatives from the Progressive Unionist party last Friday and further preliminary consultations with the parties in Northern Ireland are currently being considered. We have undertaken to discuss issues relating to the negotiations and the deliberative forum with the relevant parties.

Tourism

17. Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what estimate he has made of the number of tourists from the United States of America who visited Northern Ireland in 1995. [26391]

Mr. Ancram: The total number of tourists from the United States of America who visited Northern Ireland in 1995 was 83,000 which represents an increase of 54 per cent. on 1994. Within this total, the number of pure holiday visitors increased by 114 per cent. from 22,000 in 1994 to 47,000 in 1995.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

18. Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what further steps he intends to take to deal with BSE in Northern Ireland. [26392]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: The Department of Agriculture will be working to ensure that the substantial schemes already put in place by Government start as soon as possible in Northern Ireland and that available funds reach farmers and meat plants as soon as possible.

Family Policy

19. Mrs. Ann Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on family policy in Northern Ireland. [26394]

Mr. Moss: The Department of Health and Social Services chairs an inter-departmental group on social policy issues in Northern Ireland, and part of its remit is to maximise the contribution of public policies to supporting family life. Specific policy initiatives have been taken in the areas of domestic violence and early years provision. Northern Ireland is represented on the Government's family law and administration working party.

Peace Process

20. Mr. Canavan: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement about the development of the peace process. [26395]

26. Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on progress in the peace process. [26401]

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the proposed election process in Northern Ireland. [26383]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: The Northern Ireland (Entry to Negotiations, etc.) Bill received Royal Assent on 29 April. Later today I expect to make the order directing the holding of elections on 30 May in Northern Ireland which will lead directly to all-party negotiations on 10 June.

25. Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the opportunity for all adults in Northern Ireland to participate in the peace process. [26400]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: All adults who are eligible to vote may do so in the elections on 30 May. They will be able to vote for the party which they wish to represent them in the all-party negotiations and in the forum.

Police White Paper

22. Ms Church: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when the Government intend to publish their White Paper on policing in Northern Ireland. [26397]

Sir John Wheeler: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Islington, North (Mr. Corbyn) earlier today.

Examination Results

24. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pupils in number and as a percentage of their age group achieved grades A to C in the general certificate of secondary education or O-level (a) in the past year, (b) 10 and (c) 20 years ago; and if he will make a statement. [26399]

Mr. Ancram: In 1995–96, 76.3 per cent.—19,263—of pupils in year 12 (aged 15 at the start of the school year) achieved grades A to C in GCSE. Comparable figures for 10 and 20 years ago are not available as the information on qualifications was collected only for school leavers. Comparisons on the qualifications of school leavers show that in 1994–95, 75.5 per cent.—18,516—of school leavers achieved grades A to C at GCSE, 57.6 per cent.—15,468—achieved grades A to C at GCE O-level in 1985–86 and 45.3 per cent.—10,976—achieved grades A to C at GCE O-level in 1974–75.

Marches

27. Mr. Connarty: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what steps he intends to take to minimise tensions between the two communities in Northern Ireland during the coming marching season. [26402]

Sir John Wheeler: The management of parades is a complex issue which requires much patience and hard work for all concerned.

The routing of parades is an operational matter for the Chief Constable and I believe such decisions are best left to him. The RUC handle the issue of parades very well, focussing on negotiating with local residents' groups and parade organisers in an attempt to reach agreement

It should be remembered, however, that, in over 3,000 parades in 1995, in only a small handful was there disorder.

Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what proposals he has to establish a mechanism which would seek community consent for the routing of traditional marches and parades. [26396]

Sir John Wheeler: There are no plans to change present procedures under which the routing of parades is a matter for the police, where necessary after consultation with both march organisers and local people. It is worth remembering that in over 3,000 parades in 1995 only a few resulted in disorder.

Flags

28. Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is his policy in respect of flying the Union Jack flag on Royal Ulster Constabulary police stations. [26403]

Sir John Wheeler: The Chief Constable of the RUC is responsible for regulations on the flying of the Union flag on RUC stations, contained in the RUC code. The Government have no plans to change the policy on flying the Union flag on Government buildings.

Special Housing

29. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what provision is made in the capital allowances for housing purposes in Northern Ireland for special facilities for elderly people and people with disabilities; and if he will make a statement. [26404]

Mr. Moss: The Northern Ireland Housing Executive assesses overall housing need each year, including the needs of the elderly and the disabled. New house building programmes and programmes to improve or adapt existing stock are then drawn up by the executive, and also by housing associations which have concentrated on special housing needs. It is estimated that in 1995–96, some £5 million was spent on capital expenditure for the disabled. In addition some £4 million was paid under the provisions of disabled facilities grant.

Cancer

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many registered cases of cancer there were in Northern Ireland in (a) 1985, (b) 1989, (c) 1992 and (d) 1995; and if he will make a statement. [27031]

Mr. Moss: This information is not presently available. A major initiative by the Northern Ireland cancer registry is currently under way to produce reliable information on diagnosed cancer cases.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Taylor Report (Implementation)

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list by division those football clubs which do not meet the requirements of the Taylor report together with the length of time dispensation has been granted and the target date for meeting the requirements. [26527]

Mr. Sproat: Of the recommendations of the Taylor report which were implemented by the Government, the only outstanding requirement which needs to be met by clubs relates to all-seater stadiums. In the premier league

Bolton do not meet the all-seater requirement and in the first division Stoke City, Port Vale, Reading, Sunderland and Portsmouth do not meet the requirement.

The report recommended that clubs in the FA premier league and the division one of the football league should become all-seater by the start of the 1994 season. However, the Secretary of State is empowered to extend by one year at a time the date for clubs to meet the requirement following consultation with the Football Licensing Authority, which in turn consult the relevant local authorities. Sunderland and Portsmouth have been given two one-year extensions and have until the start of the 1996 season to comply.

Clubs also have three years from the date of their promotion to the first division to develop all-seater stadiums. Consequently, Stoke City and Bolton were promoted in 1993, have until the start of the 1996 season to meet the requirements; and Port Vale and Reading, which were promoted in 1994, have until the start of the 1997 season.

Playing Fields

Mr. Pendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what steps the Government are taking to implement their commitment in "Raising the Game" to protect playing fields in relation to transferring unused British Coal recreational sites to the National Playing Fields Association. [27261]

Mr. Sproat: The Government's objective remains that British Coal land in active use for sport and recreation will be retained for those purposes. I understand that discussions are continuing with British Coal and the Coal Industry Social Welfare Organisation as to how this can be best achieved. Those discussions will be concluded as soon as possible.

Government Procurement (Access)

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what were the results of her Department's review of the first quarter of 1996 into measures to facilitate access to appropriate areas of Government procurement in the light of best practice. [27514]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 1 May 1996]: My Department and its two agencies will shortly commence a monitoring exercise to establish both the number of small and medium businesses invited to tender, and their success rate. If found necessary, this information will allow us to identify measures we can take to ensure that small and medium businesses can fully compete, where appropriate, with large companies.

Small and Medium Businesses

Mrs. Roche: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what proportion of her Department's budget was spent on procurement from small and medium enterprises in 1995–96. [27526]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 1 May 1996]: Neither my Department nor its agencies kept a specific record of a suppliers' size during 1995–96. The information could therefore be obtained only by incurring disproportionate cost. My Department will keep a record of information relating to the size of the companies that it deals with in future.

WALES

Small Businesses

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what initiatives he has taken to assist small businesses in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [26823]

Mr. Richards: The Welsh Office supports small businesses directly and through the activities of a number of development agencies . The main programmes and associated funding in 1995–96 are:

	£ million
Regional Enterprise Grants	1.6
SMART Scheme for innovation	1.8
SPUR Scheme	1.0
Business Growth and Start-Up Programme (operated by TECs)	13.0

The Department's overseas trade services branch also supported eight trade missions to 13 overseas markets in 1995–96, securing immediate orders worth £1.6 million and prospective orders worth £44 million. In addition, under the Department's simplified procedure for regional selective assistance, 53 grant offers to the value of £0.9 million were made to small firms.

The Welsh Development Agency and the Development Board for Rural Wales operate a range of initiatives within their business services programmes which, in 1995–96, attracted estimated expenditure of £4.5 million.

A most important recent initiative is business connect, launched in January by my right hon. Friend and which is designed specifically to help small firms access quickly and effectively the business support network.

Organophosphate Poisoning

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans his Department has to fund a medical centre for Wales to carry out assessment of suspected organophosphate poisoning sufferers; and if he will make a statement. [26985]

Mr. Richards: There are no plans to fund such a centre.

Assessments of suspected organophosphate poisoning can be carried out by general practitioners, who are able to obtain advice on diagnosis and treatment from the Welsh national poisons unit. It is also open to GPs to refer patients to hospital consultants.

Sleeping Policemen

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his policy concerning sleeping policemen; and if he will make a statement. [26867]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Regulations covering the use of sleeping policemen are contained in the Highways (Road Humps) Regulations 1990, the Traffic Calming Act 1992 and the Highways (Traffic Calming) Regulations 1993. Local authorities may consider the use of road humps, where appropriate, along with other measures, when considering traffic calming schemes. The regulations are currently being reviewed to make them less onerous and to remove the need for special authorisation of non-standard road humps. Local authorities will equally need to consider any adverse implications for the local street scene and environment from the provision of humps and similar.

Further Education Funding

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to allocate funding for pilot courses in areas related to public service for women in colleges of further education; and if he will make a statement. [27562]

Mr. Hague: The Further Education Funding Council for Wales is responsible for allocating funding to colleges of further education. For the current year, I have made £176 million available to the council.

Wheelchairs

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are the unresolved issues being considered in respect of extending provision for outdoor powered wheelchairs and a voucher scheme for manual chairs for severely disabled people in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [27374]

Mr. Richards: I am currently seeking to establish the financial and operational implications of my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Health's announcement on 23 February. I hope shortly to be in a position to consider options for improvements to the wheelchair service in Wales.

Respite Care

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on his policy on respite care consequent upon the reform of local government. [26968]

Mr. Richards: Our policy on respite care remains the same. It is for local authorities, health authorities and GP fundholders to determine and meet the needs for respite care in their areas.

Nearly £150 million is available to Welsh local authorities for community care, including respite care, in 1996–97. It is for those authorities to manage their resources to provide the care their local people need.

The chief nursing officer and chief medical officer are also leading an initiative to improve palliative health care in Wales. One of the aims of the initiative is to ensure that everybody in Wales has access to an equally high standard of palliative care, including respite care for both patients and carers.

Council Tax

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 11 March to the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Llwyd), Official Report, column 494, if he will now publish for each of the new unitary authorities and for Wales the (a) estimated council tax levels for each band per two-person household, (b) average council tax for each two-person household, (c) estimated revenue raised from council tax, (d) estimated revenue from all other sources and (e) column (c) expressed as a percentage of the total of columns (c) and (d). [27126]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: I refer to the answer I gave the hon. Member for Meirionnydd Nant Conwy (Mr. Llwyd) on 11 March, Official Report, column 494, and my letter of 1 April providing the information requested. A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

Schoolchildren (Road Accidents)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many schoolchildren were (a) killed and (b) injured in road accidents in each of the last three years for which information is available, in each district and county council in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [27435]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The information requested is given in the following table. The data refer to personal injury road accidents reported to the police and forwarded to the Welsh Office.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to meet the leaders of each of the Welsh unitary authorities to discuss the impact of his financial settlement; and if he will make a statement. [28066]

Mr. Hague: Discussions of this sort are handled through the Welsh Local Government Association. On 22 April, the association announced it was not prepared to talk to me. On 24 April, it requested an early meeting to discuss the funding of local authorities in 1997–98. I will consider that request.

Cancer Study

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when his Department received the report published in 1993 by the Health and Safety Executive "Toxicity Review 28, Cancer Epidemiology in Coal Tar Pitch Volatile Associated Industries"; when it was published; and what action was taken in response to the conclusion about the risk of death from cancers among workers in those industries. [27782]

Mr. Richards: This review was undertaken by the Health and Safety Executive. I understand that it was completed in October 1992 and the report published in 1993. The Welsh Office was not involved in the review and any action in response to the report's conclusions is a matter for the Health and Safety Executive.

Mrs. Clwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when his Department received the report, "Mortality Study of Workers at a Patent Fuel Plant" published by the Institute of Occupational Medicine in 1987 relating to the furnacite plant in Cwnboi; when it was published; what action was taken in response to the report; and if he will make a statement on the incidence of cancer among former employees in the coking industry. [27784]

Mr. Richards: This report was not commissioned by the Welsh Office, and the Department was not sent a copy at the time of its publication.

The Health and Safety Executive is responsible for securing the health, safety and welfare of persons at work. The Wales cancer registry does not hold data on the incidence of cancer among former employees in the coking industry.

I understand that Bro Taf health authority has commissioned an investigation into cancer incidence amongst former employees of the furnacite plant.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits (Pensioners)

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners claimed (a) income support, (b) housing benefit and (c) council tax benefit in each region of the United Kingdom and in each year since 1970. [20184]

Mr. Heald: The available information relates to recipients and is given in the tables.

Notes:

1. Supplementary benefit/income support data are not available for 1985 and 1988. Supplementary benefit information are not available by region prior to 1972. Supplementary benefit information for Northern Ireland is not available prior to 1978.
2. Regions from 1970–1991 are DSS administrative. The boundaries for these regions changed in 1982. Data by Government standard statistical regions are available only from 1992.
3. Housing benefit/community charge benefit is not available by region prior to 1992. Northern Ireland housing benefit/community charge benefit/council tax benefit data are not available.
4. Income support replaced supplementary benefit in 1988.
5. Community charge benefit was replaced by council tax benefit from April 1993.
6. Pensioners have been defined as male claimants aged 65 or over and female claimants aged 60 or over for supplementary benefit/income support purposes. All claimants aged 60 or over have been treated as pensioners for housing benefit/council tax purposes.
7. All numbers are rounded to the nearest thousand. Totals may not sum due to rounding.
8. Housing benefit/council tax benefit figures exclude cases where entitlement was reduced to [illegible] after a non-dependent deduction was made.

Serco Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what contracts his Department and his agencies have with Serco Ltd.; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [26686]

Mr. Burt: The information is not held centrally in the format requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The Department has many local budget holders who purchase services form contractors offering the best value for money and quality of service. There is no central record of purchases categorised by contractor. Such information as is available indicates that the Department has several contracts with Serco totalling between £5 million and £10 million.

Departmental contracts contain a condition which deals with early termination. This allows, if appropriate, for contractors to be compensated for unavoidable costs arising from early termination, and for the Department to be similarly compensated if the termination is by the contractor. The costs would be wholly dependent on the particular circumstances and so no generally applicable cost can be given.

Pensions

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 14 March, Official Report, column 758, what would have been public spending on the state earnings-related pension scheme, assuming the legislation of the early 1980s had remained in force, in 1994–95, 2000–01, 2010–11, 2020–21 and 2030–31 at 1994 prices. [26448]

Mr. Heald: The table gives the estimated state earnings-related pension scheme expenditure assuming that the Social Security Acts of 1986 and 1995 had not been introduced. For comparison, the table also includes the current estimates of SERPS expenditure.

War Pensions Agency

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what assessment he has made of the adequacy of the steps taken by the War Pensions Agency to meet the conditions of its charter standard statement, with particular reference to the answering of calls to its telephone helpline. [26879]

Mr. Heald: This is a matter for Kevin Caldwell, the chief executive of the War Pensions Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from K. C. Caldwell to Sir Cranley Onslow, dated 1 May 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the steps we are taking to meet the conditions of our Charter Standard Statement with particular reference to answering calls to our telephone Helpline.

Our Charter Standard Statement states "If you phone our Helpline we will answer your call within 30 seconds". These standards were set when the number of calls being presented to the Helpline was in the region of 10 to 11,000 per week. Calls are now averaging over 20,000 per week and, in spite of the increase, are being answered within an average of 38 seconds.

To cope with the increase, the answerphone facility (originally installed for messages to be left outside office hours) was expanded to run throughout the working day, for messages to be left when all lines were busy. The volume of messages on the answerphone machine however grew to an unacceptable level, resulting in Helpline advisors spending too much time making call-backs to pensioners rather than being free to answer incoming calls direct.

The machine was being accessed over 800 times daily, but only 40% of callers actually left a message. We conducted a survey of a random sample of callers. A great majority said they would rather wait a little longer in the queuing system than leave a message. We therefore now limit the usage of the answerphone to peak times only during the working day as well as evenings and weekends.

All calls to our Helpline are routed via an automatic call distribution system. The system provides statistical information, to enable Helpline management to measure performance against Charter Standards and to tune the service.

We have recently re-assessed the levels and flow of calls presented to the Helpline, and the staffing required to answer the calls. As a result we are now in the process of recruiting further advisors—part-timers who will help cover the daily peaks. We have also had a technical review of the service performed by the Department's telecommunications experts. Several recommendations have already been implemented and we are considering whether when and how to implement others.

We do regularly review the Helpline service, and as I have described, are making further changes to seek to improve it.

I hope you find my reply helpful.

Benefits (Disabled People)

Mr. Llwyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in each Welsh constituency are currently in receipt of (a) disability allowance, (b) incapacity benefit, (c) attendance allowance, (d) invalid care allowance and (e) severe disablement allowance; and if he will make a statement. [27012]

Mr. Burt: The administration of benefits is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Elfyn Llwyd, dated 1 May 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your Parliamentary Question asking how many people in each Welsh constituency are currently in receipt of (a) Disability Allowance (b) Incapacity Benefit (IB) (c) Attendance Allowance (AA) (d) Invalid Care Allowance (ICA) and (e) Severe Disablement Allowance (SDA); and if he will make a statement.

The information is not available in the format requested. Statistics are not kept which are specific to Parliamentary Constituencies, but are kept for Benefit Agency (BA) Districts. The attached annex gives details for Disability Living Allowance (DLA), Disability Working Allowance (DWA), IB, AA and SDA for the BA Districts in Wales. Information for ICA could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Incomes

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what percentage of the United Kingdom population lives on less than 50 per cent. of the national average income; [27382]

(2) what percentage of the United Kingdom population lives on below national average income. [27381]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Statistics on patterns of household disposable income, for the United Kingdom as a whole, are provided in "Households Below Average Income 1979 to 1992–93", a copy of which is in the Library. The latest edition, published in June 1995 with minor revisions in October 1995, shows that, in 1992–93, 63 per cent. of the population had incomes below the national mean average, before housing costs and 62 per cent. had incomes below the mean, after housing costs. The proportion of the population below 50 per cent. of the mean was 20 per cent. before housing costs and 25 per cent. after housing costs.

Children (Poverty)

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many children in the United Kingdom are classed as living in poverty. [27387]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: There is no simple meaningful way to define or measure poverty. Statistics on patterns of household disposable income for the United Kingdom are provided in "Households Below Average Income 1979 to 1992–93", published in June 1995 with minor revisions in October 1995, a copy of which is in the Library. However, income is not always an accurate guide to living standards, especially among households in the lowest income deciles.

Child Support Agency

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what tendering exercises he plans to initiate in the next three years in relation to the Child Support Agency computer system. [26818]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 1 May 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency Computer System.

The Agency is currently reviewing the information systems it uses. This includes an assessment of the potential impacts of the Departmental Change Programme. Once the whole review process has been concluded and the findings assessed, the Agency will be in a position to make decisions with regard to tendering exercises.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes are to be made to the Child Support Agency computer system in the next three years. [26856]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 1 May 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency Computer System.

Current plans anticipate significant releases to make changes to the Child Support Computer System.

The first will include the facility for automatic calculation of more of the maintenance assessment to speed up the assessment calculation process and assist in improving accuracy. Another will enable the maintenance assessment to be revised to reflect a Departure from the formula. In addition a planned enhancement to our accounting system will improve accuracy and provide our clients with more information about their maintenance accounts. These changes are scheduled to be introduced between now and April 1997.

Plans for changes beyond that are not yet complete.

I hope this is helpful.

Income Support

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list for each month since 1994 the number of former income support recipients who no longer receive income support as a result of the maintenance assessment made by the Child Support Agency exceeding the amount of income support in payment. [26784]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 1 May 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency maintenance assessments.

The table attached shows the monthly breakdown since April 1994 of the volume of former Income Support recipients who no longer receive Income Support as a result of the maintenance assessment made by the Agency exceeding the amount of Income Support in payment.

I hope this is helpful.

Benefit Fraud

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the counter-fraud target for benefit savings each year since 1992; and what have been the outcome data for each of these years. [27659]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table.

£ million

	Fraud savings target	Fraud savings achieved
1991–92	383	446.6
1992–93	460	558.1
1993–94	557	654
1994–95	632.5	717.6
1995–96[1]	1,000	1,048

[1] (to 29 February 1996)

The information provided in relation to fraud savings in 1991–92 corrects that given by my predecessor, my hon. Friend the Member for Wanstead and Woodford (Mr. Arbuthnot), in a written answer to the hon. Member for Stockton, North (Mr. Cook) on 18 May 1995, Official Report, column 329.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Serco Ltd.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what contracts his Department and his agencies have with Serco Ltd.; what is the current cost; when each contract ends; what are the penalties involved should he seek early termination of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [26647]

Mr. Boswell: Centrally held records show that neither the Ministry nor any of its agencies hold contracts with Serco Ltd. However, between March 1994 and March 1996 the Ministry spent £24,801 with Serco on the supply of miscellaneous industrial goods. Consequently, there are no contract end dates or potential penalty fees. Fees for early discharge of contractual arrangements are a matter for negotiation between the Ministry and its suppliers.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has had in relation to BSE from the British Veterinary Association; what reply he is sending; what action he is taking; and if he will make a statement. [27141]

Mrs. Browning: Ministers and officials have had a number of contacts with the British Veterinary Association including a meeting chaired by my hon. Friend the Minister of State with the association and the Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons on 25 April. That was a useful meeting and we have taken into account the points made to him by the association.

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will now develop the Narang test for same-day testing of bovine spongiform encephalopathy in the urine of living cattle and make it compulsory. [23453]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Members for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) and for Pembroke (Mr. Ainger) on 26 April 1996, Official Report, column 325.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will commission research into the possibility of detecting BSE in cattle before they are slaughtered. [25894]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 23 April 1996]: A considerable amount of research into developing a test to detect BSE in cattle before they are slaughtered is already under way. A list of the research was provided in my answer to the hon. Members for Edinburgh, East (Mr. Strang) and for Angus, East (Mr. Welsh) on 1 May 1996.

Slaughterhouse Waste

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his oral statement of 20 March, Official Report, columns 387–96, what research he (a) has commissioned and (b) plans to commission into the effects on the water supply of the disposal of (i) offal and (ii) other waste from slaughtered cattle on agricultural land. [23004]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 26 March 1996]: I refer the hon. Lady to the answer given to her on 16 April, Official Report, column 466.

Food Hygiene

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many regulations involving food hygiene requirements and affecting (a) shops, (b) hotels and restaurants and (c) guest houses have been (i) repealed and (ii) simplified under the Government's deregulation initiative; and if he will make a statement on the efforts made to relax the regulatory regime on smaller-scale establishments. [26909]

Mr. Horam: I have been asked to reply.

Most shops, hotels and restaurants and guest houses whose commercial activities include the preparation and sale of food are covered by the Food Safety (General Food Hygiene) Regulations 1995 SI 1763 and the Food Safety (Temperature Control) Regulations 1995 SI 2200. These two sets of regulations, which came into force in Great Britain on 15 September 1995, simplified and replaced 12 sets of hygiene regulations. These measures form part of the Government's comprehensive food law deregulation plan aimed at reducing the regulatory burdens on businesses at the same time as maintaining safeguards for consumers. Copies of the plan are available in the Library.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 276

SESSION 1995–96

22nd April—2nd May 1996

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
